EXHIBIT 1*

MAIN CASE

In re Highland Capital Management, L.P.*, Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.)

Date	Motion or Claim	Movant / Objector	Summary of Motion or Claim	Status
7/30/20	First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [DI[1] 906] (solely with respect to Proof of Claim No. 146 Filed by HCRE Partners, LLC)	Claimant: HCRE Objector: Highland	HCRE asserted Highland had no interest in SE Multifamily due to mutual mistake and lack of consideration. After engaging in substantial discovery and litigating Highland's motion to disqualify HCRE's counsel due to conflict of interest, HCRE filed a motion to withdraw its proof of claim [DI 3443]. Highland objected [DI 3487]. The Court held a hearing on September 12, 2022 and denied withdrawal of the claim after Dondero would not agree to refrain from filing the same claim in a different forum [DI 3525].	CONCLUDED: Trial was held November 1, 2022. On April 28, 2023, the Court entered its order sustaining Highland's objection to HCRE's claim, and disallowing the claim [DI 3767].
9/23/20	Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with (a) Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP LLC (Claim No. 23), (b) Joshua N. Terry and Jennifer G. Terry (Claim No. 156), and (c) Acis Capital Management, L.P. (Claim No. 159) and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [DI 1087]	Movant: Highland Objectors: Dondero	Acis filed a claim for at least $75 million. Acis's claim resulted from an involuntary bankruptcy initiated when Dondero refused to satisfy an arbitration award and instead fraudulently transferred assets to leave Acis judgment proof. Highland settled for an allowed Class 8 claim of $23 million and approximately $1 million in cash. t Dondero objected to the settlement [DI 1121] alleging it was unreasonable and constituted vote buying. The Acis Settlement Motion was approved and Dondero's objection was overruled [DI 1302].	CONCLUDED: Dondero appealed [DI 1347]. On March 18, 2022, this Court dismissed the appeal as constitutionally moot [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:20-cv-03390-X, DI 25].
11/18/20	Motion of the Debtor Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 105(a) and 363(b) for Authority to Enter into Sub-Servicer Agreements [DI 1424]	Movant: Highland Objectors: Dondero	Highland filed a motion seeking to retain a sub-servicer to assist in its reorganization consistent with the proposed plan. Dondero alleged the sub-servicer was not needed, was too expensive, and would not be subject to Bankruptcy Court jurisdiction [DI 1447].	CONCLUDED: Dondero withdrew his objection [DI 1460] after forcing Highland to incur costs responding [DI 1459]
11/19/20	James Dondero's Motion for Entry of an Order Requiring Notice and Hearing for Future Estate Transactions Occurring Outside of the Ordinary Course [DI 1439]	Movant: Dondero	Dondero alleged Highland sold assets in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 363 and without providing Dondero a chance to bid. Dondero requested an emergency hearing [DI 1443]. Dondero filed this motion despite having agreed to the Protocols governing such sales.	CONCLUDED: Dondero withdrew this motion [DI 1622] after Highland and the Committee were forced to incur costs responding and preparing for trial [DI 1546, 1551].
12/8/20	Motion for Order Imposing Temporary Restrictions on Debtor's Ability, as Portfolio Manager, to Initiate Sales by Non-Debtor CLO Vehicles [DI 1522, 1528]	Movants: Advisors[2] Funds	Movants sought to prevent Highland from causing the CLOs to sell assets without Movants' consent. Movants provided no support for this position, which directly contradicted the terms of the CLO Agreements. The Motion was filed notwithstanding the Protocols governing such sales. Movants requested an emergency hearing [DI 1523].	CONCLUDED: The motion was denied [DI 1605] and was characterized as "frivolous."
12/23/20	Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with HarbourVest (Claim Nos. 143, 147, 150, 153, 154) and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [DI 1625]	Movant: Highland Objectors: Dondero Trusts[3] CLOH	HarbourVest asserted claims in excess of $300 million in connection with an investment in a fund indirectly managed by Highland for, among other things, fraud and fraudulent inducement, concealment, and misrepresentation. Highland settled for an $80 million allowed Class 8 and 9 claim and the transfer of certain assets to a Highland subsidiary. Dondero and the Trusts alleged the settlement was unreasonable; was a windfall to HarbourVest; and vote buying [DI 1697, 1706]. CLOH argued the settlement could not be effectuated under the operative documents [DI 1707]. After analyzing Highland's response, CLOH publicly withdrew its objection. The settlement was approved and the remaining objections were overruled [DI 1788].	APPEAL: The Trusts appealed [DI 1870]. This Court affirmed and dismissed Dugaboy's appeal for lack of standing [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-00261-L, DI 38]. Dugaboy appealed [DI 40]. Oral argument held May 1, 2023. Appeal is sub judice. CLOH and DAF separately filed a complaint in this Court alleging, among other things, the settlement was a breach of duty and a RICO violation. See infra.

All capitalized terms used but not defined herein have the meanings given to them in Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Memorandum of Law in Support of Its Motion to Deem the Dondero Entities Vexatious Litigants and for Related Sanctions.

Date	Motion or Claim	Movant / Objector	Summary of Motion or Claim	Status
1/14/21	Motion to Appoint Examiner Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1104I [DI 1745, 1752]	Movants: Trusts Dondero [DI 1756]	Movants filed an emergency motion for the appointment of an examiner after commencement of Plan solicitation and 14 months postpetition. [DI 1748].	CONCLUDED: The motion was denied [DI 1960].
1/20/21	James Dondero's Objection to Debtor's Proposed Assumption of Executory Contracts and Cure Amounts Proposed in Connection Therewith [DI 1784]	Objector: Dondero	Dondero objected to Highland's proposed assumption of two limited partnership agreements [DI 1719].	CONCLUDED: Dondero withdrew his objection [DI 1876] after forcing Highland to incur costs responding.
1/22/20	Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization [DI 1472]	Objectors: Dondero [DI 1661] Trusts [DI 1667] Senior Employees [DI 1669] Advisors & Funds [DI 1670] HCRE [DI 1673] CLOH [DI 1675] NexBank Entities [DI 1676]	All objections to the Plan were consensually resolved prior to the confirmation hearing except for the objections of the Dondero Entities and the U.S. Trustee. The U.S. Trustee did not press its objection at confirmation. All objections were overruled and the Confirmation Order was entered. The Confirmation Order specifically found that Dondero threatened to "burn the place down" if his case resolution plan was not accepted.	APPEAL: Dondero, the Trusts, the Advisors, and the Funds appealed [DI 1957, 1966, 1970, 1972]. On August 19, 2022, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the Confirmation Order in all respects except with respect to the exculpation. [Case No. 21-10449, DI 00516439341]. On September 2, 2022, the Funds petitioned for rehearing requesting the Fifth Circuit limit the Gatekeeper. On September 7, 2022, the Fifth Circuit granted rehearing but did not grant the requested relief. [DI 516462923]. Highland moved to conform the Plan on September 9, 2022. [DI 3503]. The Dondero Entities objected [DI 3539, 3540, 3551] requesting the Bankruptcy Court limit the Gatekeeper. On February 27, 2023, the Court issued its order granting motion to conform [DI 3672]. The Advisors appeal of the order was certified for direct appeal to the Fifth Circuit. [Case No. 23-10534]. Briefing in process. Highland and the Dondero Entities filed petitions for writ of cert. to SCOTUS on issues of (a) standard of care and (b) exculpation provision in Plan. Case No. 22-631 (Jan. 5, 2023); Case No. 22-669 (Jan. 16, 2023). Solicitor General was invited to file a brief in Supreme Court cases expressing the views of the United States.
1/24/21	Application for Allowance of Administrative Expense Claim [DI 1826]; [rel. Adv. Proc. No. 21-3010-sgj]	Movants: Advisors	The Advisors sought an administrative expense claim for approximately $14 million alleging they overpaid Highland under certain Shared Services Agreements ("SSAs") and Payroll Reimbursement Agreements ("PRAs"). Highland brought a breach of contract claim against the Advisors for failure to pay amounts owed under the SSAs and PRAs [AP No. 21-3010, DI 1]. The claims were consolidated under AP 21-3010 since both arose from the SSAs and PRAs. After a two-day trial, the Court granted Highland's breach of contract claim, denied the Advisors' admin claim. [AP No. 21-3010, DI 124], and entered judgment [AP No. 21-3010, DI 126].	APPEAL: The Advisors' appeal [AP. No. 21-3010, DI 128] was docketed to Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:22-cv-02170. Briefing on appeal is complete, and matter is sub judice.

Date	Motion or Claim	Movant / Objector	Summary of Motion or Claim	Appeal
3/18/21	James Dondero, Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., NexPoint Advisors, L.P., The Dugaboy Investment Trust, The Get Good Trust, and NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC, f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC, a Delaware Limited Liability Company's Motion to Recuse Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455 [DI 2060]	Movants: Dondero Advisors Trusts HCRE	In March 2021, the Dondero Entities filed a motion to recuse Judge Jernigan [DI 2060, 2061, 2062] (the "Original Recusal Motion"). Judge Jernigan denied the motion finding, among other things, it was untimely and failed to show bias. [DI 2083] (the "Recusal Order"). The Movants appealed [DI 2149, 2169, 2203]. In February 2022, this Court entered its Memorandum Opinion and Order [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-00879-K, DI 39], finding the Recusal Order was a non-appealable interlocutory order. Notwithstanding this Court's Order, in July 2022, Movants filed a supplemental motion to recuse in the Bankruptcy Court, [DI 3470] (the "Supplemental Recusal Motion"), requesting entry of a final, appealable recusal order. On September 1, 2022, the Bankruptcy Court denied the Supplemental Recusal Motion finding it "procedurally improper," [DI 3479], but invited Movants to file (i) a "simple motion" seeking an amended order removing the "reservation of rights" and/or (ii) a new motion to recuse in front of the Bankruptcy Court. On September 27, 2022, Movants filed a renewed motion to recuse [DI 3541] (the "Renewed Recusal Motion"), and then on October 17, 2022, filed an amended renewed motion to recuse, [DI 3570]. On March 6, 2023, the Bankruptcy Court entered its order denying the amended renewed motion to recuse [DI 3676].	CONCLUDED: Movants filed a petition for writ of mandamus on April 4, 2023 to the District Court [Case No. 21-cv-879, Docket no. 41]. The next day, the District Court entered an order directing the clerk to unfile the mandamus petition [Docket no. 42].
4/14/21	Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [DI 2196]	Movant: Highland Objector: HCRE [DI 2278]	After Wick Philips refused to withdraw, Highland moved to disqualify them from serving as counsel to HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Proof of Claim on the ground that Wick Phillips jointly represented Highland and HCRE (and others) in the negotiation, drafting and formation of the contracts at issue and therefore was conflicted.	CONCLUDED: In December 2021, the Bankruptcy Court granted the motion disqualifying Wick Phillips from serving as counsel to HCRE [DI 3106]
4/15/21	Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [DI 2199]	Movant: Highland	UBS) asserted claims against Highland in excess of $1 billion arising from two Highland-managed funds' breach of contract. The settlement resolved over ten years of litigation but had to be renegotiated after Highland discovered Dondero-controlled Highland had caused the funds to fraudulently transfer over $300 million in assets to Sentinel Reinsurance Ltd. ("Sentinel"), a Cayman-based entity controlled by Dondero and Ellington, in 2017 to thwart UBS's ability to collect on its judgment. Only Dondero [DI 2295] and Dugaboy [DI 2268, 2293] objected. The UBS settlement was approved in May 2021 [DI 2389].	APPEAL: The Dondero Entities appealed [DI 2398]. In September 2022, this Court affirmed the Bankruptcy Court's settlement order, [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01295-X, DI 34], finding, in pertinent part, that in their' "zeal to bamboozle this Court," they omitted critical facts. Id. at 12. In October 2022, the Dondero Entities appealed this Court's order to the Fifth Circuit. USCA Case No. 22-10983. Oral argument held June 5, 2023. Matter is sub judice.

4/23/21	Motion for Modification of Order Authorizing Appointment of James P. Seery, Jr. Due to Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction [DI 2242]	Movants: DAF CLOH	Over 9 months after its entry and post-confirmation of the Plan, DAF and CLOH filed a motion to modify the July Order, alleging the Bankruptcy Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. Highland opposed the motion [DI 2311] arguing it was a collateral attack barred by res judicata, among other things. The Committee joined the opposition [DI 2315]. The Motion was denied on June 25, 2021 [DI 2506]. DAF and CLOH appealed, [DI 2513], but moved to stay the appeal pending the Fifth Circuit's determination of the appeal of the Confirmation Order [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01585-S, DI 10]. This Court granted the stay motion [DI 21] and, in connection with the Partially Opposed Motion for Extension of Time to File Appellants" Opening Brief, directed the appellants to file their opening brief within 14 days of resolution of the Confirmation Order [DI 19], which they failed to do.	APPEAL: In September 2022, after the Fifth Circuit affirmed the Confirmation Order, Highland moved for summary affirmance [DI 23]. Appellants opposed [DI 24], and filed a motion to reopen the appeal [DI 25], which Highland opposed [DI 27]. Because they missed the deadline to file their opening brief, Appellants also filed a belated motion for an extension of time [DI 29], claiming "excusable neglect." In November 2022, this Court ordered the appeal remain abated pending resolution of the DAF parties' Fifth Circuit appeal of the order holding them in contempt [USCA Case No. 22-11036, DI 34], on the ground that it was a "related case."

The Bankruptcy Court entered an order to show cause [DI 2255] and set an in-person hearing for June 8, 2021. On August 4, 2021, following briefing and an evidentiary hearing, the Court held Dondero, CLOH, DAF and others (the "Contemnors") in contempt of court [DI 2660].	APPEAL: In August 2021, the Contemnors appealed [DI 2712, 2713, 2758]. In September 2022, this Court affirmed the Bankruptcy Courts order in relevant part [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01974-X, DI 49]. Highland [DI 2341] and the Committee [DI 2343] opposed the motion. Following a hearing in June 2021 [DI 2442], the motion was adjourned and later denied as moot after Highland's Plan became effective. [DI 2812].	APPEALS: In August 2022, following the Trusts' appeal, [DI 2840], this Court dismissed the appeal as constitutionally moot [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-02268-S, DI 21]. The Dondero Entities appealed to the Fifth Circuit. [USCA Case No. 22-10831]. In February 22023, the Fifth Circuit issued its order and judgment affirming the District Court [USCA Case No. 22-10831, Docket Nos. 46, 47].
6/25/21	Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order (i) Authorizing the (a) Creation of an Indemnity Subtrust and (b) entry into an Indemnity Trust Agreement and (ii) Granting Related Relief [DI 2491]	Movant: Highland	Highland filed a motion seeking authority to create an indemnity trust to secure the Reorganized Highland, Claimant Trust, and Litigation Trust's indemnification obligations [DI 2491]. Dondero, HCMFA, NPA, and Dugaboy objected [DI 2563] arguing it was an improper plan modification. A hearing was held in July 2021 and Highland's motion was granted [DI 2599].	APPEAL: After the Dondero Entities appealed [DI 2673], this Court affirmed the Bankruptcy Court's order. [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01895-D, DI 45]. The Dondero Entities appealed. [USCA Case No. 22-10189]. In January 2023, the Fifth Circuit affirmed this Court's order. 6/30/22	Motion for Determination of the Value of the Estate and Assets Held by the Claimant Trust [DI 3382]	Movant: Dugaboy Objector: Highland	Dugaboy moved for a determination of the current value of the estate and an accounting of its assets available for distribution, arguing it was somehow in the money and therefore had appellate standing and rights (the "Valuation Motion") [DI 3382]. Highland objected. [DI 3465]. After Dugaboy amended its Valuation Motion in September 2022 [DI 3533, 3535], Highland filed its reply in further opposition [DI 3614].	STATUS: During a hearing held in November 2022, the Court questioned whether the relief could only be obtained through an adversary proceeding and requested additional briefing [DI 3625]. After reviewing the supplemental briefs, the Court ruled an adversary proceeding was required [DI 3645]. On May 10, 2023, Dugaboy and Hunter Mountain filed a complaint seeking declaratory relief as to the value of the Claimant Trust assets and their interest therein [AP No. 23-03038-sgj, Docket No. 1]. The timing of Highland's motion to dismiss must be fixed.

Seery, Jr., Farallon, Stonehill	Hunter Mountain seeks leave of the Bankruptcy Court to file a complaint against defendants Seery, Stonehill, and Farallon alleging both direct and derivative claims on behalf of Highland of insider trading and breach of fiduciary duty. The proposed complaint alleges that Seery engaged in a quid pro quo with Stonehill and Farallon by which Seery put Stonehill and Farallon on the Oversight Board in exchange for a "rubber stamp" of Seery's compensation as CEO of Highland.	Trial was held June 8, 2023, and the matter is under advisement.
6/15/23	The Dugaboy Investment Trust's Motion to Preserve Evidence and Compel Forensic Imaging of James P. Seery, Jr.'s Phone [Docket No. 3802]	Movant: Dugaboy	Dugaboy seeks to preserve the ESI contained on Seery's iPhone and to permit the recoveryof his text messages. The basis for this motion was information learned through discovery in a separate action brought by Scott Ellington, Highland's former general counsel, against a former Highland employee, in which Ellington subpoenad Highland's independent directors and bankruptcy counsel, as well as other parties to the bankruptcy case, requiring a motion for a protective order. See infra.	The timing of Highland's objection must be fixed.

Date	Motion / Complaint	Plaintiff	Summary of Proceeding	Status
12/7/20	Plaintiff Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Emergency Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction against Mr. James Dondero [DI 2]	Movant: Highland	In December 2020, after Dondero interfered with the management of the estate and threatened certain employees, Highland commenced an adversary proceeding and sought [DI 2] and obtained a TRO [DI 10] and a Preliminary Injunction [DI 59] against Dondero prohibiting him from interfering with Highland's estate and enjoining him from engaging in other wrongful conduct.	CONCLUDED: Dondero appealed to this Court [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01590-N] (which declined to hear the interlocutory appeal), and filed a petition for writ of mandamus from the Fifth Circuit. Ultimately, a consensual injunction was entered [DI 182] and the writ of mandamus was withdrawn.
1/7/21	Plaintiff's Motion for an Order Requiring Mr. James Dondero to Show Cause Why He Should Not Be Held in Civil Contempt for Violating the TRO [DI 48]	Movant: Highland	In late December 2020, Highland discovered Dondero had violated the TRO by, among other things, again interfering with the management of the estate and conspiring with Highland's then-general counsel and assistant general counsel to coordinate offensive litigation against Highland. An extensive evidentiary hearing was held in March 2021, and on June 7, 2021, the Bankruptcy Court entered an order finding Dondero in contempt of court [DI 190].	APPEALS: Dondero appealed [DI 212]. In August 2022, this Court affirmed in substantial part [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01590-N, DI 42]. Dondero appealed to the Fifth Circuit [USCA Case Number 22-10889]. These letters reiterated the arguments made by these parties in their December motion that the Bankruptcy Court denied as "frivolous." Highland sought to prevent the Dondero Entities from improperly interfering in the management of the estate. In January 2021, the parties agreed to entry of a TRO [DI 20] and later a final disposition of the matter pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 9019 [DI 2589].	CONCLUDED: In September 2021, the Court entered its order approving the settlement [DI 2829].

Date	Motion / Complaint	Plaintiff	Summary of Proceeding	Status
1/22/21	Complaint for (i) Breach of Contract and (ii) Turnover of Property of the Debtor's Estate [DI 1]	Plaintiff: Highland	After Dondero and four affiliates (HCMFA, NPA, HCMS, HCRE) refused to satisfy over $60 million on certain promissory notes, Highland filed collection actions against each Dondero Entity. See AP Nos. 21-03003-sgj; 21-03004-sgj; 21-03005-sgj; 21-03006-sgj; 21-03007-sgj. Three months after the complaint was filed, the Dondero Entities moved to withdraw the reference. Following a hearing in May 2021, the Bankruptcy Court recommended the Bankruptcy Court adjudicate pre-trial matters, including consideration (but not determination) of dispositive motions. This Court adopted the R&Rs and the actions were later consolidated. Dondero amended his answer to assert, among other things, that he and his sister, Nancy Dondero, entered an undisclosed oral agreement claiming the notes would be forgiven upon fulfillment of certain conditions subsequent (the "Alleged Agreement Defense"). All Dondero Entities (except, initially, HCMFA) adopted the Alleged Agreement Defense. Dondero, NPA, and HCRE also asserted Highland "negligently" caused their defaults under the term notes by not effectuating the payments on their behalf. In support of this "negligence" defense, the Dondero Entities moved to extend expert discovery to litigate the legal issue of whether Highland had an affirmative "duty" to effectuate payments on their behalf. The Bankruptcy Court denied the motion, finding, in pertinent part, that expert testimony on legal issues was improper. The Dondero Entities sought improperly sought reconsideration in this Court. HCMFA contended the HCMFA notes were "void" or "unenforceable" due to "mutual mistake," and specifically, that Waterhouse, HCMFA's treasurer and Highland's former CFO, lacked authority to execute the notes and signed them by "mistake" ("HCMFA's Mistake Defense"). HCMFA subsequently sought leave to assert that Waterhouse did not sign the HCMFA notes at all. After a hearing on HCMFA's motion for leave, the Bankruptcy Court denied the motion on the ground that the proposed additional defense (that Waterhouse did not sign the notes) was futile. HCMFA again improperly sought reconsideration in this Court. In December 2021, Highland moved for Partial Summary Judgment. Following a hearing in April 2022, the Bankruptcy Court issued its Report & Recommendation (the "R&R"), recommending Partial Summary Judgment in favor of Highland. In the R&R, the Bankruptcy Court found no reasonable trier of fact could find the Alleged Agreement existed, the Alleged Agreement Defense did not pass the "straight-face test," and "there was a complete lack of evidence" supporting the Alleged Agreement Defense. The Bankruptcy Court also found no reasonable trier of fact could believe HCMFA's Mistake Defense ("the 'Mutual Mistake' defense—like the 'oral agreement' defense asserted by the other Note Maker Defendants—is farfetched, to say the least, especially in the context of a multi-billion company with perhaps the world's most iconic and well-known public accounting firm serving as its auditors."). In August 2022, Highland filed a notice of attorneys' fees and backup documentation in support of the proposed judgments. The Dondero Entities objected. Highland responded in September 2022. The Dondero Entities then filed an unauthorized reply in support of their objection. Highland moved to strike on the grounds it was not permitted under Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9033 or the parties' Stipulation. Highland then moved to supplement its backup documentation to include two invoices inadvertently omitted. The Dondero Entities filed a meritless objection which was overruled. In November 2022, the Bankruptcy Court issued a supplemental R&R overruling the Dondero Entities' objections to the Proposed Judgment. The Dondero Entities objected and Highland responded.	CONCLUDED: On July 6, 2 023, the District Court entered an order adopting the Bankruptcy Court's R&R, granting partial summary judgment on breach of the notes and entering judgment [Case No. 3:21-cv-00881-X, DI 128]. The Court also entered orders finding moot (a) Highland's motion to Strike Defendants' Unauthorized Reply and (b) NPA/HCMS/HCRE's objection to the Bankruptcy Court's order denying the motion to extend expert discovery [DI 135].

HCMFA NOTES LITIGATION II Highland Capital Management, L.P. v. Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., Adv. Proc. No. 21-03082-sgj (Bankr. N.D. Tex.)
Date	Motion / Complaint	Plaintiff	Summary of Proceeding	Status
11/9/21	Complaint for (i) Breach of Contract and (ii) Turnover of Property of the Debtor's Estate [DI 1]	Plaintiff: Highland	In November 2021, Highland commenced another collection action against HCMFA for breach of two additional promissory notes (the "Pre-2019 Notes") that were subject to a prepetition standstill agreement that Dondero entered into with himself. This action was consolidated with the main litigations. HCMFA adopted the Alleged Agreement Defense asserted in the main litigation. During discovery, Dondero was forced to change story his story yet again, stating he, not his sister, entered into the Alleged Agreement. Highland moved for summary judgment. After a hearing, the Bankruptcy Court issued its Report & Recommendation recommending summary judgment be entered against HCMFA, finding, "[t]he Alleged Oral Agreement Defense appears to be a 'cut-and-paste' of the same alleged 'oral agreement' defense that was ultimately asserted in the Five Earlier-Filed Note Actions by four of the five Note Maker Defendants (all but HCMFA)" and the defense "morphed" as the five earlier-filed Main Note Litigation progressed, "The only summary judgment evidence submitted by HCMFA in support of its Alleged Oral Agreement Defense is the conclusory, self-serving, unsubstantiated declarations of Dondero and his sister regarding the existence of the Alleged Oral Agreements." HCMFA objected to the R&R in this Court and to Highland's proposed judgment in Bankruptcy Court. The Bankruptcy Court issued its supplemental R&R recommending this Court overrule HCMFA"s objections to the proposed judgment. HCMFA filed the same objection to the supplemental R&R in this Court, and Highland responded.	CONCLUDED: On July 6, 2 023, the District Court entered an order adopting the Bankruptcy Court's R&R, granting summary judgment on breach of the notes and entering judgment [Case No. 3:21-cv-00881-X, DI 133].

UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch vs. Highland Capital Management L.P., Adv. Pro. No. 21-03020-sgj (Bankr. N.D. Tex.)
Date	Motion / Complaint	Plaintiff	Summary of Proceeding	Status
3/31/21	Original Complaint for Injunctive Relief [DI 3]	Plaintiff: UBS	In early 2021, Highland discovered certain former employees under Dondero's direction caused certain entities to transfer $300 million in face amount of cash and securities to Sentinel to avoid the judgment in favor of UBS. UBS then sought to enjoin Highland from allowing funds under its management to make transfers to Sentinel, its affiliates, or transferees pending decision as to whether assets were fraudulently transferred. On June 8, 2022, Highland filed motion to withdraw its answer and consent to judgment [DI 169]	CONCLUDED: On August 23, 2022, the Court granted Highland's motion to withdraw the answer, and a permanent injunction was issued [DI 185]. At the hearing, the Court said it would assess the evidence to determine whether a criminal referral was warranted.

Date	Motion / Complaint	Plaintiff	Summary of Proceeding	Status
4/12/21	Original Complaint	Plaintiffs: DAF CLOH	The Dondero Entities filed their original complaint in April 2021 in this Court alleging Highland and Seery violated SEC rules, breached fiduciary duties, engaged in self-dealing, and violated RICO in connection with its settlement with HarbourVest [Dist. Ct. Case No. 21-cv-00842-B]. The Dondero Entities brought this complaint even though CLOH previously withdrew its objection to the HarbourVest settlement. Highland believes the complaint is frivolous and represents a collateral attack on the order approving the HarbourVest settlement. On May 19, 2021, Highland filed a motion to enforce the reference and have the case referred to the Bankruptcy Court [DI 22]. Highland also filed a motion to dismiss the complaint (the "Original MTD") [DI 26]. After the motions were briefed, the Dondero Entities moved to stay the proceeding pending resolution of the confirmation appeal [DI 55] (the "First Stay Motion"). Highland opposed the First Stay Motion. In September 2021, the Court entered an order enforcing the reference [DI 64], and this matter was sent to the Bankruptcy Court under Adv. Proc. No. 21-3067. On November 18, 2021, five days prior to the hearing on the Original MTD, the Dondero Entities filed an amended motion to stay the proceedings pending resolution of the appeal of the confirmation order [DI 69] (the "Second Stay Motion"), in which they reiterated the arguments in the First Stay Motion, and attached a motion to withdraw the reference [id. at Exhibit A], which reiterated the same arguments in the Dondero Entities' opposition to Highland's motion to enforce the order of reference. In March 2022, the Court dismissed the action on collateral and judicial estoppel grounds [DI 100]. The Dondero Entities appealed and that appeal was consolidated with their appeal of the order denying their motion for a stay [3:21-cv-03129-B]. On September 2, 2022 [DI 28], this Court reversed the Bankruptcy Court's finding that Plaintiffs' claims were barred by collateral estoppel. On judicial estoppel, this Court affirmed the Bankruptcy Court's finding that the first two elements were satisfied but remanded to determine if CLOH's inconsistent position was "inadvertent." Highland filed its renewed Motion to Dismiss on October 14, 2022 [DI 122, 123]. On November 18, 2022, Plaintiffs filed a renewed motion to withdraw the reference [DI 128].	APPEALS: A hearing on both motions was held on January 25, 2023. On February 6, 2023, the Bankruptcy Court issued its R&R, recommending denial of Plaintiffs' renewed motion to withdraw the reference [DI 158], and, on February 21, 2023, the Dondero Entities objected to the R&R [Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:22-cv-02802-S, DI 3]. The R&R is pending final decision of the District Court. On June 25, 2023, the Bankruptcy Court issued its order granting Highland's renewed motion to dismiss [AP No. 21-03067-sgj, DI 167]. On June 27, 2023, DAF/CLOH appealed the order dismissing the action [DI 168]. The appeal is docketed to Dist. Ct. Case No. 3:23-cv-01503-G.

Ct. Case No. 3:21-cv-01710-N, DI 1]. DAF's allegations duplicated allegations Dugaboy made in proofs of claim filed in the Bankruptcy Court and in its complaint filed in this Court. DAF never served the Complaint but filed a motion to stay (which was also not served) pending appeal of the confirmation order [DI 6]. In September 2021, the Court stayed the proceeding [DI 7]. Highland then voluntarily appeared, and moved for reconsideration of the stay order [DI 8] and to dismiss [DI 11]. In May 2022, the Court lifted the stay and referred the case to the Bankruptcy Court. Highland filed its amended motion to dismiss in May 2022 [DI 19, 20] arguing the complaint asserted time-barred administrative expense claims. In September 2022, following a hearing, the Court dismissed the complaint as time-barred [DI 42, 43].	CONCLUDED: DAF filed a notice of appeal on October 5, 2022 [Case No. 3:22-cv-02280-S] but on February 21, 2023 (the day its opening brief was due) notified counsel it no longer intended to pursue it. A joint stipulation dismissing the appeal with prejudice was filed on February 22, 2023 [DI 9].

Case No. 3:21-cv-01169-N, DI 1]. PCMG is owned and controlled by Dondero, and held less than a 0.05% interest in the investment vehicle. Highland believed the complaint was frivolous. PCMG never served the Complaint but filed a motion to stay (which was also not served) pending appeal of the confirmation order [DI 6]. In September 2021, the Court stayed the proceeding [DI 7]. Highland then voluntarily appeared, and moved for reconsideration of the stay order [DI 8] and to dismiss [DI 11]. PCMG withdrew the complaint in July 2022 after forcing Highland to incur substantial expense litigating the matter.	CONCLUDED: An amended Stipulation of Dismissal of Adversary Proceeding (with prejudice) [DI 27] was filed on August 1, 2022.

OTHER DONDERO-RELATED LITIGATION
Date	Parties	Summary of Litigation	Status
2009	UBS, Highland, Multiple Highland Entities	In 2008, two funds managed by Highland breached their contractual obligations to UBS by failing to meet a margin call. UBS filed suit in New York Supreme Court in 2009. After a decade of litigation, UBS secured a $1 billion plus judgment against the two funds and sought to hold Highland, among others, liable as an alter ego. Judgment, Index No. 650097/2009, Docket No. 646 (N.Y. Sup. Feb. 10, 2020). UBS and the Dondero Entities continue to litigate. UBS filed a turnover motion in February 2023 seeking to hold Dondero and Scott Ellington, his long-time general counsel, liable for the full $1 billion plus judgment. Special Turnover Petition, Index No. UNASSIGNED, Docket No. 142 (N.Y. Sup. Feb. 8, 2023).	This matter is currently being litigated.
2018	Joshua Terry, Acis, Highland, Neutra, Ltd., HCLOF	After Joshua Terry secured an $8 million arbitration award against Acis, Dondero caused the stripping of Acis's assets to make it judgment proof. Terry subsequently filed an involuntary bankruptcy petition. Case No. 18-30264-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.). Through Acis's confirmed plan of reorganization, Terry became Acis's sole owner. The Acis bankruptcy was marked by extremely acrimonious litigation and multiple adverse credibility findings regarding Dondero and other Highland employees (acting at Dondero's direction). In the Acis bankruptcy, the Bankruptcy Court issued: Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee's Third Amended Joint Plan [DI 827] Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and Order Granting Final Approval of Disclosure Statement and Confirming the Third Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management LP and Acis Capital Management GP LLC, as Modified [DI 829] Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and Order Granting Final Approval of Disclosure Statement and Confirming the Third Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management LP and Acis Capital Management GP LLC, as Modified [DI 830] Highland and its proxies appealed to this Court and the Fifth Circuit but their appeals were denied: Civ. Case No. 3:19-cv-00291-D; USCA Case No. 19-10847. As soon as the injunction in Acis's plan expired, Dondero (through NSOF) immediately filed suit against Acis and Terry, among others, in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York (Civ. Case No. 1:21-cv-04384). The court dismissed Dondero's federal claims and NSOF appealed to the Second Circuit (USCA Case No. 22-1912). The appeal is pending. Stymied in federal court, Dondero, again through NSOF, filed a substantially similar action against Acis and Terry, among others, in New York state court. Index No. 653654/2022 (N.Y. Sup. 2022). Motions to dismiss NSOF's state law action are sub judice. Immediately after the expiration of the injunction in Acis' plan, Dondero—through NSOF—filed suit against Acis, Terry, and others in the Southern District of New York alleging they violated their fiduciary duties to NSOF as an investor in a CLO managed by Acis (and which had been managed by Dondero prior to the Acis bankruptcy). Civ. Case No. 21-cv-04384-GHW (S.D.N.Y. May 14, 2021). Dondero's litigation caused Acis to halt distributions from its managed CLOs thus depriving HCMLP of approximately $20 million in proceeds. The Southern District of New York dismissed Dondero's litigation. NexPoint Diversified Real Estate Trust v. Acis Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 620 F.Supp. 3d 36 (S.D.N.Y. 2022). Undeterred, Dondero appealed to the Second Circuit (Case No. 22-1912 (2d Cir.)), re-filed his breach of fiduciary duty claims in New York state court (Index No. 653654/2022 (N.Y. Sup. 2022)), asserted duplicative counterclaims in another pending litigation involving Acis (Case No. 23-cv-11059-GHW (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 24, 2021)), and filed a lawsuit against HCLOF in the Royal Court of Guernsey alleging HCLOF unfairly prejudiced CLOH by settling with Acis, rather than suing it (No. 106-25786898 (Royal Court of Guernsey))	CONCLUDED: On July 9, 2021, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the bankruptcy court's order confirming the Chapter 11 plan, concluding the appeal of plan injunction was moot [USCA Case No. 19-10847, Doc. No. 00515931634].

Date	Motion	Movant / Objector	Summary of Motion	Status
7/22/21	Verified Petition to Take Deposition Before Suit and Seek Documents	Movant: Dondero	Dondero sought pre-suit discovery from Farallon, a purchaser of certain claims in the Bankruptcy Case, and Alvarez. Dondero alleged Farallon breached certain U.S. Trustee requirements when it purchased claims. Dondero also alleged Farallon purchased those claims because of its relationship to Seery and Seery was leveraging his relationship with Farallon to ensure he remained in control of Highland. Farallon and Alvarez removed the action to the Bankruptcy Court [DI 1]. Dondero moved to remand [DI 4]. On January 4, 2022, the Court remanded the case [DI 22, 23].	CONCLUDED: The state court dismissed the matter as without merit

Date	Motion	Plaintiff / Defendant	Summary of Motion	Status
1/11/22	Plaintiff's Original Petition, Application for Temporary Restraining Order, Temporary Injunction, and Permanent Injunction	Plaintiff: Scott Ellington Defendant: Patrick Daugherty	Scott Ellington, Highland's former general counsel, sued Daugherty, a former Highland employee, for stalking; Ellington subpoenaed Highland's independent directors, Highland's bankruptcy counsel, and other parties to the bankruptcy case requiring a motion for a protective order in New Jersey; Ellington moved to hold an independent director in contempt, in violation of the gatekeeper order; Ellington subpoenaed deposition of another independent director. Farallon and Alvarez removed the action to the Bankruptcy Court [DI 1]. Dondero moved to remand [DI 4]. On January 4, 2022, the Court remanded the case [DI 22, 23].	Dondero's long-time legal counsel is using the pretext of a "stalking" lawsuit to seek to discovery from Highland that they have improperly used in the Highland bankruptcy.

DECISION AND ORDER AFTER TRIAL

This action arises out of a failed restructured transaction between plaintiffs UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch (collectively, UBS) and defendants Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. (CDO Fund) and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company (SOHC) (together, the Fund Counterparties), and defendant Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) (together with the Fund Counterparties, Highland), for the securitization of collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) and credit default swaps (CDSs).

The court conducted a bench trial from July 9 through July 27, 2018 on plaintiffs' third and fourth causes of action in the second amended complaint for breach of contract, and on defendant Highland Capital's first and second counterclaims against plaintiff UBS Securities

LLC for breach of contract and unjust enrichment, respectively.[1] Based on the credible evidence at trial, the court now makes the following determination as to the breach of contract causes of action and counterclaims.[2]

In April and May 2007, the parties agreed to pursue a collateralized debt obligations transaction governed by an Engagement Letter, a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement for CDSs, and a Warehouse Agreement for CLOs (Original Agreements). (DX 4, DX 5, DX 6.)[3] It is undisputed that UBS acted as the "financial arranger" for the transaction and was responsible for financing the acquisition of assets, which would then be held in portfolios, which the parties refer to as the Cash Warehouse and the Synthetic Warehouse or collectively as the Knox Warehouse. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.)[4] Highland Capital acted as the "Servicer" and was responsible for identifying the specific CLOs to be securitized and the Reference Obligations for the CDSs to be securitized. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 3, 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 6, 8.)

In furtherance of the transaction, UBS acquired assets with a notional value of $818 million. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.) There were 33 CLO tranches in the Cash Warehouse, with a notional value of $174 million. UBS paid $170 or $170.5 million to acquire the CLOs because the bonds were purchased at a slight discount on their par value. (Ds.' Findings, ¶ 6; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.) The Synthetic Warehouse contained 87 credit default swaps,

[1] By decision on the record on May 1, 2018 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 494), the court bifurcated the trial. The decision held that the breach of contract claims, which were to be heard by the court, would be determined prior to claims, including fraudulent conveyance claims, which were to be heard by a jury.

[2] At the trial, the parties agreed to the submission of extensive evidence, subject to standing objections. This decision is not based on such evidence, unless the decision expressly states otherwise.

[3] Defendants' and plaintiffs' trial exhibits will be referred to as DX _ and PX _, respectively. The parties' demonstrative exhibits will be referred to as DX Demo. _ and PX Demo. _

[4] The Fund Counterparties' and Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ds.'s Findings. Plaintiffs' Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ps.'s Findings. Defendants' Findings are all identified by paragraph number. Plaintiffs' Findings of Fact are identified by paragraph number, while their Findings of Law are identified only by page number.

with a notional value of $644 million. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 7; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.). UBS served as the protection seller on all of the CDSs. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 8.) For five of the CDSs, with a notional value of $45 million, Lehman Brothers Special Financing, Inc. (Lehman) acted as the protection buyer (Lehman Swaps). (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 8; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755[5], at 1.) For 20 of the CDSs, with a notional value of $124 million, UBS acted as both protection seller and protection buyer (the Internal Swaps). (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 10; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755, at 4-5.)

The Original Agreements expired by their terms on August 15, 2007. (PX 1, at 1.) The parties agreed to restructure the transaction, signing a new Engagement Letter, the 2008 Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA), and the 2008 Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (SWA), as of March 14, 2008. (See PX 1, PX 2, PX 3.) As of March 14, 2008, the Knox assets had lost significant value and the parties agreed that, given the market conditions existing as of the date of the restructured transaction, it was not then feasible to sell the securities and close the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 20; 2008 Engagement Letter [PX 1, at 8].)

As discussed further below, the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided for the roll-over of the Existing Credit Default Swaps and the Existing Collateral Portfolio into the warehouses created under the 2008 restructured transaction. (See SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 12 of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided that the Fund Counterparties would transfer additional cash and securities "to secure its obligations to UBS" under the SWA and the CWA. In particular, this Section required the Fund Counterparties to make an Initial Deposit of $20 million in cash and approximately $54 million in Eligible Securities on the date of the execution of the SWA. (Id., § 12 [A].) The SWA contained a collateral call provision under which UBS was required to track its CDS and Cash Exposure to losses, as defined under the Agreement, on a semi-monthly basis, and the Fund Counterparties were required to deposit an additional $10 million in collateral (cash and/or Eligible Securities) for every $100 million increase in the defined Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount. (Id., §§ 12 [B], [C].)

It is undisputed that, pursuant to Section 12 (C) of the SWA, UBS made a first collateral call for $10 million on September 17, 2008 (PX 4), and a second collateral call for $10 million on October 21, 2008 (PX 5), both of which were satisfied by the Fund Counterparties. (Testimony of Keith Grimaldi, Former Head of UBS's CDO Secondary Trading Desk, Trial Transcript (Tr.) at 81, 112, 119.)

On November 7, 2008, UBS issued the third, and final, collateral call to the Fund Counterparties for an additional $10 million. (PX 6.) It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties did not meet this collateral call. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 17; Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 43-47).[6]

On December 3, 2008, UBS sent a notice to Highland stating that, to date, no deposits have been made in response to the November collateral call, and that "a Termination Date has occurred under the Warehouse Agreements and a termination date has occurred under the Engagement Letter." (PX 7; PX 9.) The notice further stated that "UBS is forbearing from exercising its remedies [under the Agreements] for a period of two Business Days from the date hereof in order to permit [the Fund Counterparties] to pay the Additional Deposits by 5 pm New York time on December 5, 2008." (Id.) On December 5, 2008, UBS sent an additional notice to

[6] It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties offered to post CLO assets to satisfy the third collateral call and that UBS did not accept that collateral. UBS's Keith Grimaldi testified that UBS rejected the CLOs because "at that time the marketplace was declining and declining rapidly. We thought there would be more declines, so we collectively made a decision that we wanted cash or government securities ... that would be easily liquid and reflect better value." (Trial Tr. at 122.) Defendants stipulated that UBS had the right to insist on cash. (See Statement of Andrew Cruciani [Ds.'s Atty.], Trial Tr. at 1736.)

Highland stating that the Additional Deposit has not been made, and that "[c]onsequently, UBS will proceed to exercise the rights and remedies available to it under the Warehouse Agreements, the Engagement Letter, at law and otherwise." (PX 8.)

THIRD COLLATERAL CALL

As a threshold matter, the parties dispute whether the third collateral call was proper. Highland argues that UBS should not have included the 20 Internal Swaps in calculating the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount "because the Intradesk [i.e., Internal] Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps under the SWA . . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 28.) Highland also claims that the Lehman Swaps were not properly included in the calculation because they had been terminated prior to the third collateral call. (See id., ¶ 27.)

More particularly, Highland claims that the Internal Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps because they were not documented, as allegedly required by Section 3 of the SWA, in the form of an ISDA Master Agreement and ISDA Confirmation. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 28, 30-31.) UBS does not dispute that the Internal Swaps were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement and Confirmation, but argues that Section 3 does not require such documentation for the Internal Swaps. (Ps.'s Findings, at 24-25.)[7]

Resolution of this dispute involves an issue of contract interpretation. It is well settled that the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace v 600 Partners Co., 86 NY2d 543, 548 [1995]; W.W.W. Assocs., Inc. v Giancontieri, 77 NY2d 157, 162 [1990].) Written agreements are to be construed in accordance with the parties' intent, and "the best evidence of what parties to a written agreement

intend is what they say in their writing." (Schron v Troutman Sanders LLP, 20 NY3d 430, 436 [2013] [internal quotation marks, brackets, and citation omitted].) The court should determine from contractual language, without regard to extrinsic evidence, whether there is any ambiguity. (Chimart Assocs. v Paul, 66 NY2d 570, 573 [1986].) Extrinsic or parol evidence "may not be considered when the intent of the parties can be gleaned from the face of the instrument." (Id. at 572-573.) "Extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent may be considered only if the agreement is ambiguous. . . ." (Greenfield v Philles Records, Inc., 98 NY2d 562, 569 [2002].) "Ambiguity in a contract arises when the contract, read as a whole, fails to disclose its purpose and the parties' intent, or where its terms are subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 25 NY3d 675, 680 [2015] [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].)

It is also well settled that a court should "construe the [contract] so as to give full meaning and effect to the material provisions. A reading of the contract should not render any portion meaningless. Further, a contract should be read as a whole, and every part will be interpreted with reference to the whole; and if possible it will be so interpreted as to give effect to its general purpose." (Beal Sav. Bank v Sommer, 8 NY3d 318, 324-25 [2007] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; National Conversion Corp. v Cedar Bldg. Corp., 23 NY2d 621, 625 [1969] [holding that "[a]ll parts of an agreement are to be reconciled, if possible, in order to avoid inconsistency"].)

Applying these precepts, the court holds that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to the requirements for documentation of CDSs, that Section 3 of the SWA only applies to CDSs in which a third party is the protection buyer, and that this Section does not require ISDA documentation for the Internal Swaps.

The SWA defines "Existing Credit Default Swap[s]" as the CDSs "that were the subject of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement." (SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 3 of the SWA provides, in pertinent part:

> "Form of Documentation. Each Existing Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, has been documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) an ISDA published confirmation. . . . Each Additional Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached [to the SWA] . . . ."

As the Agreement that governs the securitization of Existing and Additional Credit Default Swaps, the SWA contains numerous detailed provisions regarding the accumulation and disposition of these financial instruments. Section 3, which pertains to documentation of the swaps, is the only provision in the SWA that is limited to CDSs in which UBS is the Seller and a counterparty is the Buyer. All of the other provisions of the SWA refer to CDSs without such limitation.

Moreover, like SWA Section 3, the Original SWA provided: "Each Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and each counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached hereto. . . ." (Original SWA, § 3 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 626].) It is undisputed, however, that the Internal Swaps were included in the Original SWA portfolio but were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement or Confirmation. It is also undisputed that the Internal Swaps were nevertheless again included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount in the SWA for the restructured transaction. (Testimony of Peter Vinella [Highland's expert in structured financial products], Trial Tr. at 1097, 1124-1125 [acknowledging that the Internal Swaps were included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount].)

Initial Net Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA[8] as "111,767,486.88, being the amount by which the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of the date hereof [i.e., the March 14, 2008 "as of" date of the SWA] exceeds the Initial Deposit." As defined in SWA Section 12 (A), the Initial Deposit is the deposit of approximately $74,000,000 in cash and Eligible Securities made on the date of execution of the SWA. Aggregate Net Exposure Amount is defined as the amount by which CDS Exposure and Cash Exposure, as of the date of the collateral calculation, exceed the balance on deposit in the Deposit Account plus Positive Carry with respect to each Collateral Obligation.[9] As discussed above, Section 12 (C) of the SWA requires a deposit of $10 million in additional collateral when the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is greater than or equal to $100 million. The Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA as "the amount, if any, by which (i) the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of [the date of the collateral calculation] exceeds (ii) the Initial Net Exposure Amount." The Initial Net Exposure Amount, which includes the Internal Swaps, is thus integral to the calculation of the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount.

Based on this reading of the SWA as a whole, the court concludes that the Internal Swaps were Existing Credit Default Swaps within the meaning of the SWA. The lack of ISDA documentation was therefore not a bar to their inclusion in the collateral call calculation.

The court rejects Highland's further contention that the Internal Swaps should not have been included because there was "no economic consequence" to UBS from these swaps. (Ds.'s

[9] Positive Carry is defined in the CWA. As explained by Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, carry includes interest payments from the CLOs. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1299.)

Findings, ¶ 33.) The complex formula set forth in Section 12 for calculating the exposure of UBS on the assets in the warehouse that would trigger a collateral call does not contain any requirement that UBS include in the calculation only assets for which it was at risk of sustaining actual losses.[10]

The court further holds that, although the Internal Swaps were properly included in the third collateral call calculation, the Lehman Swaps were not. The parties do not dispute that the Lehman Swaps had been terminated based on the Event of Default that occurred upon Lehman's filing for bankruptcy on September 15, 2008. (DX 87 [UBS Default Notice].) Highland asserts, and UBS does not persuasively counter, that the Lehman Swaps should not have been included in the third collateral call. Indeed, UBS's Grimaldi forthrightly acknowledged that, given the termination, there should not have been "markdowns" on the Lehman Swaps. (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 297-298.).

Highland contends, based on the inclusion of the Lehman Swaps and Internal Swaps in the third collateral call calculation, that UBS "committed a prior material breach by failing to

[10] In view of this holding that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the collateral call calculation pursuant to the unambiguous terms of the SWA, the court has not considered parol evidence on the issue.

The court thus rejects Highland's request for a finding that UBS admitted that the SWA required ISDA documentation of the Internal Swaps. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 30-31.) This request is based on testimony of UBS's Keith Grimaldi who, when shown Section 3 during cross-examination and asked if every CDS was required to have ISDA documentation, responded: "According to the language, yes." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 262-264.) Even if this evidence were properly considered, Highland's reliance on this answer ignores that Mr. Grimaldi further testified that ISDA documentation would not be "filled out" until the assets were transferred in the securitization. (Id. at 267-270.)

The court further notes that Highland requests a finding, arguably in support of its claim that the CDSs were not Existing Credit Default Swaps, that a CDS "cannot be created with the same legal entity on both sides of the transaction. . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 29.) Even if parol evidence were properly considered, there was substantial evidence in the record that internal swaps were common in securitizations of synthetic assets. (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1673-1676; (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1158-1162 [denying that intracompany swaps are "economic transactions" but acknowledging their use in CLO securitizations].)

properly calculate the collateral call[]." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 23, 27-28.) In support of this contention, Highland relies on the testimony of its expert Peter Vinella. According to Mr. Vinella's own analysis, however, if the Lehman swaps are excluded from the calculation for the third collateral call, but the Internal Swaps are included, the total increase in the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount as of November 4, 2008 is $328.62 million—an amount greater than the $300 million required to authorize the third collateral call pursuant to Section 12 of the SWA. (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1122-1139; DX Demo. 8.) Louis Dudney, UBS's expert in forensic accounting and damages (Trial Tr. at 824), analyzed Mr. Vinella's testimony and confirmed, using the same numbers as Mr. Vinella, that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount still exceeded $300 million on November 4, 2008, after excluding the Lehman Swaps but including the Internal Swaps. (PX Demo. 20 [accepted without objection in lieu of Dudney rebuttal testimony, Trial Tr. at 1870-1871].)

Based on this credible testimony that the threshold for the collateral call was met without the Lehman Swaps, the court holds that the third collateral call did not constitute a material breach of the contract, notwithstanding UBS's improper inclusion of the Lehman Swaps in the calculation.[11] (See generally Awards.Com v Kinko's, Inc., 42 AD3d 178, 187 [1st Dept 2007], affd 14 NY3d 791, 793 [2010]; Frank Felix Assocs., Ltd. v Austin Drugs, Inc., 111 F3d 284, 289 [2d Cir 1997] [under New York law, for a breach to be material, "it must go to the root of the agreement between the parties"] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted].)

[11] In view of this holding that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of November 7, 2008, the court need not reach UBS's contention that the collateral call was proper because the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of December 2, 2008, prior to the termination of the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, at 15 n 10.)

As discussed above, there is no dispute that the Fund Counterparties failed to meet the third collateral call. The court accordingly finds that the Fund Counterparties breached the SWA and turns to the issue of damages.

DAMAGES

Designation of Ineligible Securities

A critical issue in determining UBS's damages is whether UBS may recover damages for CDSs that UBS retained after its termination of the 2008 transaction, under these circumstances in which UBS did not designate the underlying reference obligations for any of the CDSs as "Ineligible Securities." Resolution of this issue requires interpretation of the SWA. Highland and UBS both contend that the SWA is unambiguous as to whether Ineligible Securities must be designated, but assert fundamentally inconsistent readings of the Agreement. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 44-49; see Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

As held above, the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace, 86 NY2d at 548.) Ambiguity will be found to arise where the terms of a contract are "subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp., 25 NY3d at 680 [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].) As also held above, a court should construe a contract so as to give full meaning and effect to its material provisions, and should read the contract as a whole and so as not to render any portion meaningless, if possible. (See Beal Sav. Bank, 8 NY3d at 324-25.)

Sections 5 (A), 5 (B), and 6 of the SWA are relevant to the calculation of CDS damages: Section 5 (A) provides for the calculation of losses with respect to CDSs removed from the warehouse during the term of the Agreement or "otherwise pursuant to Section 6"; Section 5 (B) (2) governs the calculation of losses upon a closing; and Section 6 governs this calculation in the event of a failure to close, incorporating terms from Sections 5 (A) and 5 (B).

Section 6 provides in pertinent part:

> "(A) If the Closing Date fails to occur on or prior to the Termination Date, then UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, either (at the election of the Servicer; provided that notice of such election is received on or prior to the Termination Date) (i) terminate each Credit Default Swap or (ii) novate each Credit Default Swap to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer), in each case, on the Termination Date.

Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

CDS Losses are in turn defined in Section 5 (B) (2), the closing provision, as:

> "(x) the sum of (1) the aggregate Floating Amount payments and Physical Settlement Amount payments made by UBS with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps as to which a Floating Amount Event or a Credit Event occurred under the terms thereof, plus (2) the aggregate amount of Net Hedging Payments made by UBS with respect to all Hedging Transactions related to the Credit Default Swaps, plus (3) the aggregate Replacement Losses determined with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps and the related Hedging Transactions that were terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security (such amount in this clause (x), the 'CDS Losses') . . . ."

Relying on the requirement in the definition of CDS Losses that Reference Obligations be designated as Ineligible Securities, Highland argues that "[t]he term 'CDS Losses'

unambiguously limits UBS's recovery for unrealized (mark-to-market) losses to securities designated as 'Ineligible Securities,' and the Court is bound to enforce the agreement pursuant to its unambiguous terms." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46.) Put another way, Highland argues that UBS may recover mark-to-market losses only on CDSs that have been designated Ineligible Securities. (Id., ¶ 53.)[12] UBS asserts, among other things, that under Section 6, UBS may terminate, novate, or retain CDSs regardless of eligibility, that ineligibility designations are not relevant absent a closing, and that Highland's reading renders meaningless other provisions of the SWA. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

Upon close reading of the SWA, the court concludes that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to ineligibility designations and that, under Section 6, upon the failure to close UBS is entitled to retain CDSs and to recover losses for the retained CDSs, without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities. Section 6 (A) expressly provides for UBS to terminate or novate the CDSs, and does not require UBS to first make such designation. Although Section 6 (A) does not also, by its terms, provide for UBS to retain CDSs, a reading of the contract as a whole leaves no question that UBS was not only entitled to retain the CDSs upon the failure to close, but also that it was entitled to recover losses on the retained CDSs without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible.[13]

[12] Highland's damages expert, Adam Warren, testified that realized losses are losses sustained where a transaction has been closed out and an actual cash payment has been made. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1249, 1253.) He also testified that, in his opinion, there were no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because no assets had been designated as ineligible. (Id. at 1257 ["[O]ur computation is that there are no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because of the need to . . . create a designation of ineligible. And we saw no evidence of any Synthetic Warehouse asset being designated ineligible"].)

[13] In its decision of defendants' motion for summary judgment, this court held that it could not determine on the record of that motion whether the SWA was ambiguous with respect to UBS's entitlement to recover losses on retained CDSs, pursuant to Section 6, without a prior designation of such assets as Ineligible Securities. (2017 NY Slip Op. 30546[U], 2017 WL 1103879, * 4-7 [Sup Ct, NY County Mar. 13 2017], affd 159 AD3d 512, lv dismissed 32 NY3d 1080.) With the benefit of the parties' extensive trial briefing on this issue, the court now concludes, for the reasons discussed further in the text, that the agreement is not ambiguous.

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 650 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 09/14/2020

As the above-quoted definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) shows, this definition relates to Credit Default Swaps which, upon a closing, have been "terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security . . . ." After setting forth the definition of CDS Losses (and CDS Gains) in the context of a closing, Section 5 (B) (2) further provides: "To the extent the Closing Date fails to occur, allocation of CDS Losses, CDS Gains and any other amounts payable hereunder will be determined in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 hereof."

Significantly, while Section 6 (C) incorporates the defined term CDS Losses, the term CDS Losses also incorporates both the definition of Ineligible Security and the term Replacement Losses from Section 5 (A). These incorporated terms modify the definition of CDS Losses where a closing does not occur.

The definition of Ineligible Security pertains to securities that are ineligible for securitization upon a closing. The SWA thus defines Ineligible Security, in pertinent part, as "any Reference Obligation in the CDS Portfolio which has become ineligible for sale to the Issuer on the Closing Date as a result of the failure of such Reference Obligation to conform to the Eligibility Criteria as it exists at such time of determination . . . ." (SWA, Exhibit A-2 [emphasis added].)

Section 5 (A), which defines the term Replacement Losses, distinguishes between such Losses sustained during the term of the Agreement and those sustained upon termination in the event of a failure to close pursuant to Section 6. Section 5 (A) primarily addresses the removal of CDSs from the warehouse "during the term of this [the SWA] Agreement" where "a Reference Obligation or the related Credit Default Swap does not conform to the Eligibility Criteria" that must be met for securitization. This section provides that "UBS shall be entitled in good faith to designate any Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) as an Ineligible Security and (ii) in its sole discretion to remove any such Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) from the CDS Portfolio." Section 5 (A), however, continues:

> "To the extent any such Credit Default Swaps are terminated or novated, or at UBS's discretion, such exposure is retained following the designation of such Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities or otherwise pursuant to Section 6, UBS shall determine the Replacement Gain or Replacement Loss relating to such Credit Default Swaps [according to the formula that follows]."

(emphasis added). Section 5 (A) then sets forth a formula for calculating Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss, which specifically provides for such calculation not only upon termination or novation but also upon UBS's retention of the CDSs. (SWA § 5 [A] [1] – [3].)

Section 5 (A) thus clearly contemplates that UBS may novate, terminate, or retain CDSs both during the term of the Agreement and in the event of a failure to close. The Section affords UBS the discretion to terminate, novate, or retain CDSs "pursuant to Section 6," as distinct from its discretion to do so upon a designation of the underlying Reference Obligation as Ineligible during the term of the Agreement. Any other reading would render meaningless the Section 5 (A) provision "or otherwise pursuant to Section 6."

Moreover, in order to reconcile all of the provisions of the SWA, the Section 5 (B) (2) definition of CDS Losses, when used in Section 6, cannot be construed as requiring a designation of Ineligible Securities. As discussed above, Ineligible Securities are defined as securities ineligible for sale at a closing. Section 5 (B) (2), which governs the calculation of losses where a closing will occur, requires the designation of Ineligible Securities to facilitate the parties' calculation of losses on assets deemed ineligible for inclusion in the securitization that will occur upon the closing. When a closing will not occur, none of the CDSs or other assets will be securitized, and there is no need to distinguish between eligible and ineligible assets. While the definition of CDS Losses with the Ineligible Security designation requirement serves the purposes of Section 5 (B) (2) in the event of a closing, it is inconsistent with the CDS Loss calculation required in Section 6 where the closing does not occur.

Contrary to Highland's apparent contention (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46), a reading of the CDS Loss provision in Section 6 to permit calculation of losses on retained assets without an Ineligible Security designation does not violate the fundamental precept that a defined term in a contract must be given effect. (See generally Mionis v Bank Julius Baer & Co., 301 AD2d 104, 109 [1st Dept 2002].) Rather, the CDS Loss definition, as used in Section 6, is modified by the contractual provisions discussed above.

Although inartfully drafted, the SWA is not ambiguous. If the contract is read as a whole, and all of the provisions are given meaning, it is reasonably susceptible to only one meaning—namely, that CDS Losses for retained assets may be recovered without a designation of the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities where, as here, the contract has been terminated before the closing.[14] The court accordingly holds that UBS is entitled to recover damages for the retained CDSs in the Synthetic Warehouse.[15]

Calculation of Damages

As discussed above, UBS terminated the transaction based on the Fund Counterparties'

[14] The court notes that the SWA and the Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA) both contain provisions which state that the two agreements "set forth the entire understanding of the parties hereto relating to the subject matter hereof . . . ." (SWA, § 18; CWA, § 18.) Assuming, without deciding, that these agreements should be read together in construing the SWA, the court finds that, although the assets at issue in the SWA and the CWA have markedly different attributes, the CWA is consistent with the SWA to the extent that the CWA permits UBS, in the event a closing does not occur, to retain and recover for losses on the CLOs that are the subject of the CWA, without a designation of the CLOs as Ineligible Securities. (See CWA, §§ 5 [A], 7 [A].)

failure to meet the third collateral call. UBS sent Highland a notice, dated December 3, 2008, stating that a Termination Date had occurred under the Warehouse Agreements but that it would forbear from exercising its remedies for two days to permit the Fund Counterparties to meet this collateral call. (PX 7.) UBS then sent a further notice to Highland, dated December 5, 2008, stating that it would exercise its remedies as the call had not been met. (PX 8.) UBS held a public auction of the assets in the Knox Warehouse on December 16, 2008. By notice dated December 19, 2008, UBS demanded payment for its claimed losses based on the results of the auction—$157,949,885.47 for the assets in the Cash Warehouse (PX 10) and $587,357,060.59 for the assets in the Synthetic Warehouse. (PX 11.) UBS also notified Highland that it elected to retain the Collateral Obligations in the Cash Warehouse. (PX 10.)

CDS Damages

Highland argues that even if the recovery of damages for the CDSs is not barred by UBS's failure to designate the Reference Obligations for the CDSs as Ineligible Securities (a claim this court has rejected above), UBS has not proved damages for these CDSs. Specifically, Highland contends that UBS did not comply with the contractual requirements for calculation of losses because its post-termination auction was untimely and otherwise improper. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 57-59.) Highland also contends that UBS's marks do not otherwise "establish a reasonable connection between the asset value and UBS's alleged damages." (Id., ¶¶ 60-65.) UBS disputes these assertions. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29-31.)

Sections 6 (C), 5 (B) (2), and 5 (A) (3) are the provisions of the SWA that govern the calculation of CDS Losses upon termination. Section 6 (C) provides in full:

> "To the extent there are any CDS Losses, the CDO Fund and SOHC shall collectively be responsible for 100% of any such CDS Losses. Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such > amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

As discussed above, the definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) includes Replacement Loss, the calculation of which is governed by Section 5 (A). With respect to Replacement Loss relating to CDSs that are retained, Section 5 (A) (3) provides in full:

> "To the extent UBS retains such exposure, the Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss will be imputed based on the arithmetic average of at least three bids (or, if UBS if unable to obtain three such bids having made commercially reasonable efforts, such lesser number of bids as UBS is able to obtain) obtained by or on behalf of UBS from nationally recognized derivatives dealers in the relevant market (no more than one of which may be UBS or any of its Affiliates; provided that any such bid must be provided in good faith) to assume UBS's position under such Credit Default Swap."

The SWA, by its terms, thus contemplated that payment would be made within three days after the Termination Date, subject to notice from UBS. As the SWA provided for an auction to calculate the amount of the losses, it also contemplated that an auction could or would occur within that three day period.

By the terms of UBS's notices to Highland, although a Termination Date had occurred as of December 3, UBS extended the Fund Counterparties' time to meet the third collateral call until December 5. The court thus finds that the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements for failure to meet the third collateral call occurred on December 5. UBS did not conduct the auction to calculate the CDS Losses until December 16.

UBS's delay of approximately 11 days in conducting the auction, while seemingly de minimis, in fact had momentous financial consequences, given that the delay occurred in the wake of the September 15, 2008 Lehman bankruptcy filing and at the height of the financial crisis. With the market spiraling downward, the CDS losses ascertained through the auction process were approximately $117 million more than the losses calculated by using UBS's marks on either December 3 or December 5. (PX Demo. 21; DX Demo. 12 [showing UBS and Highland marks as of December 3 and 5; PX Demo. 28 at 60 [Ps.'s Closing Statement Demonstrative Exhibit, acknowledging that CDS damages, as calculated based on the auction, exceeded the losses calculated using UBS's marks on December 3 and 5 by over $117 million].)[16]

UBS contends that the three day payment period was for its benefit and that it "could exercise its right to get paid after three business days without waiver." (Ps.'s Findings, at 28.) The court agrees that UBS's delay in demanding payment or holding the auction did not result in a waiver of its right to seek payment of its damages resulting from the Fund Counterparties' breach. (See SWA § 20 ["Neither the failure nor any delay on the part of any party hereto to exercise any right, remedy, power or privilege under this Agreement shall operate as a waiver hereof. . . ."].) Highland correctly contends, however, that the delayed auction could not serve as a basis for calculating UBS's damages because the results of the auction did not reflect market conditions as of the date of termination or breach. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 57.)

As explained by the Court of Appeals:

> "It has long been recognized that the theory underlying damages is to make good or replace the loss caused by the breach of contract. Damages are intended to return the parties to the point at which the breach arose and to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach."

[16] At the trial, the parties stipulated to dispense with rebuttal testimony from plaintiffs' damages expert, Louis Dudney and, in lieu of such testimony, to the admission into evidence of plaintiffs' Demonstrative Exhibits 20 and 21, and defendants' Demonstrative Exhibit 12. (Trial Tr. at 1868, 1870 [Stipulation].) PX Demo. 21 and DX Demo. 12, which were prepared by Mr. Dudney, calculated damages using plaintiffs' and defendants' marks, respectively, on December 3 and 5, 2008. (Trial Tr. at 1870-1877.)

It is further settled that damages need not be proven with mathematical certainty. It is sufficient that a reasonable basis for the calculation of damages be shown. (See generally J.R. Loftus, Inc. v White, 85 NY2d 874, 877 [1995] ["While a plaintiff may recover damages when the measure of damages is unavoidably uncertain or difficult to ascertain, a reasonable connection between a plaintiff's proof and a [] determination of damages is nevertheless necessary"]; CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, *2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] ["The law of New York is clear that once the fact of damage has been established, the non-breaching party need only provide a stable foundation for a reasonable estimate [of damages]" [internal quotation marks and citations omitted, brackets in original].)

UBS's December 16, 2008 auction cannot satisfy either of these standards because, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's losses at, or even shortly after, the breach, due to the exceptional circumstances presented by the financial crisis.[17] The court accordingly turns to the alternative basis advanced by UBS for the calculation of damages—its marks on December 5, 2008. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29.)

It is well settled that "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma v Skaarup Ship Mgt. Corp., 916 F2d 820, 825 [2d Cir 1990], cert denied 499 US 907 [1991] [applying New York law and citing Simon v Electrospace

[17] There is authority that "in accordance with the objective that a party seeking recovery for breach of contract is entitled 'to be made whole' as of the time of the breach, the [factfinder] should be able to make its valuation determination on all relevant elements of the case, whether dated prebreach, on the date of breach, or 'some short time period thereafter.'" (Credit Suisse First Boston v Utrecht-America Fin. Co., 84 AD3d 579, 580 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Boyce v Soundview Tech. Group, Inc., 464 F3d 376, 389 [2d Cir 2006] [other internal quotation marks and citations omitted].) Although the auction was held shortly after the breach, this authority does not support calculation of damages based on the auction results, as the auction did not provide a reliable basis for assessing the losses.

Corp., 28 NY2d 136, 145-146 [1971], motion to amend remittitur and clarify denied 28 NY2d 809].) In accordance with the objective that the injured party be made whole, "damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.)

UBS offered credible testimony that its December 5, 2008 marks reasonably reflected the market value of the CDSs as of the December 5 breach date. In particular, Timothy LeRoux, who at the time of the transaction was second in command to Mr. Grimaldi on the UBS trading desk (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1640), gave credible testimony that, in the regular course of business, the trading desk "marked to market" hundreds of CLO assets, and every week or two was required to assign values on every one of the assets, both cash and synthetic, in the Knox Warehouse. (Id. at 1724.) Mr. LeRoux also described the marking process and identified information, including public information as to offers and bids on CDSs in the marketplace, that UBS considered in developing "objective" prices. (Id. at 1727, 1745-1750.) Mr. Grimaldi also testified that, although the trading desk performed the mark-to-market valuation of the assets in the Knox Warehouse, the UBS valuation group established oversight due to the volatility of the market and "would look at other market observations and make sure that those [the trading desk marks] were in line with the marketplace." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 207-208.)

Highland does not dispute that the mark-to-market process is a methodology for determining loss in market value of retained assets. (See e.g. Testimony of Adam Warren [Highland's damages expert], Trial Tr. at 1268-1269; Testimony of Philip Braner [Highland former executive], Trial Tr. at 469-472; Testimony of UBS's Timothy LeRoux, Trial Tr. at 1640, 1727-1729.)

interest, because the trading group's bonuses were based on the performance of the mark-to-mark assets and the group had the incentive to inflate the value of the assets. (Ds.s' Findings, ¶¶ 61-62.) Highland makes no showing that UBS inflated the value of the CDSs or that trading groups do not routinely develop marks. Moreover, Highland's assertion that "UBS's trading group alone set the marks for the Knox Warehouse assets" (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 62) ignores UBS's credible testimony, discussed above, that the valuation group exercised oversight in connection with the development of the marks.

Highland's further assertion that its own marks are more reliable (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65) is unsupported by persuasive evidence. Philip Braner, who ultimately became Chief Operating Officer of the Highland Capital Management CLO Group and COO of Highland Financial Partners (Braner Testimony, Trial Tr. at 397), testified that Highland was itself tracking marks on the assets in the Knox Warehouse (id. at 615) and had an "internal valuation team that was responsible for accumulating marks" in a process in which portfolio managers of the Highland funds participated. (See id. at 467.) While Highland appears to assert that its marks are more reliable than UBS's because they were set by a valuation team, Highland fails to show that the role of its valuation team differed in any material respect from that of the UBS valuation group that performed oversight on its trading group in the marking process.

Notably, Highland fails to explain how its methodology in setting marks was more reliable than UBS's. Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, forthrightly testified that he was not opining on the reasonableness of any marks in this case (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1247-1248), and he did not in fact give any testimony on whether UBS's or Highland's marks were more reliable.

The evidence at trial also demonstrated that Highland, like UBS, set marks on the CDSs on an asset by asset basis from March 2008 through October 2008. While there were differences between Highland's and UBS's marks during this period, the Highland and UBS marks in the month of October were substantially similar. The difference in the marks did not escalate substantially until November 2008. (PX Demo. 9, at 4.) Mr. Dudney gave testimony, which was not disputed, that although Highland, like UBS, had been setting marks on an asset by asset basis, Highland stopped doing so as of October 2008 and, in a November 30, 2008 calculation of damages, attributed the same mark (37) to each asset. (Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 883-884, 905-909, DX 116.) Highland offered no explanation for this change in methodology. Mr. Dudney, in contrast, gave plausible testimony that this use of the same mark did not make sense given the deterioration of the market. (Id. at 908.)

In sum, based on the credible evidence at the trial, the court holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating that its December 5, 2008 marks provide a reasonable basis, under the circumstances, for the calculation of damages at the time of the breach. In so holding, the court rejects Highland's not fully articulated contention that only an auction, and not a mark-to-market methodology, is a reliable method for calculating damages. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 59.) Highland's reliance on the testimony of its damages expert, Adam Warren, in support of this contention (see id.) is misplaced. While Mr. Warren testified that CDSs are "bespoke contracts," he did not give any testimony that an auction was required to ascertain their value.

Further, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's damages due to the volatility of the market at the time of the auction. It bears emphasis that, although the market was also volatile at the time the December 5, 2008 marks were accumulated, Highland has not advanced an alternative, other than the non-viable auction, to the mark-to-market valuation methodology. Nor has Highland made any showing that the market value of the CDSs was not reasonably determinable as of the date of breach using the mark-to-market valuation methodology.[18]

The court further holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating the reasonableness of its calculation of damages using those marks. UBS's and Highland's experts both provided the court with calculations of damages using UBS's and Highland's marks, respectively, as of December 5, 2008. Mr. Warren confirmed that his main differences with Mr. Dudney regarding the calculation of damages for the Synthetic Warehouse were that Mr. Dudney considered it appropriate, and he did not, to include damages for unrealized CDS losses and for the 20 Internal Swaps in which UBS was both the protection seller and the protection buyer. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298; DX Demo. 12; PX Demo. 21; see also Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1004.)

Mr. Warren excluded from his damages calculation unrealized CDS losses for all CDSs as to which a designation of ineligibility had not been made. He testified that his basis for doing so was his understanding of the contract—i.e, his understanding that the SWA required such designation—and not industry custom. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1281-1282.) For the reasons discussed above, this court has rejected Highland's position that the SWA should be construed as requiring ineligibility designations as a condition of the inclusion of unrealized losses on the CDSs in the calculation of damages. Also for the reasons discussed above, the court has rejected Highland's position that the losses on the Internal Swaps should not be included in this calculation.

[18] In its post-trial briefing, Highland sought a finding that if UBS is held to be entitled to recover damages for CDS losses, Highland's marks are more reliable than UBS's for determining those damages. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65.) Highland did not argue that the market value of the losses could not reasonably be determined by using marks. In contrast, in support of its claim that it is entitled to an offset against CDS damages for post-breach termination payments received by UBS on the CDSs, Highland questioned the accuracy of the market valuation at the time of the breach. Highland thus asserted in a footnote: "Given the scant market pricing data available at the time of the breach, post-termination payments and asset dispositions are relevant for the additional reason that they provide a more accurate measurement of the actual value of the Knox assets." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8 n 5.) This assertion is unsupported by any citation to trial testimony. More important, at the trial Highland did not offer any expert testimony that the mark-to-market methodology was not a reliable basis for calculating the CDS damages. For the additional reasons set forth in the section of this decision on Highland's requested Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value, the court finds that offset of post-breach payments received by UBS on the CDSs would be inconsistent with calculation of UBS's damages based on their market value at the time of the breach.

Review of the experts' calculations shows, moreover, that when such losses are included in the calculations, the difference between Highland's and UBS's totals is substantially reduced. As previously noted, the parties stipulated to the introduction into evidence of charts prepared by Mr. Dudney comparing his and Mr. Warren's calculations of CDS damages using UBS's and Highland's marks as of December 5, 2008. Using Highland's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated CDS mark-to-market losses of $388,284,750, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $361,331,855. (DX Demo. 12.) Using UBS's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated losses of $470,113,605, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $443,160,710. (PX Demo. 21.)

The difference in the totals is largely due to Mr. Warren's exclusion from his calculation of all unrealized CDS losses and all losses for the Internal Swaps. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1296-1299.) His calculation of $26,952,895 for CDS losses includes only realized CDS losses. (Id. at 1250.) According to Mr. Warren, the Internal Swaps account for $93,952,173 of the CDS damages using UBS's marks, or $68,801,027 using Highland's marks. (Id. at 1269.) Although Mr. Warren disputed UBS's entitlement to unrealized CDS losses, he performed a calculation including such losses. Using UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, these losses totaled $355,487,606. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Using Highland's marks as of that date, these losses totaled $299,118,973. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1269; DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Mr. Warren's total, using UBS's marks, for the Internal Swaps ($93,952.173) and the unrealized CDS losses ($355,487,606) was $449,439,779. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) As stated above, Mr. Dudney's calculation of total Synthetic Warehouse losses, using UBS's December 5, 2008 marks, was $470,113,605. Given the magnitude of the damages, this disparity is not material.

The court accordingly holds that UBS incurred losses in the Synthetic Warehouse of $470,113,605 as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

CLO Damages

Highland does not dispute that unrealized losses are recoverable for the CLO assets. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1293.) Moreover, UBS's (Mr. Dudney's) and Highland's (Mr. Warren's) calculations of the CLO losses as of December 5, 2008 are the same: Using Highland's marks, these losses were $106,157,101. (DX Demo. 12, at 2.) Using UBS's marks, the losses were $128,848,101. (PX Demo. 21.) Having concluded that UBS's damages were properly calculated based on UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, the court holds that UBS incurred losses in the Cash Warehouse of $128,848,101, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

Adjustments to Damages Calculation

In calculating the Synthetic and Cash Warehouse losses, Mr. Dudney and Mr. Warren made adjustments for the same items: carry (premiums and interest), collateral value, financing fees, and financing savings. Mr. Dudney's adjustment of $79,587,557 and Mr. Warren's adjustment of $76,632,634 did not differ materially. (PX Demo. 21.) According to Mr. Warren, the difference of approximately $3 million is due to Mr. Warren's exclusion of the Internal Swaps in calculating the carry. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298-1299.) As the court has held that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the damages calculation, Mr. Dudney's adjustments will be accepted.

Reducing UBS's damages by the adjustments, the court holds that UBS sustained total damages of $519,374,149 (Cash Warehouse Losses of $128,848,101 plus Synthetic Warehouse Losses of $470,113,605 minus $79,587,557).

OFFSETS

Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value

A central issue in this action is whether Highland is entitled to an offset against UBS's damages for appreciation in the value of the CDSs after the breach. The parties stipulated that UBS received post-breach termination payments net of carry on the CDSs, including the Internal Swaps, in the amount of $202,223,059. (DX 491.) It is undisputed that these payments were received months and, for many of the CDSs, years after the termination of the transaction. (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10 [acknowledging that UBS "liquidated the assets years later"]; PX 335 [spreadsheet showing termination dates for CDSs through 2011].)

Highland argues that, at the time the transaction was terminated, "frozen credit markets had created a severe mismatch between the assets' alleged market value and their actual value based on their cash flows." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10.) Highland further argues that UBS was able to sell these assets for hundreds of millions of dollars more than their December 2008 marks and that, while UBS is entitled to retain the sale proceeds, "it cannot ignore these monies in calculating the harm it actually suffered." (Id. at 11.) According to Highland, if disposition of the assets after the termination is not considered, UBS will receive "an enormous windfall." (Id.) UBS acknowledges that if a non-breaching party obtains a benefit "because of the breach," the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 6 [emphasis UBS's].) UBS argues, however, that the Fund Counterparties' breach was not a but for cause of the post-breach payments UBS received for the CDSs. (Id. at 7.) Rather, subsequent gains that resulted from UBS's disposition of the assets were "the result of UBS's contractual rights [to retain the assets] in the event of any termination and of its subsequent investment strategy." (Id. at 14.) According to UBS, the Fund Counterparties' proposed offset would deprive UBS of the benefit of the bargain and result in a windfall for the Fund Counterparties. (Id.)

As discussed above, contract damages are intended to make "good or replace the loss" caused to a party by the breach of contract and "to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.) Further, "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 825 [applying New York law and citing Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146].)

The calculation of damages is also subject to the fundamental precept that where a non-breaching party acquires a "benefit or opportunity for benefit . . . because of the breach, a balance must be struck between benefit and loss" and the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Indu Craft, Inc. v Bank of Baroda, 47 F3d 490, 495 [2d Cir 1995] [applying New York law]; accord Aristocrat Leisure Ltd. v Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 727 F Supp 2d 256, 289 [SD NY 2010] ["[I]f a victim derives a benefit from the breaching party's breach of contract, the breaching party only is responsible for the victim's net loss"], reconsideration denied 2010 WL 3431132; Fertico Belgium S.A. v Phosphate Chemicals Export Assn., Inc., 70 NY2d 76, 84 [1987], rearg denied 70 NY2d 694 [holding, in a "cover" action governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, that "'[g]ains made by the injured party on other transactions after the breach are never to be deducted from the damages that are otherwise recoverable, unless such gains could not have been made, had there been no breach'"] [quoting 5 Corbin, Contracts § 1041].)

Here, although UBS and Highland agree that any benefit derived by UBS because of the breach must be offset against its losses, neither party has cited, and the court's own research has not located, any case in which a court has considered how to apply this precept to a non-breaching party's retention of assets upon a failed securitization transaction and realization of subsequent gains. There is, however, a substantial body of law involving a breaching party's failure to deliver or purchase assets subject to fluctuations in value, in which the courts have assessed damages based on the market value of the assets at the time of breach and have declined to consider any subsequent increases or decreases in value of the assets. As discussed further below, the court concludes that these cases are inconsistent with the offset sought by Highland.

As the Second Circuit has explained in reviewing this body of law, New York courts reject damage awards "based on what 'the actual economic conditions and performance' were in light of hindsight." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826, quoting Aroneck v Atkin, 90 AD2d 966, 967 [4th Dept 1982], lv denied 59 NY2d 601 [1983].) "They have explicitly rejected the use of subsequent changes in value or profits where they would increase an award, and where they would decrease the award." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826 [internal citations omitted].)

In the securities context, courts have repeatedly held that the damages for failure to deliver or purchase shares of stock should be based on their market value at the time of breach, and not on any subsequent increase or decrease in their value. (Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, holding: "The proper measure of damages for breach of contract is determined by the loss sustained or gain prevented at the time and place of breach. The rule is precisely the same when the breach of contract is nondelivery of shares of stock"] [internal citations omitted]; Aroneck, 90 AD2d at 967 [where the buyer breached a contract to purchase shares, holding that damages should be based on market value at the time of breach, and rejecting the buyer's theory that the "value should be based on the actual economic conditions and performance" of the company post-breach]; Emposimato v CIFC Acquisition Corp., 89 AD3d 418, 421 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Aroneck and citing Simon in holding that "[i]n the case of a breach of contract to sell securities, expectation damages are calculated as 'the difference between the agreed price of the shares and the fair market value at the time of the breach'"]; Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc. v Hollander, 337 F3d 186, 197 [2d Cir 2003] [following Simon and Aroneck in a case involving the defendant's breach of a contract to deliver warrants]; see also Kaminsky v Herrick Feinstein LLP, 59 AD3d 1, 11-12 [1st Dept 2008], lv denied 12 NY3d 715 [2009] [holding that damages for breach of contract to deliver shares prior to an initial public offering (IPO) should be awarded based on the value of the shares at time of the breach, not their higher value post-IPO].)

The court holds that these cases involve transactions that are analogous to (although far less complex than) the transaction at issue, and apply the same measure of damages that this court has adopted above—namely, the measure of damages based on the market value of the assets on the date of the breach. These cases accordingly govern the calculation of damages here. The court notes, moreover, that sound reasons support the application of this measure of damages without consideration of post-breach fluctuations in the value of the assets.

As the Second Circuit reasoned, a contrary rule that would permit calculation of damages at the time of trial "would be a two-edged sword, because courts would have to diminish damage awards where the value of the item decreased or where losses were encountered subsequent to the breach as well as enhance them where conditions improve. However, New York courts have expressly refused to adopt this 'wait and see' theory of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) In addition, although the court does not adjust for changes in the value of the shares when calculating damages according to the date of breach measure, the parties themselves can protect against changes in value by hedging or acquiring shares in the market. As the Second Circuit further reasoned: "To be sure, uncertainties about the future and lack of perfect information may cause an asset to be under- or over-valued at any particular time. At that time, however, either party has an opportunity to hedge according to his or her judgment about the future stream of income." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826; see also Simon, 28 NY2d at 146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, reasoning that "[i]f plaintiff were anxious to own the shares rather than obtain their value, he was free to purchase them in the market. His cause of action should not and may not be converted into carrying a market 'call' or 'warrant' to acquire the stock on demand if the price rose above its value as reflected in his cause of action"].)

The court further holds that application of the date of breach measure of damages, without adjustments for fluctuations in the value of the assets, will serve the objective of putting UBS in the position it would have been in had the contract been performed. If the securitization had closed, UBS would have been entitled, under the express terms of the SWA, to novate to the Issuer its positions as protection seller on all of the eligible Knox CDSs. (SWA § 5 [B] [1].) As a result of the breach, UBS was forced to assume a substantial risk of loss under the CDSs that would have been novated to the Issuer had the closing occurred. As discussed above, the loss in market value of the retained CDSs as of the date of breach was determined using the mark-to-market methodology. More specifically, as confirmed by both UBS's and Highland's experts, the mark-to-market losses calculated as of the date of breach represent the cost to UBS to exit the CDSs—that is, the payments to be made to third-parties so that they would take on, and UBS could extricate itself from, the risk. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1304-1306; Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 894-895.) A damage award for these mark-to-market losses will therefore compensate UBS for the exposure to risk that it would not have faced had the contract been performed.

To the extent that Highland contends that a damage award is not appropriate for these mark-to-market losses because the losses were not realized, the court rejects that contention. The damage award is appropriate, notwithstanding that the losses were not realized, because, as held above, the contract affords UBS the right of recovery for such losses. (See CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, * 2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] [reasoning that, where the contractual definition of loss for the purpose of calculating damages did not require the CDS protection buyer to sustain "actual loss," "[t]he absence of an actual loss on a Reference Obligation transaction, thus, is not a barrier to [the protection buyer's] recovery. . ."] [emphasis in original].)

The court further holds that the record does not support Highland's contention that UBS's post-breach gains were realized because of the breach, and that this case therefore falls under the line of authority that requires an offset for such gains. Highland in effect contends that because UBS retained the CDSs as a result of the breach, it also realized the post-breach gains because of the breach.[19] That conclusion does not follow. As held above, UBS had a contractual right to retain the CDSs upon the termination of the transaction based on the Fund Counterparties' breach of the SWA by failing to meet the collateral call. The SWA does not contain any provision that limited UBS's discretion as to when to dispose of the assets after termination. Rather, as UBS persuasively argues, the gains realized as a result of the post-breach disposition of assets were attributable not to the breach itself but to UBS's assumption of the risk of loss on the CDSs and its investment strategy as to when to dispose of them based on its assessment of the market. (See G & R Corp. v American Sec. Trust Co., 523 F2d 1164, 1175 [DC Cir 1975] [holding that while the transfer of property to the plaintiffs was caused by the defendant's breach, the profit realized by the plaintiffs from a post-breach sale was not "caused by the breach" but was "attributable to the [plaintiffs'] decision to hold [the property] until [its] condition and the market were favorable for sale"].)

[19] In so holding, the court rejects UBS's contention that it would have been entitled to retain the CDS assets, regardless of the Fund Counterparties' breach, because the Agreements would have terminated in any event as of March 14, 2009, at which point UBS would have had the contractual right to retain the assets. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8.) This assertion is not only speculative but ignores that UBS did in fact acquire the right to retain the assets upon the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements as a result of their failure to meet the third collateral call. For the reasons discussed in the text, however, the court cannot accept Highland's further contention that UBS realized gains on the retained CDSs because of the breach.

Nor does Highland successfully argue that the gains realized by UBS on the post-breach disposition of the assets must be offset under general principles which require a party who suffers damages as a result of another's breach to take reasonable steps to mitigate its damages. (See Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 5-9.) Highland cites cases requiring mitigation in connection with the purchase and sale of securities and transactions in other markets. (See e.g. Drummond v Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., No. 95 Civ. 2011 [DC], 1996 WL 631723, * 2-3 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Oct. 31, 1996] [holding that where the buyer breached a contract to purchase securities, the seller must take steps to mitigate its damages by selling the securities within "a reasonable period of time"]; Saboundjian v Bank Audi (USA), 157 AD2d 278, 284-285 [1st Dept 1990] [holding that where a broker failed to execute a customer's speculative currency exchange order, the customer was required to direct execution of the trade "within a reasonable time after he learned that it had not been effected earlier"].)

These cases are inapposite, as the SWA affords UBS the contractual right to retain the securities upon the Fund Counterparties' breach. Ironically, although purporting to rely on these cases, which in fact require that the non-breaching party mitigate within a reasonable period of time, Highland argues not that UBS was required to dispose of the CDSs within a reasonable period of time after the breach but that it was required to hold them for months and, indeed, years, until the market improved. Highland thus asserts that UBS reasonably mitigated by "holding (as opposed to fire selling) fully performing interest and premium-bearing assets in the face of a dysfunctional market. . . ," and that "UBS's mitigation was not only reasonable, but required by law." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 7.) Put another way, Highland does not identify a specific date or dates by which UBS was required to mitigate. To the contrary, without citation to any legal authority, Highland argues that UBS was required to hold the assets for an indefinite period, until the market improved, to minimize its losses.

The mitigation cases provide no support for Highland's assertion that UBS's disposition, months and years after the breach, of assets that it had a contractual right to retain, constitutes mitigation.[20] Rather, in claiming that it is entitled to "offsets" for the post-breach gains realized by UBS, Highland appears in effect to advance a measure of damages that is patently inconsistent with the fundamental tenet of the date of breach measure of damages—namely, that a non-breaching party's damages for assets with a determinable market value must be calculated

at the date of breach, not based on hindsight, and that neither party can select the date on which the damages calculation will be most favorable to it. Thus, a non-breaching buyer cannot select the date on which the assets "had their highest value or a period of time that was profitable but that excludes periods when losses occurred." (See Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) Similarly, a breaching buyer cannot avoid or reduce the damages caused by its breach by invoking post-breach decreases in the value of the assets. (See id.)

The court accordingly holds that Highland's request for an offset for UBS's post-breach gains from the disposition of the CDSs must be denied.

Offset for Right of First Refusal Counterclaim

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) seeks judgment on its first counterclaim against plaintiff UBS Securities LLC for breach of the Cash Warehouse Agreement provision affording it the right to purchase CLO assets in the event UBS elected to retain such assets upon the termination of the Agreement. Section 5 (A) of the CWA provides that in event of failure to close, "UBS shall be authorized (but not required) to sell each Collateral Obligation then in the Warehouse Account in accordance with the Liquidation Procedures." The Liquidation Procedures set forth in section 7 (A) of the CWA provide in pertinent part:

> "If any Collateral Obligation is to be sold, UBS shall have the right to direct such sale on such terms and in such manner and at such time that it deems appropriate in its sole discretion. UBS may, in its sole discretion, elect to retain any such Collateral Obligation or to sell such Collateral Obligation to one of UBS's Affiliates in which event, for purposes of determining Net Collateral Gain and Net Collateral Loss, such Collateral Obligation shall be deemed to have been liquidated at a price equal to its Market Value. To the extent that UBS in its sole discretion elects to retain such Collateral Obligation, the Servicer will have the right to purchase such Collateral Obligation at its Market Value."

Section 7 (A) further provides that if UBS elects to sell CLOs upon termination, "the Servicer will have the right to bid for and purchase such Collateral Obligation at a purchase price equal to the highest third party bid received by UBS for the purchase of such Collateral Obligation."

It is undisputed that Highland Capital notified UBS that it sought to purchase six of the CLOs with a bid price of $1.9 million and a notional value of $44 million, but that it sought to provide the funds for the purchase, and to settle the trades, in the name of one of its affiliates, CLO Value Fund. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 21.) UBS declined to agree to the sale to the Highland Capital affiliate. (Id.; DX 72; PX 292.)

The court is unpersuaded that a Highland Capital affiliate had the right, under the CWA, to purchase the CLOs. Section 7 (A), which governs the disposition of the CLO assets upon termination, expressly affords one UBS Affiliate the right to purchase CLOs. In contrast, this Section affords the right to purchase only to the Servicer, and not to any other Highland entity. The Servicer is defined as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (CWA, First Paragraph.) Reading the CWA as a whole, the court further finds that no other provision modifies or is inconsistent with this limitation. On the contrary, where the acts of Highland Capital's Affiliates were implicated, the CWA expressly referred to the Affiliates. (CWA, § 13 [B] [limiting the liability of the "Servicer" "for any acts or omissions by the Servicer or any Affiliate of the Servicer, or any of their directors, officers, members, agents, equity holders [and others] under or in connection with this Agreement, or for any decrease in the value of the Collateral Portfolio . . . ."].)[21] The court accordingly holds that the CWA unambiguously provides that the right to purchase retained CLOs is limited, among the Highland entities, to Highland Capital.

In view of this holding that the CWA is not ambiguous with respect to Highland's post-

[21] The parties to the transaction knew how to afford rights to purchase assets to Affiliates of the Servicer. The SWA provides that if the closing fails to occur, UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, novate CDSs "to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer). . . ." (SWA § 6 [A].) The omission from the CWA of authorization to Affiliate(s) of the Servicer to purchase CLOs is therefore notable. Moreover, Highland Capital does not claim that the concerns—regulatory and other—that are implicated in novating CDSs are comparable to those in selling CLOs.

termination right to purchase CLOs, the court rejects Highland's contention that the court should consider evidence allegedly showing that UBS and Highland Capital had a prior course of conduct in which UBS permitted Highland Capital to settle trades "at its fund level." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 80-81.) Parol evidence of course of conduct is not admissible to construe an unambiguous contract. (See e.g. Sigismondi v Queens Transit Corp., 38 AD2d 71, 73 [2d Dept 1971], affd no opinion 32 NY2d 745 [1973]; Evans v Famous Music Corp., 1 NY3d 452, 459 [2004].)

The court further notes that even if Highland Capital could recover on its counterclaim, the damages it seeks are not recoverable. Highland Capital seeks a finding that because the CLOs continued to perform until maturity, "it would have profited $46 million" if it had been permitted to exercise its right of first refusal to purchase the CLOs. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 82; DX Demo. 9.) As Highland Capital acknowledges, however, the market value of the CLOs at the time of breach was $1,934,214. (DX Demo. 9.) The measure of damages, as explained above in connection with Highland Capital's claim for offsets against UBS's damages, is the market value of the assets as of the date of breach, not the increase in their value in the indefinite future.

Offset for Unjust Enrichment

Highland Capital also seeks judgment on its second counterclaim alleging that UBS was unjustly enriched by its failure to permit Highland Capital, through its affiliate CLO Value Fund, to purchase the Collateral Obligations upon termination. This claim for unjust enrichment is not maintainable as the right to purchase is governed by contract—the CWA. (See generally Pappas v Tzolis, 20 NY3d 228, 234 [2012], rearg denied 20 NY3d 1075 [2013]; Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v Long Is. R.R. Co., 70 NY2d 382, 388-389 [1987].)

Offset for Settlements with Highland Affiliates

Highland also requests an offset for settlements with three Highland Affiliates—Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. (Credit Strategies), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. (Crusader Offshore), and Highland Crusader Holding Corporation (Crusader Holding) (collectively, the Settling Highland Affiliates). Credit Strategies and Crusader Offshore were defendants in this action. UBS asserted its fraudulent conveyance cause of action against them as well as all of the other defendants. (Second Am Compl., Fifth Cause of Action.) Crusader Holding was a defendant in a separate complaint, which asserted a fraudulent conveyance cause of action against it. (UBS Secs. LLC v Highland Crusader Holding Corp., Sup Ct, NY County, Index No. 652646/11, Compl., First Cause of Action; Ps.'s Letters, dated July 21, 2015 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 397]; Jan. 7, 2016 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 398].) This court bifurcated the trial of this action, directing that it would first hold a bench trial on the breach of contract claims, which were triable by the court and are the subject of this decision, and that the fraudulent conveyance and other claims, which are triable by a jury, would be heard subsequently. (May 1, 2018 Decision on the Record [NYSCEF Doc. No. 494].)

The parties dispute whether the confidential settlements (DX 76 id and DX 77 id) may be considered in this action. They also dispute whether the settlements may be offset, pursuant to statute or case law, against the damages awarded by this decision to UBS against the Fund Counterparties on the breach of contract causes of action. (See Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 14-21; Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 15-19, 21-24.)

Even assuming, without deciding, that the damages may be subject to offset by the settlements, the determination of whether or to what extent the offset should be allowed must await determination of the jury trial. Where an offset for a settlement is sought, "the damages against which the settlement is sought to be applied should be determined so a proper comparison can be made between them and the damages covered by the settlement." (Carter v.

State of New York, 139 Misc 2d 423, 429 [Ct Cl, 1988], affd 154 AD2d 642 [2d Dept 1989]; accord Moller v North Shore Univ. Hosp., 12 F3d 13, 16 [2d Cir 1993] [applying New York law].)

Here, Highland argues that the causes of action against the settling defendants are "wholly derivative of its breach-of-contract claims against the Fund counterparties." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 16.) UBS persuasively argues, in opposition, that the fraudulent conveyance causes of action seek relief in addition to compensatory damages, including imposition of a constructive trust and punitive damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo, at 22-24; Second Am. Compl., at 57-58.) Moreover, the damages, if any, that will be awarded against the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital on the fraudulent conveyance cause of action remain to be determined at the jury trial. On this record the court accordingly cannot compare the settlements with the fraudulent conveyance damages. Nor is there any basis for the court to determine the extent to which the settlements cover the same damages, or damages that overlap with, the breach of contract damages awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties by this decision. The determination of the offset issue will therefore be deferred pending the jury trial. As it appears, however, that Highland may be entitled to an offset for some or all of the settlement amounts, the court will stay enforcement, to the extent of the settlement amount ($70.5 million), of the judgment to be awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties for the damages for breach of contract.

Conclusion

UBS is entitled to damages for $519,374,149 on the third and fourth causes of action against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements. Enforcement of the judgment for this amount will be stayed up to $70.5 million, the amount of the settlements with the Settling Highland Affiliates.

[22] By letter dated October 17, 2019 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 640), counsel (Reid Collins & Tsai LLP) for Highland Capital, the Fund Counterparties and other Highland defendants, advised the court of Highland Capital's bankruptcy filing, and represented that the automatic stay does not preclude decision of the causes of action against the Fund Counterparties or the counterclaim by Highland Capital. This letter sought to reserve defendants' position on the effect of the bankruptcy filing on subsequent proceedings in this action.

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	)	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	)	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (SGJ)
Debtor.	)

ADDENDUM TO PROOF OF CLAIM FILED BY UBS AG, LONDON BRANCH

1. UBS Securities LLC hereby submits this addendum to its proof of claim (together, the "Proof of Claim") against Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Chapter 11 Case").

2. UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch (together, the "Claimant" or "UBS") each have claims against the Debtor and each is filing a proof of claim in this Chapter 11 Case. Because their claims arise from the same set of factual events, including the same failed transaction, misconduct involving the Debtor and its affiliates, and subsequent litigation, the UBS claims overlap and their proof of claim forms and addendums are substantially the same.

3. This addendum is attached to, incorporated into, and constitutes an integral part of Claimant's Proof of Claim against the Debtor. Claimant files this Proof of Claim under compulsion of the Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488], as extended by the Joint Stipulation and Order Extending Bar Date [Docket No. 547] and modified by the Order Denying UBS's Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay to Proceed with State Court Action [Docket No. 765], solely for the purpose of asserting Claimant's claims against the Debtor, as more particularly described and subject to any limitations set forth below.

Factual Background

A. The Knox Transaction

2. Claimant's claims arise out of a failed transaction dating back thirteen years ago and the state court action (the "State Court Action") that followed between Claimant, the Debtor, Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC") (together with CDO Fund, the "Fund Counterparties," and the Fund Parties and the Debtor collectively, "Highland"), among other parties.[2]

3. In early 2007, Claimant and Highland agreed to pursue a complex form of securitization transaction known as a "CLO Squared" (the "Knox Transaction"). (Ex. B, Decision at 2.) The purpose of the Knox Transaction was to acquire and securitize a series of collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities and credit default swap ("CDS") assets (the "Knox Assets"). To that end, the Debtor agreed to be the "Servicer" of the Knox Transaction, and as such was responsible for identifying the specific CLO and CDS assets to be securitized. Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets identified by Highland. Claimant would then hold, or "warehouse," the assets until the securitization was completed (the "Knox Warehouse"). Under this arrangement, Claimant financed the acquisition of $818 million in Knox Assets. (Id.)

[2] The procedural history of the State Court Action is incorporated by reference, but is voluminous. The operative Second Amended Complaint and Phase I Decision and Order are attached as Exhibit A and Exhibit B, respectively. Additional pleadings and orders can be found on the State Court docket for Index No. 650097/2009 or by contacting Claimant's counsel. Claimant reserves the right to file a copy of additional pleadings or orders with this Court.

4. The parties' first attempt at the Knox Transaction was not completed successfully and the relevant agreements expired in August 2007 without the contemplated securitization having occurred. (Id. at 3.) Rather than end their relationship, however, Highland and Claimant continued to consider the possibility of pursuing the contemplated securitization in 2008 under restructured versions of the prior agreements. Highland and Claimant always understood that—if the securitization were not successful—the Fund Counterparties would be obligated to pay Claimant for 100% of the losses on any CLO or CDS assets that been acquired and warehoused for the securitization. In order to convince Claimant to agree to enter restructured versions of those agreements and to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets, Highland assured Claimant that the Fund Counterparties had sufficient assets to cover any losses. It did so by providing Claimant with false, incomplete, and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 47-61.)

5. In addition, Claimant specifically conditioned its agreement to enter the restructured agreements on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post an additional $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral"), in which Claimant would hold a security interest. (Id. ¶¶ 56-59; Ex. B, Decision at 3.) Highland assembled $70 million in such Initial Restructuring Collateral. But what Highland did not tell Claimant—and what is now clear was omitted on purpose—was that the Fund Counterparties did not own all of the Initial Restructuring Collateral they were expected to post. Instead, to meet this obligation, the Debtor exercised its control over other Highland affiliates, transferring and redirecting assets from such other entities that it controlled to assemble the Initial Restructuring Collateral. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 56-59.)

6. Similarly, while negotiating the restructured transaction, Highland provided Claimant with financial reports and statements that contained materially false and misleading information and omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 47-52.) The Debtor itself had prepared these financial statements and knew they contained material misstatements. (Id. ¶¶ 48-50, 54.) Among other things, Highland misrepresented the amount of cash held by CDO Fund. (Id. ¶ 52.) Highland also failed to disclose that many of the assets on the Fund Counterparties' financial statements already had been encumbered. (Id. ¶¶ 51, 53.) These misrepresentations not only evince a specific intent by Highland to induce Claimant into entering the restructured agreements, but a longstanding willingness to prevent Claimant from ever recovering the amounts owed under the parties' proposed agreements in the event the Knox Assets suffered any losses. In addition, these events show the Debtor's singular control over—and ability to move—assets from one Highland affiliate to another at will.

7. Based on Highland's material misstatements and omissions, Claimant agreed to pursue the restructured transaction and once more attempt the securitization, and the parties executed three new written agreements: an Engagement Letter, a Cash Warehouse Agreement, and a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (collectively, the "Warehouse Agreements"). (See Ex. B, Decision at 3.) The Engagement Letter was executed by Claimant and the Debtor; the Fund Counterparties were not parties to the Engagement Letter. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 62.) The Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements were executed by Claimant and the Debtor, along with the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 64-65.)

8. As described above, Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets that the parties planned to securitize. In so doing, the key risk Claimant faced was the possibility that the Knox Assets would lose value while securitization was pending. To address this risk, Claimant and the Debtor agreed in the Engagement Letter that the Fund Counterparties would bear this risk. Notably, at the time, the Debtor was the Investment Manager to the Fund Counterparties under agreements that gave the Debtor total control over those entities. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26.)

9. The Warehouse Agreements reiterated that the Fund Counterparties (as controlled by the Debtor) would bear the risk, specifying that if the Knox Assets lost value while securitization was pending, the Fund Counterparties "will in aggregate bear 100% of the risk" for the Knox Assets—with CDO Fund bearing 51% of any losses and SOHC bearing the remaining 49%.

10. To further protect Claimant in the event that the Knox Assets lost value, the Warehouse Agreements provided for recurring measurements of mark-to-market losses on all assets in the Knox Warehouse and required the Fund Counterparties to post collateral in the event the Knox Assets lost a set amount of value. Specifically, the parties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post an additional $10 million in collateral for each $100 million in losses to the overall value of the Knox Assets. (Ex. B, Decision at 4.)

11. In September and October 2008, amid the global economic recession, the value of the Knox Assets dropped by $100 million, twice. Thus, Claimant twice exercised its contractual right to demand additional collateral. And twice Highland posted the required collateral. (Id.) Although the Warehouse Agreements specified that it was the Fund Counterparties who would post collateral, the Debtor moved assets around from other entities it controlled to make the first two collateral calls (without disclosing this practice to Claimant). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 79.) On or about November 7, 2008, Claimant issued a third margin call, because the value of the Knox Assets suffered additional losses of $200 million (bringing the aggregate losses to over $400 million).

(Ex. B, Decision at 4.) This time, Highland refused to provide the additional collateral required under the Warehouse Agreements.

12. Highland's default on Claimant's third margin call triggered a termination event under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.) On December 5, 2008, Claimant gave Highland formal notice of default and demanded the Fund Counterparties pay Claimant for 100% of the losses incurred on the Knox Assets—which had, by then, grown to over $520 million.

13. There is no question that the Debtor knew the Fund Counterparties were liable for the losses under the Warehouse Agreements. Indeed, the Highland officer who executed the Warehouse Agreements admitted under oath that, "as of the end of the year 2008," Highland knew that the Fund Counterparties owed Claimant "hundreds of millions of dollars in connection with the Knox Warehouse Agreements." (Travers Dep. at 261:8-20).) But rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, the Debtor, with Mr. Dondero at the helm, "devised a strategy to delay the resolution of that obligation [to pay Claimant] for as long as possible." (Id.) To that end, Highland devised and subsequently deployed a multifaceted strategy—one that would last for many years thereafter—to intentionally frustrate and prevent Claimant from recovering any of the amounts that both the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties knew were rightfully owed to Claimant under the Warehouse Agreements.

14. First, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold any payment to Claimant—a position that the Fund Counterparties maintained (again, under the specific direction of the Debtor) for more than a decade. (See id.) The Debtor did so not only with the specific knowledge that the Fund Counterparties owed hundreds of millions of dollars to Claimant for the losses on the Knox Assets, but with the knowledge that Claimant would come seeking payment for such losses and, in particular, to look toward any and all collateral owned by the Fund Counterparties as one source of payment. As one of Highland's officers stated an internal email to Mr. Dondero in an internal email dated January 16, 2009: "[UBS] is going to be calling [] today asking for all additional collateral that cdo and sohc have left to cover the obligation left by the knox transaction." But rather than turning over the collateral in question to Claimant or, at the very least, securing such assets so that they could be used to pay Claimant, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold such assets and payments from Claimant: "[T]hey can see us in court for their additional collateral." True to that promise, even after Claimant filed suit and laid out the amounts due under the contracts, the Debtor forced the Fund Counterparties to launch an affirmative, multi-year campaign—one which would consume much of the cash and assets belonging to the Fund Counterparties themselves—to stave off any payment from the Fund Counterparties to force Claimant to try to recover such claims through litigation and, once in litigation, devising knowingly baseless defenses and arguments for the Fund Counterparties to assert in such litigation.

15. On top of directing the Fund Counterparties to withhold payment and force Claimant to litigate for amounts the Debtor already knew they rightfully owed to Claimant, the Debtor undertook a litany of other actions to ensure that, even if Claimant were successful in the litigation it had been forced to initiate against the Fund Counterparties, it would not be able to collect any judgment arising out of the litigation. Such actions included, but were not limited to, a series of fraudulent transfers out of, and away from, an alter ego of SOHC, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 109.) These internal transfers of funds—all overseen by James Dondero, the Debtor's founder and president—were designed to prevent Claimant from ever collecting the millions of dollars it was owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

16. In addition to such fraudulent transfers, the Debtor also took steps after the lawsuit was filed to ensure that no additional value would be transferred to the Fund Counterparties—deliberately taking steps to keep both SOHC and CDO Fund undercapitalized. Not only did the Debtor prevent additional value from being transferred to the Fund Counterparties, it is clear that the Debtor also failed to ensure that the Fund Counterparties retained assets that could be used to pay any such judgment. Quite to the contrary, it is now clear that any and all assets of any value that once belonged to the Fund Counterparties have, in one way or another, been transferred away, drained, or otherwise wasted by the Fund Counterparties, the Debtor itself, or the Debtor's affiliates—all at the Debtor's direction. Indeed, in a recent filing before this Court, the Debtor recently disclosed that both of the Fund Counterparties are completely "insolvent." (Docket No. 687 at 1.) This means that—separate and apart from the transfers of assets out of, and away from, HFP that occurred in 2009—the Debtor has directed, or otherwise permitted, the Fund Counterparties to engage in acts that have left these once marque investment funds with literally no assets that can be used to pay Claimant. All such actions and omissions by the Debtor were performed with either the specific intent to prevent or frustrate Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements, or a wanton and reckless disregard of Claimant's rights to those amounts. Such actions and omissions constitute breaches of the Debtor's duty of good faith and fair dealing under the Warehouse Agreements.

B. The State Court Action and the Debtor's Efforts to Avoid Paying Claimant

17. On February 24, 2009, Claimant filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York (the "State Court") against the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties. With knowledge of Claimant's lawsuit, the Debtor exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties to ensure they would not meet their obligations and to impede Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed by those entities. (Id. ¶¶ 112, 114.) Rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, and as discussed above, the Debtor orchestrated an extensive multi-part strategy to delay resolution of Claimant's claims for as long as possible. As a result, the Debtor further interfered with Claimant's contractual rights, thereby breaching the covenants of good faith and fair dealing inherent in the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.)

18. By this time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, HFP, had become insolvent, although they still owned significant assets. (Id. ¶ 108.) Nonetheless, the Debtor failed to act in good faith to cause HFP to satisfy the debts, as much as possible, then owed to Claimant. Instead, the Debtor caused HFP to make additional improper and fraudulent asset transfers, deliberately kept the Fund Counterparties undercapitalized, and allowed all assets of any value to be drained from the Fund Counterparties—acts which not only impaired Claimant's ability to recover anything from the Fund Counterparties, but precluded it altogether. (Id. ¶ 111.) In March 2009, conscious that Claimant had commenced an action against Highland a few weeks earlier, and in breach of their continuing duty of good faith and fair dealing, and with actual fraudulent intent, the Debtor and HFP caused asset transfers of millions of dollars of assets to the Debtor, Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (now Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) (collectively, the "Affiliated Transferee Defendants"), among others, thereby further reducing Highland's abilities to meet their obligations to Claimant. (Id. ¶¶ 111, 113.) The Debtor and its principals exercised domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties and HFP for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of the Debtor and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, the Debtor and its principals made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay Claimant the losses that they and the Debtor had agreed they would pay under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id. ¶¶ 112-114.)

19. As Claimant learned about Highland's conduct through discovery, Claimant amended its complaint to assert additional claims and name additional Highland entities, including HFP, the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, and Strand Advisors, Inc. As amended and stated in its Second Amended Complaint (attached hereto as Exhibit A) in the State Court Action, filed on May 11, 2011, Claimant's claims include breach of contract claims directly against the Fund Counterparties, as well as claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference, and declaratory judgments for alter ego liability against HFP and general partner liability against Strand Advisors, Inc. The Debtor subsequently brought counterclaims against Claimant for breach of contract and unjust enrichment. (See Ex. B, Decision at 35-37.)

20. The procedural history of the State Court Action is complex. The Debtor and its affiliates and Claimant filed, and the State Court ruled on, four sets of motions to dismiss. The Debtor and its affiliates then filed two sets of summary judgment motions, which led to a series of complex rulings by the State Court in 2017. The parties filed various interlocutory appeals of the State Court's rulings on the motions to dismiss and for summary judgment. Those appeals were heard by the Appellate Division for the First Judicial Department in the County of New York, with the Appellate Division issuing five decisions over this suit's protracted history (some of which are still subject to further appellate rights).

21. Also included in the Appellate Division's decisions was an order arising from an appeal of the State Court's ruling on Claimant's motion to restrain Defendants Highland Credit

Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P. from disposing of property received through the fraudulent transfers orchestrated by the Debtor. Claimant showed it had a likelihood of success on the merits of its fraudulent transfer claims, and the Appellate Division enjoined both Highland entities from disposing of their assets. Ultimately, these injunctions resulted in partial settlements between Claimant and Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P.

22. By early 2018, more than nine years after Claimant first filed suit, the parties were finally ready to proceed to trial. Due to a jury waiver clause in the Warehouse Agreements, however, and after related pre-trial briefing, the State Court bifurcated Claimant's claims into two distinct phases for trial: Phase I, consisting of a bench trial on Claimant's claims against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, as well as the Debtor's counterclaims; and Phase II, consisting of a jury trial on Claimant's remaining claims against all remaining Highland entities, including the Debtor.[3] (Ex. B, Decision at 2 n.1, 38.)

23. The State Court presided over a thirteen-day bench trial for Phase I from July 9 through July 27, 2018. (Id. at 1.) On November 14, 2019, the State Court entered a Decision and Order on Phase I (attached hereto as Exhibit B), ruling in favor of Claimant on almost every issue presented in Phase I. In particular, the court found the Fund Counterparties liable to Claimant for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, found no liability on the part of Claimant for either of the Debtor's counterclaims, and rejected almost every one of the Debtor's offset arguments with the only remaining issue (affecting approximately $70,500,000) to be determined after Phase II. (Id. at 39.) An Entry of Judgment on Phase I was entered on February 10, 2020. Under that Phase I final judgment, Claimant is entitled to $1,039,957,799.44, consisting of $519,374,149.00 in damages and $520,583,650.44 in pre-judgment interest as of January 22, 2020, with additional interest of $128,065 having accrued daily until the Entry of Judgment.

24. The next step in the State Court Action is Phase II of the trial, where Claimant's remaining claims against not only the Debtor, but also against other Highland affiliates are to be tried to a jury, with the court deciding liability as to the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim and the jury deciding all remaining claims. (Id. at 2 n.1, 38.) The claims to be tried in Phase II include claims for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyances, and alter-ego liability. The specific amounts the two non-Debtor affiliates owe to Claimant for their breach of the Warehouse Agreements are now set forth and embodied in the final $1 billion judgment from Phase I. And Claimant has stated claims against the Debtor—which was also a party to the same contract and exercised complete control over the two liable affiliates—under which Claimant is entitled to damages that are at least as much as the Phase I judgment amount. Claimant will seek damages for the Debtor's various breaches of the implied covenant as well as its specific role in the fraudulent transfer scheme, and pre-judgment interest and attorneys' fees where available. In addition, Claimant will seek punitive damages against the Debtor for its role in orchestrating the extended efforts to prevent Claimant from collecting the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

25. Currently, Phase II of the State Court Action is stayed against the Debtor by the automatic stay imposed pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code when the Debtor commenced this Chapter 11 Case.

26. Claimant hereby asserts a claim, pending litigation of Phase II, for damages arising from the Debtor's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, its specific role in directing the fraudulent transfers of assets involving HFP, additional interest, further damages (including punitive damages), and attorneys' fees that may be awarded by any court at the conclusion of Phase II.

Reservation of Rights

27. Claimant does not waive or release, and expressly reserves, all rights and remedies at law or in equity that it has or may have against the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, Strand Advisors, Inc., other non-Debtor Highland Defendants, or any other Debtor affiliate, subsidiary, person, or entity.

28. Claimant expressly reserves all of its rights to assert any additional claims, defenses, remedies, and causes of action, including without limitation, claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, tortious interference with contractual relations, fraudulent conveyances, or alter ego recovery. Claimant further reserves all rights to amend, modify, supplement, reclassify, or otherwise revise its Proof of Claim at any time and in any respect, including, without limitation, as necessary or appropriate to amend, quantify or correct amounts, to provide additional detail regarding the claims set forth herein, to assert additional grounds for any of the claims, to seek reconsideration under section 502(j) of the Bankruptcy Code or otherwise of any disallowance of any amounts claimed hereunder, or to reflect any and all additional claims of whatever kind or nature that Claimant has or may have against the Debtor.

29. To the extent any payment to Claimant based on this Proof of Claim, or any portion thereof, is clawed back from Claimant, avoided, or set aside, for any reason whatsoever, or Claimant is required to disgorge any such payment, or any portion thereof, Claimant hereby reserves its rights to amend this Proof of Claim accordingly.

30. The execution and filing of this Proof of Claim is not intended as, nor should it be construed as or deemed to be any of the following: (i) a waiver of the right to seek withdrawal of the reference, or to otherwise challenge the jurisdiction of this Court, with respect to the subject matter of the claims asserted herein, any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect thereto, or any other action or proceeding commenced in this Chapter 11 Case against or otherwise involving Claimant; (ii) an admission that any matter is a core matter for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b) or is a matter as to which this Court can enter a final order or judgment consistent with Article III of the United States Constitution; (iii) a waiver of the right to de novo review by the district court of any order or judgment for which this Court, absent Claimant's consent, lacks authority to enter a final order or judgment; (iv) a consent to the entry by this Court of a final order or judgment with respect to the claims asserted herein or any other matter; (v) a waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against the Debtor, as applicable, or waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against any of the non-Debtor Defendants; (vi) a waiver or release of the claims or rights of Claimant against any other entity or person that may be liable for all or any part of the claims or any matters related to the claims asserted herein; (vii) a waiver of any rights and remedies Claimant has or may have under the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract, whether mentioned in this Proof of Claim or not; (viii) a waiver of Claimant's contractual right to seek to have these or any other claims settled by binding arbitration; (ix) a waiver of any right related to the confirmation of any plan of reorganization proposed in this Chapter 11 Case, or any other insolvency-related proceeding that may be commenced, either in the United States or abroad, by or against the Debtor, or any non-Debtor affiliate; (x) a waiver or agreement granting any party relief; or (xi) an election of remedies.

31. Neither this Proof of Claim nor any of its contents shall be deemed or construed as an acknowledgment or admission of any liability or obligation on the part of Claimant. Claimant specifically reserves all of its defenses and rights, procedural and substantive, including, without limitation, its rights with respect to any claim that may be asserted against Claimant by the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, or any affiliate of the Debtor, and its rights to enforce the Cash Warehouse or Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract.

Right of Setoff and Recoupment

32. Claimant reserves all rights of setoff and recoupment that it may have. To the extent the Debtor or any non-Debtor affiliate asserts any claim against Claimant, Claimant shall have a secured claim to the extent of its right of setoff under section 553 of the Bankruptcy Code or right of recoupment against such claim with respect to the claims asserted herein and any amendments thereto.

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. UBS brings this action to recover damages in excess of $686 million resulting from the wrongful conduct of defendants, based on causes of action for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, fraudulent conveyances, and declaratory judgment.

2. Counterclaim-plaintiff Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland Capital") is a defendant in the action commenced by UBS (the "Highland Capital Action") concurrently with the filing of the First Amended Complaint in this action. The Highland Capital Action was consolidated with this action by a Decision and Order, entered by this Court on October 7, 2010 (this action and the Highland Capital Action are referred to herein as the "Consolidated Action"). Together with Highland Capital, the Fund Counterparties fraudulently induced UBS to restructure a transaction to avoid Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' contractual obligation to pay UBS over $86 million. Once Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties succeeded in misleading UBS into restructuring the original transaction, Highland Capital and its affiliates made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to meet their obligations to UBS by stripping the Fund Counterparties of their valuable assets through fraudulent conveyances and otherwise dealing in bad faith with their contractual obligations to UBS.

3. When UBS finally terminated the restructured transaction and demanded payment from Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, it was owed in excess of $686 million that the Fund Counterparties could not pay because of the misappropriations and improper transfers of assets directed by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Even after UBS demanded payment, Highland Capital and defendants engaged in further unlawful conduct that harmed UBS by [redacted]

SUMMARY OF THE ACTION

4. This action arises out of Highland Capital's efforts in the Spring of 2007 to sponsor a collateralized debt obligation ("CDO") securitization (the "Original Engagement"). In connection with the Original Engagement, UBS agreed to finance the purchase of various collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities, as well as credit default swap obligations that referenced similar CLO securities. UBS agreed to hold or "warehouse" the CLO securities and credit default swaps (collectively, the "Warehouse Assets" or "Warehouse Facility") for Highland Capital's benefit.

5. On or about August 15, 2007, the Original Engagement terminated by its terms without the contemplated securitization having occurred. As a result of the termination, Highland Capital and two of its affiliates, the Fund Counterparties, owed UBS in excess of $86 million related to the decline in the value of the Warehouse Assets.

6. Instead of paying UBS what it was owed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties fraudulently induced UBS to restructure the Original Engagement by providing UBS with false, incomplete and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Using both affirmative material misrepresentations and omissions (material facts or information needed to be disclosed to make the statements actually made not misleading, and which were not disclosed, are referred to hereinafter as "Omissions"), Highland Capital, its principals and the Fund Counterparties misled UBS regarding the financial health of the Fund Counterparties and their creditworthiness, thereby causing UBS to forego recovering its losses from Highland Capital in favor of agreeing to restructure the terms of the parties' prior agreements (the "Restructured Transaction").

7. For example, the strength of the Fund Counterparties' financial statements, and their purported ability to use the hundreds of millions of dollars worth of assets reflected therein to satisfy future obligations to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements were material to UBS's decision to agree to the restructuring. Consequently, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, UBS conditioned any restructuring on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral") with State Street Bank and Trust Company ("State Street"), in which UBS would hold a security interest. [redacted] Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties were able to conceal important information about the Fund Counterparties' financial weakness that was both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS, and which would have caused UBS not to enter the Restructured Transaction.

8. Similarly, while negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided UBS with financial reports and statements for the Fund Counterparties. The financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS contained materially false and misleading information and Omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. Among other things, [redacted]

9. In reliance on material misstatements and Omissions made by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, UBS agreed to restructure the Original Engagement, and thereby were fraudulently induced to give up contractual rights under the terms of the Original Engagement. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to believe that Highland Capital and its affiliates would provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets, as they in fact did.

10. Had UBS known that the Fund Counterparties could not [redacted], it would not have gone forward with the Restructured Transaction. UBS never would have agreed to the Restructured Transaction had it known prior to entering the Restructured Transaction the true status of the Fund Counterparties' financial condition and the true fair market value of the Fund Counterparties' holdings that would have been available to satisfy their then-existing and future obligations to UBS. UBS's losses described herein were directly and proximately caused by the conduct of Highland Capital and the defendants as described herein.

11. Almost immediately after UBS agreed to the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital began the process of making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to ever repay UBS what they owed. In particular, exercising its control over the Fund Counterparties, Highland Capital caused the Fund Counterparties to transfer cash for the benefit of Highland Capital and its principals, and, separately, in violation of UBS's rights, [redacted], all during a time when the Fund Counterparties owed UBS hundreds of millions of dollars.

12. For example, in or around May 2008, Highland Capital caused the dissipation of approximately $100 million in cash that CDO Fund held after it sold a long position in a company called SunCom Wireless. Highland Capital drained CDO Fund's cash resources despite CDO Fund's ever-increasing obligations to UBS. Highland Capital's bad faith conduct caused injury to UBS by making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to satisfy their contractual obligations to UBS.

13. In September 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility continued to grow, UBS began to exercise its contractual rights and make margin calls demanding additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. Because Highland Capital had routinely taken cash out of the Fund Counterparties, the Fund Counterparties were undercapitalized and lacked assets and liquidity to meet UBS's demands for additional collateral.

14. Highland Capital and its principals, including its president and founder, James D. Dondero, knew that if the Fund Counterparties defaulted on their obligations to UBS (or any other creditor), Highland Capital's ability to conduct business in the financial community and to keep or solicit investors would be harmed. Investors in Highland Capital's hedge fund family would withdraw their investments. In addition, creditors would take actions to protect themselves, including foreclosing on collateral and aggressively enforcing their contractual rights. Highland Capital and its principals were concerned that upon the disclosure of the true state of their affairs, their business would collapse.

15. To avoid that result, Highland Capital and its principals resorted to

16. Highland Capital's and its principals' belated attempt to protect their reputation by continuing to fraudulently portray the Fund Counterparties as viable independent entities was ultimately unsuccessful. By late October 2008, Highland Capital could no longer continue to prop up the Fund Counterparties.

17. On or about November 11, 2008, UBS demanded additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. The Fund Counterparties defaulted. On December 3, 2008, UBS terminated the Restructured Transaction. As a result of UBS's termination of the Restructured Transaction, the Fund Counterparties were contractually obligated to pay UBS in excess of $686 million.

18. On or about February 24, 2009, UBS filed the original complaint in this Court against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Warehouse Agreements that had been entered in connection with the Restructured Transaction. By that time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, Highland Financial, had been insolvent and unable to pay their creditors for some time. Nonetheless, Highland Capital and Highland Financial [redacted]

19. In sum, after fraudulently inducing UBS to agree to the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and its principals exercised their domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of Highland Capital and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, they made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay UBS the losses they had agreed to pay on the Warehouse Facility.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

32. Venue in this Court is proper under CPLR 503 because plaintiff UBSS has a principal place of business in New York County.

33. Venue is also proper under CPLR 501, and this Court may exercise jurisdiction over the Fund Counterparties because UBS, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties all agreed in writing, before this action was commenced, to submit to such jurisdiction and venue, in connection with any dispute that may arise out of, in connection with, or related to, the Agreements (defined below), or any of the matters contemplated thereby. This Court also may exercise jurisdiction over Highland Financial because it is the alter ego of SOHC.

34. This Court also may exercise jurisdiction over all defendants pursuant to CPLR 301 and 302(a)(1) and (3), because defendants regularly transact and solicit business in New York, committed tortious acts causing injury in New York, should reasonably have expected that their tortious acts would have consequences in New York, the effect of their wrongful conduct was felt in New York, and/or derive substantial revenue from interstate or international commerce. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Original Engagement

35. In or around April 2007, Highland Capital approached UBS for short-term financing in connection with a securitization that Highland Capital wanted to sponsor. UBS agreed to do so (the "Original Engagement").

36. On or about April 20, 2007, UBSS and Highland Capital entered into an engagement letter (the "Original Engagement Letter"), which contemplated that UBSS would act as the exclusive financial arranger and placement agent for a type of collateralized debt obligation transaction ("CDO"), known as a collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") squared or "CLO Squared" transaction. (A copy of the Original Engagement Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit A.)

37. CLOs are a form of securitization where interest and principal payments on corporate loans made to multiple mid-sized and large businesses are pooled together by a lender or the owner of the loans, and then passed on through a securitization structure to investors. CLOs typically involve multi-million dollar loans known as syndicated loans, or leveraged loans made to new businesses or existing businesses, often to acquire other companies. The loan originators are able to spread risk through the CLO securitization, and simultaneously free up capital to make new loans to other businesses. The Original Engagement contemplated the securitization of CLO securities. Thus, the securitization contemplated by Highland Capital would have been a "CLO Squared" transaction.

38. On or about May 22, 2007, as contemplated by the Original Engagement Letter, UBSS and Highland Capital entered into a warehouse agreement (the "Original Cash Warehouse Agreement"). (A copy of the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit B.) In accordance with the terms of the Original Engagement Letter and the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement, UBSS agreed to acquire securities as directed by Highland Capital. Highland Capital instructed UBS to acquire various CLO securities issued in connection with prior CLO transactions involving other sponsors and issuers (the "Cash Portfolio").

39. In a separate but related synthetic warehouse agreement (the "Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement," and together with the "Original Cash Warehouse Agreement," the "Original Warehouse Agreements"), UBS AG agreed to enter into credit default swaps (the "CDS Portfolio," and together with the Cash Portfolio, the "Warehouse Assets"), pursuant to which UBS AG sold credit protection to various third parties. (A copy of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit C.)

40. For Highland Capital's benefit, UBS held the Warehouse Assets on its balance sheet (the "Warehouse Facility"). UBS was expected to hold the Warehouse Assets until such time as the parties could arrange for the assets to be securitized as part of the contemplated securitization. In particular, if the parties believed that a securitization was economically feasible, they would create a special purpose entity that would acquire the Warehouse Assets from UBS using the proceeds from the sale of securities to investors. The special purpose entity's debt securities would be secured by those Warehouse Assets.

41. Under the Original Warehouse Agreements, if the Original Engagement terminated without a securitization, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties were obligated to pay UBS for losses on the Warehouse Assets. In particular, under the terms of the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement, Highland Capital was directly responsible for the first $50 million in losses in the Cash Portfolio, and under the terms of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties were obligated to pay UBS for any and all losses suffered on the CDS Portfolio.

42. The Original Engagement Letter expired by its terms on August 15, 2007 without a securitization occurring. The Original Warehouse Agreements expired on the same date in accordance with their respective terms.

43. As of August 15, 2007, the Warehouse Assets in the Warehouse Facility had lost in excess of $86 million in value. Although they had sufficient capital to do so,

Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed and refused to pay UBS what it was owed under the Original Warehouse Agreements.

44. As a result of extensive negotiations as well as representations and warranties made by Highland Capital on its own behalf, and on behalf of the Fund Counterparties as their investment manager, UBS agreed to restructure the terms of the Original Engagement.

B. Highland Capital And The Fund Counterparties Resort To Fraud To Avoid Highland Capital's Obligations To UBS

45. As alleged above, as a result of the termination of the Original Engagement, Highland Capital was directly liable to UBS under the Original Warehouse Agreement for in excess of $86 million.

46. Between August 2007 and March 14, 2008, UBS, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had discussions and negotiations concerning a restructuring of the terms of the Original Engagement. Those negotiations resulted in agreements to restructure the Original Engagement (the "Restructured Transaction"), including a release by UBS of its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement. (The terms of the Restructured Transaction are set forth in the Engagement Letter and Warehouse Agreements described below (collectively, the "Agreements"), which are annexed hereto as Exhibits D, E and F, respectively.)

47. During the course of negotiations and before March 14, 2008, Highland Capital and Fund Counterparties made several material misrepresentations to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties. Dondero, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also failed to disclose to UBS information which would have been material to UBS's decision to enter the Restructured Transaction ("Omissions," as defined above). As

Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew, UBS reasonably relied upon those material misrepresentations and, due to the Omissions, a misstated assessment of the Fund Counterparties, all to its detriment in deciding whether to enter the Restructured Transaction. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on these misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information that were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS reasonably believed that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties would not provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets as it in fact did.

48. For example, on or about December 28, 2007, to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction and related Agreements, Gibran Mahmud of Highland Capital sent SOHC financial statements to UBS. On or about January 29, 2008, UBS requested additional financial information related to SOHC. Later that same day, to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction and related Agreements, Phil Braner of Highland Capital emailed UBS a copy of SOHC's Statement of Financial Condition, dated December 31, 2007.

49. As described with more particularity below, the SOHC financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS, which Highland Capital was responsible for preparing, was materially false and misleading. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that UBS would rely upon SOHC's financial information in connection with deciding whether to agree to the Restructured Transaction and the terms of the Agreements being negotiated.

50. On or about February 4, 2008, Matt Killebrew of Highland Capital provided UBS with financial reports via email that reflected financial summaries, and aggregate valuations for CDO Fund's assets as of December 31, 2007. On or about March 4, 2008, Mr. Killebrew sent UBS similar reports for the period ended January 31, 2008. As described with more particularity below, these financial reports, which Highland Capital prepared, also were materially false and misleading. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that UBS would rely upon CDO Fund's financial information in connection with deciding whether to agree to the Restructured Transaction and the terms of the Agreements being negotiated.

51. The Fund Counterparties' financial statements [redacted] These facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties.

52. CDO Fund's financial statements [redacted]

53. Similarly, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concealed from UBS the fact that the Fund Counterparties [redacted]

54. In addition, the Fund Counterparties' financial statements that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS in advance of the Restructured Transaction contained [redacted]

[redacted]

55. During the course of negotiations concerning the restructuring, UBS also insisted that the Fund Counterparties have the ability to post $70 million in cash and securities as collateral, which would be held at State Street Bank (the "Initial Restructured Transaction Collateral"), and in which UBS would hold a security interest. The Fund Counterparties' ability to do so using their own assets was qualitatively and quantitatively material to UBS. Among other things, it demonstrated the strength of their balance sheets, and by extension, their ability to satisfy future obligations to UBS.

56. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post $70 million in Initial Restructuring Collateral. [redacted]

57. [redacted]

58. As the Fund Counterparties' investment manager, Highland Capital maintained the Fund Counterparties' accounting records, and knew Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to believe, and reasonably did not believe, that Highland Capital would provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about

59. If UBS had known that the Fund Counterparties

[redacted] It also would have drawn into question the Fund Counterparties' liquidity. [redacted]

60. But for Dondero's, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' false and misleading statements and Omissions concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets, and [redacted] UBS would not have entered into the Restructured Transaction or the Agreements that memorialized its terms. Given the Fund Counterparties' weak credit quality, additional adverse information about their collective or individual creditworthiness would have deterred UBS from going forward with the Restructured Transaction and putting more assets at risk. These misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

61. UBS would not have entered into a transaction with parties that made misrepresentations as Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties did. UBS also would not have agreed to release its valuable claims arising out of the Original Engagement under such circumstances. Because of, and in reliance on, the false and misleading information about the Fund Counterparties provided by Dondero, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, UBS entered into the Restructured Transaction memorialized in the Agreements. Because each of the misrepresentations and Omissions identified above disguised the Fund Counterparties' inability to satisfy their obligations to UBS, the misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

C. The Restructured Transaction Agreements

1. The Engagement Letter

62. On or about March 14, 2008, the parties reached agreement on the terms of a restructured engagement, which were memorialized in a new engagement letter (the "Engagement Letter," annexed hereto as Exhibit D). Pursuant to the Engagement Letter, Highland Capital re-engaged UBSS to act as placement agent in the event that market conditions improved, and the parties could go forward with securitizing the Warehouse Assets already held by UBS in the Warehouse Facility. UBS agreed to continue holding the Warehouse Assets in the Warehouse Facility, which had a notional value of approximately $818 million.

63. Under the terms of the Engagement Letter, UBS released claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

2. The Restructured Warehouse Agreements

64. On March 14, 2008, UBSS, the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital also entered into a cash warehouse agreement (the "Cash Warehouse Agreement"), pursuant to which UBSS agreed to continue to hold the Cash Portfolio. (A true and correct copy of the Cash Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit E.)

65. UBS AG, the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital also entered into a synthetic warehouse agreement, dated as of March 14, 2008 (the "Synthetic Warehouse Agreement," and together with the Cash Warehouse Agreement, the "Warehouse Agreements"), pursuant to which UBS AG agreed to continue warehousing credit protection that it sold, i.e., the CDS Portfolio. (A true and correct copy of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit F.)

66. Section 13(B) of the Cash Warehouse Agreement and § 11(B) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement make Highland Capital liable for losses, including losses in the Warehouse Facility, by reason of acts or omissions constituting bad faith, willful misconduct, or gross negligence.

67. Under § 12 of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties agreed to transfer to State Street the Initial Restructuring Collateral to partially secure their respective obligations to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements. Annex C to the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement identified the six assets that the Fund Counterparties purportedly transferred to State Street to satisfy their Initial Restructuring Collateral obligations, along with $20 million in cash.

68. The Warehouse Agreements also contained releases whereby UBS agreed to release claims it had against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties for losses arising out of the Original Engagement.

D. Highland Capital Uses Its Control Over The Fund Counterparties To Dissipate Their Assets Without Regard For The Fund Counterparties' Growing Obligations To UBS

69. Almost immediately after the Restructured Transaction Agreements were executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knowingly began to dissipate the Fund Counterparties' assets and make it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to ever repay UBS what they owed. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties did so at various times when the Fund Counterparties owed UBS hundreds of millions of dollars.

70. For example, on or about March 26, 2008, just days after entering the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital caused certain SOHC assets to be encumbered by entering into a transaction with Barclays Bank, plc. ("Barclays"). At or around the same time, CDO Fund was negotiating financing arrangements with Morgan Stanley & Co. International Ltd. and Highland Capital IV SPC, whereby it granted a security interest in its assets to those entities. By granting a security interest in the Fund Counterparties' assets to other creditors, Highland Capital unfairly and improperly reduced the assets available to satisfy the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS in bad faith and in violation of UBS's rights.

71. Similarly, on or about April 2, 2008, Highland Capital advised UBS that defendant CDO Fund had recently monetized a $129 million long position in SunCom Wireless. When Highland Capital and CDO Fund subsequently provided UBS with additional financial information about CDO Fund, however, UBS discovered that Highland Capital had caused CDO Fund to transfer approximately $100 million of the cash proceeds from the SunCom Wireless sale out of CDO Fund.

72. By improperly removing such a substantial amount of cash from CDO Fund, Highland Capital interfered in bad faith with CDO Fund's ability to satisfy its steadily increasing financial obligations to UBS. In particular, in or around May 2008, when the cash proceeds from the SunCom Wireless position were siphoned off, the Fund Counterparties owed UBS in excess of $166 million related to losses in the Warehouse Facility, approximately 50% of which CDO Fund was obligated to pay.

73. Highland Capital also repeatedly caused SOHC's cash to be transferred by defendant Highland Financial. In particular, during the first five months of 2008, SOHC's cash position was reduced by over $10 million at a time when its obligations to UBS were increasing substantially.

E. In the Fall of 2008, Losses Mount And The Fund Counterparties Face Collateral Calls From Creditors Including UBS That They Cannot Meet Despite Highland Capital's Belated Efforts To Do So [redacted]

74. Under the terms of the Warehouse Agreements, the Fund Counterparties were required to post additional collateral with UBS if the combined market value of (a) the Warehouse Assets and (b) the Initial Restructured Transaction Collateral, declined below a certain amount.

75. By September 2008, losses in the Warehouse Facility had increased significantly. At the same time, the value of the Initial Restructuring Collateral had declined substantially, as had the value of the assets held by the Fund Counterparties.

76. Highland Capital was desperate to avoid a default by any of its affiliates, including the Fund Counterparties. If a Highland Capital affiliate defaulted on its obligations to a creditor, Highland Capital's reputation in the investment community would be damaged, and there was a risk that Highland Capital's business would collapse. Highland Capital feared that a public default would lead investors in Highland Capital's hedge fund family to withdraw their capital, and lead creditors to take aggressive actions to protect themselves, including foreclosing on collateral and aggressively enforcing their contractual rights.

1. The First Margin Call

77. On or about September 16, 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility continued to grow, UBS began to exercise its contractual rights and make margin calls demanding additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. Specifically, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties were each required to post $10 million in cash or equivalent securities (the "First Margin Call").

78. Because Highland Capital had routinely drained cash from the Fund Counterparties, the Fund Counterparties lacked the liquidity to meet UBS's demands using their own assets.

79. On or about September 19, 2008, the Fund Counterparties satisfied the First Margin Call by together posting $20 million in cash as additional collateral. [redacted]

[redacted]

2. UBS Is Harmed By Highland Capital's Response To The Fund Counterparties' Liquidity Crisis

80. In the wake of the First Margin Call, the Fund Counterparties remained starved for liquidity. Still desperate to avoid defaults to creditors and the consequences described above, Highland Capital resorted to [redacted]

81. Highland Capital and the individuals that directed the Fund Counterparties knew that they had caused the Fund Counterparties to become incapable of satisfying their obligations to all of their respective creditors when they came due, and that they were insolvent or, at the very least, within the zone of insolvency.

82. For example, on or about September 26, 2008, Dondero and Highland Capital improperly [redacted]

83. [redacted]

84. [redacted]

85. [redacted]

86. [redacted] Highland Capital executed this plan at UBS's expense to protect their substantial personal stake in Highland Financial and prevent negative publicity associated with defaulting [redacted]. Implementing this plan, however, caused SOHC (and its alter ego, Highland Financial) to improperly and in bad faith breach duties and obligations to UBS.

87. [redacted] SOHC's expected obligations to UBS were well in excess of $250 million, which were due and owing to UBS no later than March 14, 2009. Thus, by [redacted], Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties made a fraudulent conveyance and interfered in bad faith with the Fund Counterparties' ability to meet their contractual obligations to UBS.

88. Given the state of the financial markets at the time, Highland Capital, Highland Financial and SOHC had no expectation that SOHC would be able to satisfy its obligations to UBS when they came due. [redacted]

89. [redacted]

3. The Second Margin Call

90. On or about October 21, 2008, UBS notified Highland Capital that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties each owed another $10 million (the "Second Margin Call").

91. In response to the Second Margin Call, Highland Capital offered UBS numerous assets as collateral. UBS rejected those offers for various business-related reasons. As UBS would later learn, however, at the time Highland Capital was offering the assets to UBS, the Fund Counterparties did not own them.

92. On or about October 24, 2008, the Fund Counterparties satisfied the Second Margin Call by together posting assets with a notional value of $49.97 million (but a market value of approximately $20 million), with the understanding that UBS would authorize State Street to return the securities if and when the Fund Counterparties were able to replace those securities with $20 million in cash. As UBS would later learn, [redacted]

93. Moreover, at the same time that Highland Capital was telling UBS that the Fund Counterparties did not have sufficient cash assets to meet the Second Margin call, [redacted]

4. The Third Margin Call

94. On or about November 7, 2008, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties had an obligation to post another $10 million as collateral (the "Third Margin Call").

95. On or about November 11, 2008, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties offered to post various securities to satisfy the Third Margin Call. In response to the Third Margin Call, Phil Braner of Highland Capital emailed UBS a list of proposed collateral including eight securities with a purported market value of approximately $20 million (i.e., twice the amount of cash due to satisfy the Third Margin Call).

96. Pursuant to the Warehouse Agreements, UBS was authorized to reject proposed collateral. UBS determined that the proposed additional collateral offered by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties was unacceptable. On or after November 13, 2008, UBS formally rejected the offered securities, and requested that the Fund Counterparties provide cash or cash equivalent collateral to satisfy their obligations under § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

97. UBS would later learn that [redacted]

F. Termination Of The Agreements And Demand For Payment Of Losses

99. As of December 3, 2008, the Fund Counterparties still had not met the Third Margin Call in accordance with § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement. This failure resulted in UBS's declaration of a termination date ("Termination Date") under the Agreements.

100. On December 3, 2008, UBS delivered a letter (the "Termination Date Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties notifying them of such failure and the occurrence of a Termination Date under each Agreement. (A true and correct copy of the Termination Date Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit G.)

101. Sections 5 and 7 of the Cash Warehouse Agreement provided that if the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, UBSS could, in its sole discretion, retain any of the securities in the Warehouse Facility or sell such securities to one of UBSS's affiliates or an unaffiliated party.

102. Pursuant to the terms of the Agreements, if the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, each of the Fund Counterparties was obligated to pay to UBS its pro rata share of any market value losses on the Warehouse Assets, which UBS determined it had experienced and so notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties.

103. On December 19, 2008, UBSS delivered a letter (the "Cash Warehouse Demand Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties demanding payment for its losses. (A true and correct copy of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit H.) UBSS demanded that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties wire that required amount to UBSS no later than 5:00 pm on December 24, 2008 (i.e., the third business day after the date of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter) (the "Final Payment Date"). Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed to make the required payment to UBSS.

104. The Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided that in the event the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, the Fund Counterparties would be collectively responsible for 100% of the aggregate amount of losses on the CDS Portfolio and each of the Fund Counterparties would pay, after notice of such amount due from UBS, its pro rata share of such amount to UBS within three business days.

105. On December 19, 2008, UBS AG delivered a letter (the "Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties demanding payment for its losses. (A true and correct copy of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit I.) UBS AG demanded that the Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties wire the required amount to UBS AG no later than 5:00 PM on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 — the third business day after the date of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter). Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed to make the required payment to UBS AG.

G. Notice Of Failure to Pay, Auction And Final Accounting Letter

106. On January 5, 2009, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties of the failure to make the requisite payments when due pursuant to the Agreements and the applicable demand letters. On or about January 16, 2009, in connection with unwinding the Warehouse Facility, UBS conducted the auction contemplated by the Warehouse Agreements.

107. On or about March 19, 2009, UBS delivered a letter to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concerning a final accounting concerning the auction and the losses in the Warehouse Facility. UBS determined that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties owed it $686,853,290.26.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud Against The Fund Counterparties)

115. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 114 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

116. In connection with restructuring the Original Engagement, and negotiating the terms of the Agreements and Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had a duty to communicate accurate and complete information to UBS.

117. As alleged above, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intentionally misrepresented material facts and made Omissions (as defined earlier herein).

118. As set forth in more detail above, prior to the restructuring being completed, and the Agreements being executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties misrepresented information and made Omissions to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties as well as information about their finances and assets, including, but not limited to, information regarding the following:

(a) [redacted]

(b) [redacted]

(c) [redacted]

119. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties acted knowingly and purposefully in making the materially false representations and Omissions to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction to induce UBS to enter the Agreements. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that their representations and Omissions were materially false and misleading. Knowingly using material misrepresentations and Omissions, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intended to induce, and fraudulently induced UBS into entering the Agreements.

120. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also knew that their false representations and Omissions were material to and caused UBS's decision to enter the Agreements. In particular, the misrepresentations and Omissions were both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS inasmuch as UBS would have acted differently had it known the truth about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets when UBS made the decision to go forward with the restructuring and releasing, among other things, valuable claims against Highland Capital.

121. UBS was not aware and could not have been aware of the falsity and misleading nature of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions. The facts and information underlying the false, inaccurate and incomplete financial reports that Highland Capital provided to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction were peculiarly within Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' knowledge.

122. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had superior knowledge compared to UBS about Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Indeed, such facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Moreover, it was necessary for Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties to complete or clarify the information that it provided to UBS concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Consequently, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' concealment of the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets was fraudulent.

123. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions regarding the Fund Counterparties' financial condition and assets. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to question the veracity and completeness of the financial information that Highland Capital provided to UBS about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. UBS also had no reason to believe that the financial information that Highland Capital provided to it to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction would be false, incomplete or otherwise misleading. When UBS evaluated the Fund Counterparties' financial statements in early 2008, [redacted]

124. But for Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS would not have entered the Agreements, or released its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

125. In reasonable and justifiable reliance on the foregoing material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS also surrendered and released valuable claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties at a time when UBS could have been made whole for the losses that it had suffered to that point as a result of the Original Engagement. Nor would UBS have suffered the additional losses in the Warehouse Facility.

126. UBS reasonably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS continued to maintain the Warehouse Facility through, at least, December 3, 2008, suffering in excess of $686 million in losses that the Fund Counterparties cannot pay to UBS.

127. Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions were the direct and proximate cause of UBS's losses complained of herein. As a direct result of, and in reliance upon, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS was induced to, among other things, (a) enter the Agreements; (b) release its pre-existing claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties related to the Original Engagement; and (c) assume the credit-risk of the Fund Counterparties; and as a direct result, caused UBS to incur substantial losses and damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud Against The Fund Counterparties)
(Pled Solely To Preserve For Appeal)

128. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 127 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

129. In connection with restructuring the Original Engagement, and negotiating the terms of the Agreements and Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had a duty to communicate accurate and complete information to UBS.

130. As alleged above, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intentionally misrepresented material facts and made Omissions (as defined earlier herein).

131. As set forth in more detail above, prior to the restructuring being completed, and the Agreements being executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties misrepresented information and made Omissions to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties and information about their finances, assets and business practices, including, but not limited to, information regarding the following:

(a) [redacted]

(b) [redacted]

(c) [redacted]

(d) [redacted]

(e) [redacted]

(f) [redacted]

(g) [redacted]

132. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties acted knowingly and purposefully in making the materially false representations and Omissions to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction to induce UBS to enter the Agreements. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that their representations and Omissions were materially false and misleading. Knowingly using material misrepresentations and Omissions, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intended to induce, and fraudulently induced UBS into entering the Agreements.

133. These Omissions rendered the Fund Counterparties' representations, statements and financial statements materially misleading. Because Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concealed this information from UBS, UBS could not properly evaluate SOHC's ability to satisfy its obligations to UBS. For instance, UBS received financial reports from Highland Capital for the Fund Counterparties that suggested that the Fund Counterparties held hundreds of millions of dollars worth of assets that could be used to satisfy their obligations to UBS. However, a substantial portion of the assets that UBS reasonably believed would be available, were, in fact, not going to be available to pay UBS because they were going to be encumbered as a result of other transactions. In other words, because Highland Capital concealed its intentions, the financial reports that it provided to UBS were misleading as they provided UBS with false and illusory comfort regarding the Fund Counterparties' capacity to fulfill their contractual obligations to UBS. As the Fund Counterparties' investment manager, Highland Capital would have led the negotiations related to the other financing arrangements.

134. Similarly, during negotiations concerning the Initial Restructuring Collateral, Highland Capital and SOHC made an additional Omission by not disclosing to UBS

the fact that SOHC had a serious liquidity problem. SOHC had to borrow cash from Highland Capital to satisfy the cash portion of its Initial Restructuring Collateral obligation. On or about December 18, 2007, while the parties were negotiating the restructuring, Highland Capital loaned $30 million to SOHC, which Highland Capital and SOHC's alter ego, Highland Financial, earmarked for SOHC to use as collateral in connection with negotiating extensions of warehouse facilities, including the one with UBS. As Highland Financial's and SOHC's investment manager, Highland Capital knew about SOHC's liquidity problems since they were discussed openly at Highland Financial board meetings attended by Highland Capital. The failure to fully disclose SOHC's liquidity problem, and its inability to meet the Initial Restructuring Collateral obligation using its own cash assets was an Omission, because it was indicative of the strength of SOHC's finances and assets, and SOHC's ability to satisfy obligations to UBS.

135. Highland Capital and Fund Counterparties also concealed from UBS that Highland Capital had to commingle assets among its various affiliates and disregard corporate formalities to satisfy the Fund Counterparties' liquidity needs. Facts and information concerning these business practices, including Highland Capital's commingling of assets and disregard of corporate formalities was information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and its affiliates. As the investment manager to Highland Financial, SOHC and CDO Fund (as well as the Affiliated Transferee Defendants), Highland Capital knowingly arranged and caused the asset transfers between and among the various affiliates in disregard of corporate formalities.

136. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also knew that their false representations and Omissions were material to and caused UBS's decision to enter the Agreements. In particular, the misrepresentations and Omissions were both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS inasmuch as UBS would have acted differently had it known the truth about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices when UBS made the decision to go forward with the restructuring and releasing, among other things, valuable claims against Highland Capital.

137. In addition, if UBS had known that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties ignored corporate formalities or that Highland Capital freely transferred assets among its controlled entities, UBS would not have entered the Restructured Transaction. These misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

138. UBS was not aware and could not have been aware of the falsity and misleading nature of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions. The facts and information underlying the false, inaccurate and incomplete financial reports that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction were peculiarly within Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' knowledge.

139. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had superior knowledge compared to UBS about Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. Indeed, such facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Moreover, it was necessary for Highland Capital and the Highland Entities to complete or clarify the information that it provided to UBS concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. Consequently, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' concealment about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices was fraudulent.

140. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions regarding the Fund

Counterparties' financial condition, assets and business practices. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to question the veracity and completeness of the financial information that Highland Capital provided to UBS about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. UBS also had no reason to believe that the financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to it to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction would be false, incomplete or otherwise misleading. When UBS evaluated the Fund Counterparties' financial statements in early 2008, [redacted]

141. But for Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS would not have entered the Agreements, or released its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

142. In reasonable and justifiable reliance on the foregoing material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS also surrendered and released valuable claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties at a time when UBS could have been made whole for the losses that it had suffered to that point as a result of the Original Engagement. Nor would UBS have suffered the additional losses in the Warehouse Facility.

143. UBS reasonably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS continued to maintain the Warehouse Facility through, at least, December 3, 2008, suffering in excess of $686 million in losses that the Fund Counterparties cannot pay to UBS.

144. Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions were the direct and proximate cause of UBS's losses complained of herein. As a direct result of, and in reliance upon, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS was induced to, among other things, (a) enter the Agreements; (b) release its pre-existing claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties related to the Original Engagement; and (c) assume the credit-risk of the Fund Counterparties; and as a direct result, caused UBS to incur substantial losses and damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract Under the Cash Warehouse Agreement Against The Fund Counterparties)

145. Plaintiff UBSS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 144 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

146. The Cash Warehouse Agreement is a valid and binding contract.

147. UBSS has performed all of its obligations under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

148. Pursuant to the Cash Warehouse Agreement, each of the Fund Counterparties was required to transfer their respective pro rata shares of additional collateral to satisfy the Third Margin Call within two business days of November 7, 2008. The Fund Counterparties failed to make the required transfer. The Fund Counterparties' failure to make such transfer is a breach under the Cash Warehouse Agreement, and resulted in a Termination Date under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

149. In accordance with the terms of the Cash Warehouse Agreement, UBSS demanded that each of the Fund Counterparties pay to UBS their respective pro rata shares of the amount of losses on the Cash Portfolio and estimated expenses by 5 P.M. on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 – the third business day after the date of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter). The Fund Counterparties failed to pay this amount to UBSS. The failure to pay these amounts to UBSS when due under the Cash Warehouse Agreement constituted a further breach under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

150. By reason of the foregoing, UBSS has suffered and will continue to suffer damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract Under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement Against The Fund Counterparties)

151. Plaintiff UBS AG, repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 150 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

152. The Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is a valid and binding contract.

153. UBS AG has performed all of its obligations under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

154. Pursuant to the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, each of the Fund Counterparties were required to transfer their respective pro rata shares of additional collateral to satisfy the Third Margin Call within two business days of November 7, 2008. The Fund Counterparties failed to make the requisite transfer. The failure to make such transfer resulted in a breach and a Termination Date under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

155. UBS AG demanded that each of the Fund Counterparties pay to UBS AG their pro rata share of losses on the CDS Portfolio and estimated expenses by 5 P.M. on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 – the third business day after the date of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter). The Fund Counterparties failed to pay this amount to UBS. The failure to pay these amounts when due under the Agreements was a further breach under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

156. By reason of the foregoing, UBS AG has suffered and will continue to suffer damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

157. Paragraphs 157 to 166 have been intentionally left blank.

FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraudulent Conveyances Against All Defendants)

167. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 166 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

168. Between March 14, 2008 and December 3, 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility grew, Highland Capital exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties and caused the Fund Counterparties to transfer valuable cash and assets out of the Fund Counterparties, thereby impairing their ability to bear losses in the Warehouse Facility, and otherwise satisfy their obligations to creditors, including UBS. 177. [redacted]

178. [redacted]

179. As a result of the foregoing fraudulent conveyances, the Fund Counterparties were unable to satisfy their obligations to UBS. As a result of the foregoing fraudulent conveyances, UBS has been harmed in an amount to be determined at trial.

SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Tortious Interference With Contractual Relations Against The Affiliated Transferee Defendants)
(Pled Solely To Preserve For Appeal)

180. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 179 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

181. The Agreements are valid and binding contracts.

182. The parties agreed that UBS would not bear the risk of any losses in connection with the Restructured Transaction. As a direct result of the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Warehouse Agreements, UBS suffered no less than $686,853,290.26 in damages. Under the terms of the Warehouse Agreements, the Fund Counterparties' obligation to pay UBS for losses in the Warehouse Facility expressly survived the termination of the Agreements.

183. Highland Capital knew of the Agreements, and were familiar with their terms, including the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS thereunder. The Affiliated Transferee Defendants, also knew of the Agreements, and their terms, including the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS thereunder.

184. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants intentionally and improperly caused and ensured a breach of the Warehouse Agreements by the Fund Counterparties, thereby tortiously interfering with UBS's rights under the Agreements.

185. Specifically, in 2008 and 2009 Highland Capital wrongfully caused the improper and fraudulent asset transfers, payments, distributions and dividends described above, and thereby tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual relationship with the Fund Counterparties by knowingly impairing UBS's contractual right under the Warehouse Agreements to be reimbursed by the Fund Counterparties for the losses on the Warehouse Assets. For example, Highland Capital wrongfully caused the March 2009 Fraudulent Conveyance for which there was no legitimate purpose. The Affiliated Transferee Defendants [redacted]

186. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants [redacted]

187. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants engaged in the foregoing unlawful and improper conduct, and tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual rights under the Warehouse Agreements, for their own improper personal gain by knowingly violating UBS's rights and making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to perform under the Warehouse Agreements. In particular, the foregoing conduct constitutes independent torts and predatory acts directed at UBS for Highland Capital's and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants' own personal gain.

188. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants' tortious interference with UBS's contractual rights under the Agreements, UBS has suffered damages in an amount to be determined at trial. Had Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants not tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual rights, the Fund Counterparties would have been able to make payments to UBS of the amount they owed to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements.

SEVENTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Judgment For General Partner Liability Against Strand)

189. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 188 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

190. A limited partnership's general partner is personally liable for the partnership obligations of the limited partnership.

191. Highland Capital is a Delaware limited partnership. Defendant Strand is Highland Capital's general partner. As such, Strand is personally liable for the liability, debts and obligations of Highland Capital, including but not limited to Highland Capital's liabilities to UBS arising out of the Consolidated Action.

192. A justiciable controversy exists as to whether Strand is liable to UBS for the injuries caused by Highland Capital complained of in the Consolidated Action as a result of Strand being Highland Capital's general partner.

EIGHTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Judgment For Alter Ego Liability Against Highland Financial)

193. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 192 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

194. As alleged above, SOHC breached the Warehouse Agreements and otherwise harmed UBS by engaging in fraudulent misconduct. Highland Financial is SOHC's alter ego and should be held responsible and liable for SOHC's breach of the Warehouse Agreements and fraudulent misconduct.

195. SOHC is a mere instrumentality of Highland Financial. SOHC had no independence and could not exercise any business discretion whatsoever. [redacted] SOHC did not have its own offices, officers or employees. Rather, it shared common officers, directors and employees, as well as common office space, with Highland Financial.

196. As alleged in detail above, Highland Financial completely dominated the day-to-day operations of SOHC as well as SOHC's sister-affiliates. In particular, Highland Financial operated Highland Financial and its subsidiaries, including SOHC, as a single entity, [redacted]

[redacted]

197. A justiciable controversy exists as to whether Highland Financial is liable to UBS as SOHC's alter ego for the losses and harm that UBS suffered that were caused by SOHC's breach of the Warehouse Agreements, and the fraudulent and tortious conduct complained of herein.

RELIEF DEMANDED

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs UBSS and UBS AG demand judgment:

(a) On the first cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that UBS was induced to enter the Agreements as a result of fraud committed by the Fund Counterparties, and awarding damages to UBS for all losses and liabilities incurred by UBS, and that UBS incurs, with respect to the Agreements and the Warehouse Facility, including, without limitation, interest, reasonable attorneys' and accountants' fees and expenses and any other losses, fees and expenses that UBS incurred or incurs, in an amount to be determined at trial but in any event, no less than $686,853,290.26;

(b) On the second cause of action, which is pled solely to preserve UBS's appellate rights, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that UBS was induced to enter the Agreements as a result of fraud committed by the Fund Counterparties, and awarding damages to UBS for all losses and liabilities incurred by UBS, and that UBS incurs, with respect to the Agreements and the Warehouse Facility, including, without limitation, interest, reasonable attorneys' and accountants' fees and expenses and any other losses, fees and expenses that UBS incurred or incurs, in an amount to be determined at trial but in any event, no less than $686,853,290.26;

(c) On the third cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that the Fund Counterparties breached the Cash Warehouse Agreement, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(d) On the fourth cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that the Fund Counterparties breached the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(e) On the fifth cause of action, as against all defendants, (i) declaring that the dispositions of the Fund Counterparties' and Highland Financial's assets, as directed by Highland Capital, constituted fraudulent conveyances; (ii) appointing a receiver over defendants; (iii) directing that a full accounting be had of defendants' affairs and finances; (iv) imposing a constructive trust over defendants' assets until such an accounting is completed; and/or (v) awarding UBS damages in an amount to be determined at trial, but no less than the value of the assets fraudulently and improperly transferred, or, alternatively, directing that defendants and their partners, members or shareholders return to the Fund Counterparties any assets or consideration received from Highland Financial or the Fund Counterparties, directly or indirectly, as distributions, dividends, consideration, compensation, fees, interest, principal or otherwise, between March 14, 2008 and the present.

(f) On the sixth cause of action, as against the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, which is pled solely to preserve UBS's appellate rights, declaring that each of those defendants is liable for tortiously interfering with UBS's contractual rights under the Warehouse Agreements, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(g) On the seventh cause of action, as against defendant Strand, declaring that Strand is responsible for Highland Capital's liability and obligations arising out of the Consolidated Action;

(h) On the eighth cause of action, as against defendant Highland Financial, declaring that Highland Financial is SOHC's alter ego, and that as such, Highland Financial is responsible for SOHC's liability and obligations to UBS arising out of this action;

(i) Awarding UBS punitive damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(j) Granting UBS its costs and disbursements, including reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses of this action;

(k) Granting UBS pre-judgment interest; and

(l) Granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

DECISION AND ORDER AFTER TRIAL

This action arises out of a failed restructured transaction between plaintiffs UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch (collectively, UBS) and defendants Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. (CDO Fund) and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company (SOHC) (together, the Fund Counterparties), and defendant Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) (together with the Fund Counterparties, Highland), for the securitization of collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) and credit default swaps (CDSs).

The court conducted a bench trial from July 9 through July 27, 2018 on plaintiffs' third and fourth causes of action in the second amended complaint for breach of contract, and on defendant Highland Capital's first and second counterclaims against plaintiff UBS Securities

LLC for breach of contract and unjust enrichment, respectively.[1] Based on the credible evidence at trial, the court now makes the following determination as to the breach of contract causes of action and counterclaims.[2]

In April and May 2007, the parties agreed to pursue a collateralized debt obligations transaction governed by an Engagement Letter, a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement for CDSs, and a Warehouse Agreement for CLOs (Original Agreements). (DX 4, DX 5, DX 6.)[3] It is undisputed that UBS acted as the "financial arranger" for the transaction and was responsible for financing the acquisition of assets, which would then be held in portfolios, which the parties refer to as the Cash Warehouse and the Synthetic Warehouse or collectively as the Knox Warehouse. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.)[4] Highland Capital acted as the "Servicer" and was responsible for identifying the specific CLOs to be securitized and the Reference Obligations for the CDSs to be securitized. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 3, 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 6, 8.)

In furtherance of the transaction, UBS acquired assets with a notional value of $818 million. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.) There were 33 CLO tranches in the Cash Warehouse, with a notional value of $174 million. UBS paid $170 or $170.5 million to acquire the CLOs because the bonds were purchased at a slight discount on their par value. (Ds.' Findings, ¶ 6; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.) The Synthetic Warehouse contained 87 credit default swaps,

[1] By decision on the record on May 1, 2018 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 494), the court bifurcated the trial. The decision held that the breach of contract claims, which were to be heard by the court, would be determined prior to claims, including fraudulent conveyance claims, which were to be heard by a jury.

[2] At the trial, the parties agreed to the submission of extensive evidence, subject to standing objections. This decision is not based on such evidence, unless the decision expressly states otherwise.

[3] Defendants' and plaintiffs' trial exhibits will be referred to as DX _ and PX _, respectively. The parties' demonstrative exhibits will be referred to as DX Demo. _ and PX Demo. _

[4] The Fund Counterparties' and Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ds.'s Findings. Plaintiffs' Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ps.'s Findings. Defendants' Findings are all identified by paragraph number. with a notional value of $644 million. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 7; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.). UBS served as the protection seller on all of the CDSs. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 8.) For five of the CDSs, with a notional value of $45 million, Lehman Brothers Special Financing, Inc. (Lehman) acted as the protection buyer (Lehman Swaps). (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 8; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755[5], at 1.) For 20 of the CDSs, with a notional value of $124 million, UBS acted as both protection seller and protection buyer (the Internal Swaps). (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 10; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755, at 4-5.)

The Original Agreements expired by their terms on August 15, 2007. (PX 1, at 1.) The parties agreed to restructure the transaction, signing a new Engagement Letter, the 2008 Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA), and the 2008 Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (SWA), as of March 14, 2008. (See PX 1, PX 2, PX 3.) As of March 14, 2008, the Knox assets had lost significant value and the parties agreed that, given the market conditions existing as of the date of the restructured transaction, it was not then feasible to sell the securities and close the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 20; 2008 Engagement Letter [PX 1, at 8].)

As discussed further below, the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided for the roll-over of the Existing Credit Default Swaps and the Existing Collateral Portfolio into the warehouses created under the 2008 restructured transaction. (See SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 12 of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided that the Fund Counterparties would transfer additional cash and securities "to secure its obligations to UBS" under the SWA and the CWA. In particular, this Section required the Fund Counterparties to make an Initial Deposit of $20 million in cash and approximately $54 million in Eligible Securities on the date of the execution of the SWA. (Id., § 12 [A].) The SWA contained a collateral call provision under which UBS was required to track its CDS and Cash Exposure to losses, as defined under the Agreement, on a semi-monthly basis, and the Fund Counterparties were required to deposit an additional $10 million in collateral (cash and/or Eligible Securities) for every $100 million increase in the defined Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount. (Id., §§ 12 [B], [C].)

It is undisputed that, pursuant to Section 12 (C) of the SWA, UBS made a first collateral call for $10 million on September 17, 2008 (PX 4), and a second collateral call for $10 million on October 21, 2008 (PX 5), both of which were satisfied by the Fund Counterparties. (Testimony of Keith Grimaldi, Former Head of UBS's CDO Secondary Trading Desk, Trial Transcript (Tr.) at 81, 112, 119.)

On November 7, 2008, UBS issued the third, and final, collateral call to the Fund Counterparties for an additional $10 million. (PX 6.) It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties did not meet this collateral call. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 17; Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 43-47).[6]

On December 3, 2008, UBS sent a notice to Highland stating that, to date, no deposits have been made in response to the November collateral call, and that "a Termination Date has occurred under the Warehouse Agreements and a termination date has occurred under the Engagement Letter." (PX 7; PX 9.) The notice further stated that "UBS is forbearing from exercising its remedies [under the Agreements] for a period of two Business Days from the date hereof in order to permit [the Fund Counterparties] to pay the Additional Deposits by 5 pm New York time on December 5, 2008." (Id.) On December 5, 2008, UBS sent an additional notice to

[6] It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties offered to post CLO assets to satisfy the third collateral call and that UBS did not accept that collateral. UBS's Keith Grimaldi testified that UBS rejected the CLOs because "at that time the marketplace was declining and declining rapidly. We thought there would be more declines, so we collectively made a decision that we wanted cash or government securities ... that would be easily liquid and reflect better value." (Trial Tr. at 122.) Defendants stipulated that UBS had the right to insist on cash. (See Statement of Andrew Cruciani [Ds.'s Atty.], Trial Tr. at 1736.)

Highland stating that the Additional Deposit has not been made, and that "[c]onsequently, UBS will proceed to exercise the rights and remedies available to it under the Warehouse Agreements, the Engagement Letter, at law and otherwise." (PX 8.)

THIRD COLLATERAL CALL

As a threshold matter, the parties dispute whether the third collateral call was proper. Highland argues that UBS should not have included the 20 Internal Swaps in calculating the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount "because the Intradesk [i.e., Internal] Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps under the SWA . . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 28.) Highland also claims that the Lehman Swaps were not properly included in the calculation because they had been terminated prior to the third collateral call. (See id., ¶ 27.)

More particularly, Highland claims that the Internal Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps because they were not documented, as allegedly required by Section 3 of the SWA, in the form of an ISDA Master Agreement and ISDA Confirmation. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 28, 30-31.) UBS does not dispute that the Internal Swaps were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement and Confirmation, but argues that Section 3 does not require such documentation for the Internal Swaps. (Ps.'s Findings, at 24-25.)[7]

Resolution of this dispute involves an issue of contract interpretation. It is well settled that the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace v 600 Partners Co., 86 NY2d 543, 548 [1995]; W.W.W. Assocs., Inc. v Giancontieri, 77 NY2d 157, 162 [1990].) Written agreements are to be construed in accordance with the parties' intent, and "the best evidence of what parties to a written agreement

intend is what they say in their writing." (Schron v Troutman Sanders LLP, 20 NY3d 430, 436 [2013] [internal quotation marks, brackets, and citation omitted].) The court should determine from contractual language, without regard to extrinsic evidence, whether there is any ambiguity. (Chimart Assocs. v Paul, 66 NY2d 570, 573 [1986].) Extrinsic or parol evidence "may not be considered when the intent of the parties can be gleaned from the face of the instrument." (Id. at 572-573.) "Extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent may be considered only if the agreement is ambiguous. . . ." (Greenfield v Philles Records, Inc., 98 NY2d 562, 569 [2002].) "Ambiguity in a contract arises when the contract, read as a whole, fails to disclose its purpose and the parties' intent, or where its terms are subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 25 NY3d 675, 680 [2015] [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].)

It is also well settled that a court should "construe the [contract] so as to give full meaning and effect to the material provisions. A reading of the contract should not render any portion meaningless. Further, a contract should be read as a whole, and every part will be interpreted with reference to the whole; and if possible it will be so interpreted as to give effect to its general purpose." (Beal Sav. Bank v Sommer, 8 NY3d 318, 324-25 [2007] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; National Conversion Corp. v Cedar Bldg. Corp., 23 NY2d 621, 625 [1969] [holding that "[a]ll parts of an agreement are to be reconciled, if possible, in order to avoid inconsistency"].)

Applying these precepts, the court holds that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to the requirements for documentation of CDSs, that Section 3 of the SWA only applies to CDSs in which a third party is the protection buyer, and that this Section does not require ISDA documentation for the Internal Swaps.

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 641 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 11/14/2019

The SWA defines "Existing Credit Default Swap[s]" as the CDSs "that were the subject of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement." (SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 3 of the SWA provides, in pertinent part:

> "Form of Documentation. Each Existing Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, has been documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) an ISDA published confirmation. . . . Each Additional Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached [to the SWA] . . . ."

As the Agreement that governs the securitization of Existing and Additional Credit Default Swaps, the SWA contains numerous detailed provisions regarding the accumulation and disposition of these financial instruments. Section 3, which pertains to documentation of the swaps, is the only provision in the SWA that is limited to CDSs in which UBS is the Seller and a counterparty is the Buyer. All of the other provisions of the SWA refer to CDSs without such limitation.

Moreover, like SWA Section 3, the Original SWA provided: "Each Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and each counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached hereto. . . ." (Original SWA, § 3 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 626].) It is undisputed, however, that the Internal Swaps were included in the Original SWA portfolio but were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement or Confirmation. It is also undisputed that the Internal Swaps were nevertheless again included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount in the SWA for the restructured transaction. (Testimony of Peter Vinella [Highland's expert in structured financial products], Trial Tr. at 1097, 1124-1125 [acknowledging that the Internal Swaps were included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount].)

Initial Net Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA[8] as "111,767,486.88, being the amount by which the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of the date hereof [i.e., the March 14, 2008 "as of" date of the SWA] exceeds the Initial Deposit." As defined in SWA Section 12 (A), the Initial Deposit is the deposit of approximately $74,000,000 in cash and Eligible Securities made on the date of execution of the SWA. Aggregate Net Exposure Amount is defined as the amount by which CDS Exposure and Cash Exposure, as of the date of the collateral calculation, exceed the balance on deposit in the Deposit Account plus Positive Carry with respect to each Collateral Obligation.[9] As discussed above, Section 12 (C) of the SWA requires a deposit of $10 million in additional collateral when the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is greater than or equal to $100 million. The Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA as "the amount, if any, by which (i) the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of [the date of the collateral calculation] exceeds (ii) the Initial Net Exposure Amount." The Initial Net Exposure Amount, which includes the Internal Swaps, is thus integral to the calculation of the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount.

Based on this reading of the SWA as a whole, the court concludes that the Internal Swaps were Existing Credit Default Swaps within the meaning of the SWA. The lack of ISDA documentation was therefore not a bar to their inclusion in the collateral call calculation.

The court rejects Highland's further contention that the Internal Swaps should not have been included because there was "no economic consequence" to UBS from these swaps. (Ds.'s

[8] Definitions are found in the Definitions section of the SWA (SWA, Ex. A), unless the term is defined in a particular provision of the SWA, in which case the provision will be cited.
[9] Positive Carry is defined in the CWA. As explained by Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, carry includes interest payments from the CLOs. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1299.)

Findings, ¶ 33.) The complex formula set forth in Section 12 for calculating the exposure of UBS on the assets in the warehouse that would trigger a collateral call does not contain any requirement that UBS include in the calculation only assets for which it was at risk of sustaining actual losses.[10]

The court further holds that, although the Internal Swaps were properly included in the third collateral call calculation, the Lehman Swaps were not. The parties do not dispute that the Lehman Swaps had been terminated based on the Event of Default that occurred upon Lehman's filing for bankruptcy on September 15, 2008. (DX 87 [UBS Default Notice].) Highland asserts, and UBS does not persuasively counter, that the Lehman Swaps should not have been included in the third collateral call. Indeed, UBS's Grimaldi forthrightly acknowledged that, given the termination, there should not have been "markdowns" on the Lehman Swaps. (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 297-298.).

Highland contends, based on the inclusion of the Lehman Swaps and Internal Swaps in the third collateral call calculation, that UBS "committed a prior material breach by failing to

[10] In view of this holding that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the collateral call calculation pursuant to the unambiguous terms of the SWA, the court has not considered parol evidence on the issue.

The court thus rejects Highland's request for a finding that UBS admitted that the SWA required ISDA documentation of the Internal Swaps. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 30-31.) This request is based on testimony of UBS's Keith Grimaldi who, when shown Section 3 during cross-examination and asked if every CDS was required to have ISDA documentation, responded: "According to the language, yes." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 262-264.) Even if this evidence were properly considered, Highland's reliance on this answer ignores that Mr. Grimaldi further testified that ISDA documentation would not be "filled out" until the assets were transferred in the securitization. (Id. at 267-270.)

The court further notes that Highland requests a finding, arguably in support of its claim that the CDSs were not Existing Credit Default Swaps, that a CDS "cannot be created with the same legal entity on both sides of the transaction. . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 29.) Even if parol evidence were properly considered, there was substantial evidence in the record that internal swaps were common in securitizations of synthetic assets. (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1673-1676; (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1158-1162 [denying that intracompany swaps are "economic transactions" but acknowledging their use in CLO securitizations].)

properly calculate the collateral call[]." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 23, 27-28.) In support of this contention, Highland relies on the testimony of its expert Peter Vinella. According to Mr. Vinella's own analysis, however, if the Lehman swaps are excluded from the calculation for the third collateral call, but the Internal Swaps are included, the total increase in the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount as of November 4, 2008 is $328.62 million—an amount greater than the $300 million required to authorize the third collateral call pursuant to Section 12 of the SWA. (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1122-1139; DX Demo. 8.) Louis Dudney, UBS's expert in forensic accounting and damages (Trial Tr. at 824), analyzed Mr. Vinella's testimony and confirmed, using the same numbers as Mr. Vinella, that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount still exceeded $300 million on November 4, 2008, after excluding the Lehman Swaps but including the Internal Swaps. (PX Demo. 20 [accepted without objection in lieu of Dudney rebuttal testimony, Trial Tr. at 1870-1871].)

Based on this credible testimony that the threshold for the collateral call was met without the Lehman Swaps, the court holds that the third collateral call did not constitute a material breach of the contract, notwithstanding UBS's improper inclusion of the Lehman Swaps in the calculation.[11] (See generally Awards.Com v Kinko's, Inc., 42 AD3d 178, 187 [1st Dept 2007], affd 14 NY3d 791, 793 [2010]; Frank Felix Assocs., Ltd. v Austin Drugs, Inc., 111 F3d 284, 289 [2d Cir 1997] [under New York law, for a breach to be material, "it must go to the root of the agreement between the parties"] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted].)

[11] In view of this holding that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of November 7, 2008, the court need not reach UBS's contention that the collateral call was proper because the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of December 2, 2008, prior to the termination of the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, at 15 n 10.)

As discussed above, there is no dispute that the Fund Counterparties failed to meet the third collateral call. The court accordingly finds that the Fund Counterparties breached the SWA and turns to the issue of damages.

DAMAGES

Designation of Ineligible Securities

A critical issue in determining UBS's damages is whether UBS may recover damages for CDSs that UBS retained after its termination of the 2008 transaction, under these circumstances in which UBS did not designate the underlying reference obligations for any of the CDSs as "Ineligible Securities." Resolution of this issue requires interpretation of the SWA. Highland and UBS both contend that the SWA is unambiguous as to whether Ineligible Securities must be designated, but assert fundamentally inconsistent readings of the Agreement. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 44-49; see Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

As held above, the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace, 86 NY2d at 548.) Ambiguity will be found to arise where the terms of a contract are "subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp., 25 NY3d at 680 [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].) As also held above, a court should construe a contract so as to give full meaning and effect to its material provisions, and should read the contract as a whole and so as not to render any portion meaningless, if possible. (See Beal Sav. Bank, 8 NY3d at 324-25.)

Sections 5 (A), 5 (B), and 6 of the SWA are relevant to the calculation of CDS damages: Section 5 (A) provides for the calculation of losses with respect to CDSs removed from the warehouse during the term of the Agreement or "otherwise pursuant to Section 6"; Section 5 (B) (2) governs the calculation of losses upon a closing; and Section 6 governs this calculation in the event of a failure to close, incorporating terms from Sections 5 (A) and 5 (B).

Section 6 provides in pertinent part:

> "(A) If the Closing Date fails to occur on or prior to the Termination Date, then UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, either (at the election of the Servicer; provided that notice of such election is received on or prior to the Termination Date) (i) terminate each Credit Default Swap or (ii) novate each Credit Default Swap to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer), in each case, on the Termination Date.
>
> (C) To the extent there are any CDS Losses, the CDO Fund and SOHC shall collectively be responsible for 100% of any such CDS Losses. Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

CDS Losses are in turn defined in Section 5 (B) (2), the closing provision, as:

> "(x) the sum of (1) the aggregate Floating Amount payments and Physical Settlement Amount payments made by UBS with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps as to which a Floating Amount Event or a Credit Event occurred under the terms thereof, plus (2) the aggregate amount of Net Hedging Payments made by UBS with respect to all Hedging Transactions related to the Credit Default Swaps, plus (3) the aggregate Replacement Losses determined with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps and the related Hedging Transactions that were terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security (such amount in this clause (x), the 'CDS Losses') . . . ."

Relying on the requirement in the definition of CDS Losses that Reference Obligations be designated as Ineligible Securities, Highland argues that "[t]he term 'CDS Losses'

unambiguously limits UBS's recovery for unrealized (mark-to-market) losses to securities designated as 'Ineligible Securities,' and the Court is bound to enforce the agreement pursuant to its unambiguous terms." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46.) Put another way, Highland argues that UBS may recover mark-to-market losses only on CDSs that have been designated Ineligible Securities. (Id., ¶ 53.)[12] UBS asserts, among other things, that under Section 6, UBS may terminate, novate, or retain CDSs regardless of eligibility, that ineligibility designations are not relevant absent a closing, and that Highland's reading renders meaningless other provisions of the SWA. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

Upon close reading of the SWA, the court concludes that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to ineligibility designations and that, under Section 6, upon the failure to close UBS is entitled to retain CDSs and to recover losses for the retained CDSs, without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities. Section 6 (A) expressly provides for UBS to terminate or novate the CDSs, and does not require UBS to first make such designation. Although Section 6 (A) does not also, by its terms, provide for UBS to retain CDSs, a reading of the contract as a whole leaves no question that UBS was not only entitled to retain the CDSs upon the failure to close, but also that it was entitled to recover losses on the retained CDSs without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible.[13]

[12] Highland's damages expert, Adam Warren, testified that realized losses are losses sustained where a transaction has been closed out and an actual cash payment has been made. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1249, 1253.) He also testified that, in his opinion, there were no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because no assets had been designated as ineligible. (Id. at 1257 ["[O]ur computation is that there are no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because of the need to . . . create a designation of ineligible. And we saw no evidence of any Synthetic Warehouse asset being designated ineligible"].)

[13] In its decision of defendants' motion for summary judgment, this court held that it could not determine on the record of that motion whether the SWA was ambiguous with respect to UBS's entitlement to recover losses on retained CDSs, pursuant to Section 6, without a prior designation of such assets as Ineligible Securities. (2017 NY Slip Op. 30546[U], 2017 WL 1103879, * 4-7 [Sup Ct, NY County Mar. 13 2017], affd 159 AD3d 512, lv dismissed 32 NY3d 1080.) With the benefit of the parties' extensive trial briefing on this issue, the court now concludes, for the reasons discussed further in the text, that the agreement is not ambiguous.

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 641 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 11/14/2019

As the above-quoted definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) shows, this definition relates to Credit Default Swaps which, upon a closing, have been "terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security . . . ." After setting forth the definition of CDS Losses (and CDS Gains) in the context of a closing, Section 5 (B) (2) further provides: "To the extent the Closing Date fails to occur, allocation of CDS Losses, CDS Gains and any other amounts payable hereunder will be determined in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 hereof."

Significantly, while Section 6 (C) incorporates the defined term CDS Losses, the term CDS Losses also incorporates both the definition of Ineligible Security and the term Replacement Losses from Section 5 (A). These incorporated terms modify the definition of CDS Losses where a closing does not occur.

The definition of Ineligible Security pertains to securities that are ineligible for securitization upon a closing. The SWA thus defines Ineligible Security, in pertinent part, as "any Reference Obligation in the CDS Portfolio which has become ineligible for sale to the Issuer on the Closing Date as a result of the failure of such Reference Obligation to conform to the Eligibility Criteria as it exists at such time of determination . . . ." (SWA, Exhibit A-2 [emphasis added].)

Section 5 (A), which defines the term Replacement Losses, distinguishes between such Losses sustained during the term of the Agreement and those sustained upon termination in the event of a failure to close pursuant to Section 6. Section 5 (A) primarily addresses the removal of CDSs from the warehouse "during the term of this [the SWA] Agreement" where "a Reference Obligation or the related Credit Default Swap does not conform to the Eligibility Criteria" that must be met for securitization. This section provides that "UBS shall be entitled in good faith to designate any Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) as an Ineligible Security and (ii) in its sole discretion to remove any such Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) from the CDS Portfolio." Section 5 (A), however, continues:

> "To the extent any such Credit Default Swaps are terminated or novated, or at UBS's discretion, such exposure is retained following the designation of such Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities or otherwise pursuant to Section 6, UBS shall determine the Replacement Gain or Replacement Loss relating to such Credit Default Swaps [according to the formula that follows]."

(emphasis added). Section 5 (A) then sets forth a formula for calculating Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss, which specifically provides for such calculation not only upon termination or novation but also upon UBS's retention of the CDSs. (SWA § 5 [A] [1] – [3].)

Section 5 (A) thus clearly contemplates that UBS may novate, terminate, or retain CDSs both during the term of the Agreement and in the event of a failure to close. The Section affords UBS the discretion to terminate, novate, or retain CDSs "pursuant to Section 6," as distinct from its discretion to do so upon a designation of the underlying Reference Obligation as Ineligible during the term of the Agreement. Any other reading would render meaningless the Section 5 (A) provision "or otherwise pursuant to Section 6."

Moreover, in order to reconcile all of the provisions of the SWA, the Section 5 (B) (2) definition of CDS Losses, when used in Section 6, cannot be construed as requiring a designation of Ineligible Securities. As discussed above, Ineligible Securities are defined as securities ineligible for sale at a closing. Section 5 (B) (2), which governs the calculation of losses where a closing will occur, requires the designation of Ineligible Securities to facilitate the parties' calculation of losses on assets deemed ineligible for inclusion in the securitization that will occur upon the closing. When a closing will not occur, none of the CDSs or other assets will be securitized, and there is no need to distinguish between eligible and ineligible assets. While the definition of CDS Losses with the Ineligible Security designation requirement serves the purposes of Section 5 (B) (2) in the event of a closing, it is inconsistent with the CDS Loss calculation required in Section 6 where the closing does not occur.

Contrary to Highland's apparent contention (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46), a reading of the CDS Loss provision in Section 6 to permit calculation of losses on retained assets without an Ineligible Security designation does not violate the fundamental precept that a defined term in a contract must be given effect. (See generally Mionis v Bank Julius Baer & Co., 301 AD2d 104, 109 [1st Dept 2002].) Rather, the CDS Loss definition, as used in Section 6, is modified by the contractual provisions discussed above.

Although inartfully drafted, the SWA is not ambiguous. If the contract is read as a whole, and all of the provisions are given meaning, it is reasonably susceptible to only one meaning—namely, that CDS Losses for retained assets may be recovered without a designation of the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities where, as here, the contract has been terminated before the closing.[14] The court accordingly holds that UBS is entitled to recover damages for the retained CDSs in the Synthetic Warehouse.[15]

Calculation of Damages

[14] The court notes that the SWA and the Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA) both contain provisions which state that the two agreements "set forth the entire understanding of the parties hereto relating to the subject matter hereof . . . ." (SWA, § 18; CWA, § 18.) Assuming, without deciding, that these agreements should be read together in construing the SWA, the court finds that, although the assets at issue in the SWA and the CWA have markedly different attributes, the CWA is consistent with the SWA to the extent that the CWA permits UBS, in the event a closing does not occur, to retain and recover for losses on the CLOs that are the subject of the CWA, without a designation of the CLOs as Ineligible Securities. (See CWA, §§ 5 [A], 7 [A].)

[15] In view of this holding that the SWA is not ambiguous as to whether CDS losses may be recovered without designation of the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities, the court has not considered any parol evidence, either documentary or testimonial, in construing the SWA in this regard. Without limiting the foregoing, the court has not considered prior drafts of the SWA, which Highland offered in the event parol evidence were to be admitted. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 53.)

failure to meet the third collateral call. UBS sent Highland a notice, dated December 3, 2008, stating that a Termination Date had occurred under the Warehouse Agreements but that it would forbear from exercising its remedies for two days to permit the Fund Counterparties to meet this collateral call. (PX 7.) UBS then sent a further notice to Highland, dated December 5, 2008, stating that it would exercise its remedies as the call had not been met. (PX 8.) UBS held a public auction of the assets in the Knox Warehouse on December 16, 2008. By notice dated December 19, 2008, UBS demanded payment for its claimed losses based on the results of the auction—$157,949,885.47 for the assets in the Cash Warehouse (PX 10) and $587,357,060.59 for the assets in the Synthetic Warehouse. (PX 11.) UBS also notified Highland that it elected to retain the Collateral Obligations in the Cash Warehouse. (PX 10.)

CDS Damages

Highland argues that even if the recovery of damages for the CDSs is not barred by UBS's failure to designate the Reference Obligations for the CDSs as Ineligible Securities (a claim this court has rejected above), UBS has not proved damages for these CDSs. Specifically, Highland contends that UBS did not comply with the contractual requirements for calculation of losses because its post-termination auction was untimely and otherwise improper. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 57-59.) Highland also contends that UBS's marks do not otherwise "establish a reasonable connection between the asset value and UBS's alleged damages." (Id., ¶¶ 60-65.) UBS disputes these assertions. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29-31.)

Sections 6 (C), 5 (B) (2), and 5 (A) (3) are the provisions of the SWA that govern the calculation of CDS Losses upon termination. Section 6 (C) provides in full:

> "To the extent there are any CDS Losses, the CDO Fund and SOHC shall collectively be responsible for 100% of any such CDS Losses. Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such > amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

As discussed above, the definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) includes Replacement Loss, the calculation of which is governed by Section 5 (A). With respect to Replacement Loss relating to CDSs that are retained, Section 5 (A) (3) provides in full:

> "To the extent UBS retains such exposure, the Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss will be imputed based on the arithmetic average of at least three bids (or, if UBS if unable to obtain three such bids having made commercially reasonable efforts, such lesser number of bids as UBS is able to obtain) obtained by or on behalf of UBS from nationally recognized derivatives dealers in the relevant market (no more than one of which may be UBS or any of its Affiliates; provided that any such bid must be provided in good faith) to assume UBS's position under such Credit Default Swap."

The SWA, by its terms, thus contemplated that payment would be made within three days after the Termination Date, subject to notice from UBS. As the SWA provided for an auction to calculate the amount of the losses, it also contemplated that an auction could or would occur within that three day period.

By the terms of UBS's notices to Highland, although a Termination Date had occurred as of December 3, UBS extended the Fund Counterparties' time to meet the third collateral call until December 5. The court thus finds that the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements for failure to meet the third collateral call occurred on December 5. UBS did not conduct the auction to calculate the CDS Losses until December 16.

UBS's delay of approximately 11 days in conducting the auction, while seemingly de minimis, in fact had momentous financial consequences, given that the delay occurred in the wake of the September 15, 2008 Lehman bankruptcy filing and at the height of the financial crisis. With the market spiraling downward, the CDS losses ascertained through the auction process were approximately $117 million more than the losses calculated by using UBS's marks on either December 3 or December 5. (PX Demo. 21; DX Demo. 12 [showing UBS and Highland marks as of December 3 and 5; PX Demo. 28 at 60 [Ps.'s Closing Statement Demonstrative Exhibit, acknowledging that CDS damages, as calculated based on the auction, exceeded the losses calculated using UBS's marks on December 3 and 5 by over $117 million].)[16]

UBS contends that the three day payment period was for its benefit and that it "could exercise its right to get paid after three business days without waiver." (Ps.'s Findings, at 28.) The court agrees that UBS's delay in demanding payment or holding the auction did not result in a waiver of its right to seek payment of its damages resulting from the Fund Counterparties' breach. (See SWA § 20 ["Neither the failure nor any delay on the part of any party hereto to exercise any right, remedy, power or privilege under this Agreement shall operate as a waiver hereof. . . ."].) Highland correctly contends, however, that the delayed auction could not serve as a basis for calculating UBS's damages because the results of the auction did not reflect market conditions as of the date of termination or breach. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 57.)

As explained by the Court of Appeals:

> "It has long been recognized that the theory underlying damages is to make good or replace the loss caused by the breach of contract. Damages are intended to return the parties to the point at which the breach arose and to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach."

[16] At the trial, the parties stipulated to dispense with rebuttal testimony from plaintiffs' damages expert, Louis Dudney and, in lieu of such testimony, to the admission into evidence of plaintiffs' Demonstrative Exhibits 20 and 21, and defendants' Demonstrative Exhibit 12. (Trial Tr. at 1868, 1870 [Stipulation].) PX Demo. 21 and DX Demo. 12, which were prepared by Mr. Dudney, calculated damages using plaintiffs' and defendants' marks, respectively, on December 3 and 5, 2008. (Trial Tr. at 1870-1877.)

It is further settled that damages need not be proven with mathematical certainty. It is sufficient that a reasonable basis for the calculation of damages be shown. (See generally J.R. Loftus, Inc. v White, 85 NY2d 874, 877 [1995] ["While a plaintiff may recover damages when the measure of damages is unavoidably uncertain or difficult to ascertain, a reasonable connection between a plaintiff's proof and a [] determination of damages is nevertheless necessary"]; CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, *2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] ["The law of New York is clear that once the fact of damage has been established, the non-breaching party need only provide a stable foundation for a reasonable estimate [of damages]" [internal quotation marks and citations omitted, brackets in original].)

UBS's December 16, 2008 auction cannot satisfy either of these standards because, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's losses at, or even shortly after, the breach, due to the exceptional circumstances presented by the financial crisis.[17] The court accordingly turns to the alternative basis advanced by UBS for the calculation of damages—its marks on December 5, 2008. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29.)

It is well settled that "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma v Skaarup Ship Mgt. Corp., 916 F2d 820, 825 [2d Cir 1990], cert denied 499 US 907 [1991] [applying New York law and citing Simon v Electrospace

[17] There is authority that "in accordance with the objective that a party seeking recovery for breach of contract is entitled 'to be made whole' as of the time of the breach, the [factfinder] should be able to make its valuation determination on all relevant elements of the case, whether dated prebreach, on the date of breach, or 'some short time period thereafter.'" (Credit Suisse First Boston v Utrecht-America Fin. Co., 84 AD3d 579, 580 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Boyce v Soundview Tech. Group, Inc., 464 F3d 376, 389 [2d Cir 2006] [other internal quotation marks and citations omitted].) Although the auction was held shortly after the breach, this authority does not support calculation of damages based on the auction results, as the auction did not provide a reliable basis for assessing the losses.

Corp., 28 NY2d 136, 145-146 [1971], motion to amend remittitur and clarify denied 28 NY2d 809].) In accordance with the objective that the injured party be made whole, "damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.)

UBS offered credible testimony that its December 5, 2008 marks reasonably reflected the market value of the CDSs as of the December 5 breach date. In particular, Timothy LeRoux, who at the time of the transaction was second in command to Mr. Grimaldi on the UBS trading desk (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1640), gave credible testimony that, in the regular course of business, the trading desk "marked to market" hundreds of CLO assets, and every week or two was required to assign values on every one of the assets, both cash and synthetic, in the Knox Warehouse. (Id. at 1724.) Mr. LeRoux also described the marking process and identified information, including public information as to offers and bids on CDSs in the marketplace, that UBS considered in developing "objective" prices. (Id. at 1727, 1745-1750.) Mr. Grimaldi also testified that, although the trading desk performed the mark-to-market valuation of the assets in the Knox Warehouse, the UBS valuation group established oversight due to the volatility of the market and "would look at other market observations and make sure that those [the trading desk marks] were in line with the marketplace." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 207-208.)

Highland does not dispute that the mark-to-market process is a methodology for determining loss in market value of retained assets. (See e.g. Testimony of Adam Warren [Highland's damages expert], Trial Tr. at 1268-1269; Testimony of Philip Braner [Highland former executive], Trial Tr. at 469-472; Testimony of UBS's Timothy LeRoux, Trial Tr. at 1640, 1727-1729.)

Rather, in claiming that UBS's marks are not competent evidence on which to award damages, Highland suggests that the setting of marks by the trading group involved a conflict of interest, because the trading group's bonuses were based on the performance of the mark-to-mark assets and the group had the incentive to inflate the value of the assets. (Ds.s' Findings, ¶¶ 61-62.) Highland makes no showing that UBS inflated the value of the CDSs or that trading groups do not routinely develop marks. Moreover, Highland's assertion that "UBS's trading group alone set the marks for the Knox Warehouse assets" (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 62) ignores UBS's credible testimony, discussed above, that the valuation group exercised oversight in connection with the development of the marks.

Highland's further assertion that its own marks are more reliable (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65) is unsupported by persuasive evidence. Philip Braner, who ultimately became Chief Operating Officer of the Highland Capital Management CLO Group and COO of Highland Financial Partners (Braner Testimony, Trial Tr. at 397), testified that Highland was itself tracking marks on the assets in the Knox Warehouse (id. at 615) and had an "internal valuation team that was responsible for accumulating marks" in a process in which portfolio managers of the Highland funds participated. (See id. at 467.) While Highland appears to assert that its marks are more reliable than UBS's because they were set by a valuation team, Highland fails to show that the role of its valuation team differed in any material respect from that of the UBS valuation group that performed oversight on its trading group in the marking process.

Notably, Highland fails to explain how its methodology in setting marks was more reliable than UBS's. Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, forthrightly testified that he was not opining on the reasonableness of any marks in this case (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1247-1248), and he did not in fact give any testimony on whether UBS's or Highland's marks were more reliable.

The evidence at trial also demonstrated that Highland, like UBS, set marks on the CDSs on an asset by asset basis from March 2008 through October 2008. While there were differences between Highland's and UBS's marks during this period, the Highland and UBS marks in the month of October were substantially similar. The difference in the marks did not escalate substantially until November 2008. (PX Demo. 9, at 4.) Mr. Dudney gave testimony, which was not disputed, that although Highland, like UBS, had been setting marks on an asset by asset basis, Highland stopped doing so as of October 2008 and, in a November 30, 2008 calculation of damages, attributed the same mark (37) to each asset. (Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 883-884, 905-909, DX 116.) Highland offered no explanation for this change in methodology. Mr. Dudney, in contrast, gave plausible testimony that this use of the same mark did not make sense given the deterioration of the market. (Id. at 908.)

In sum, based on the credible evidence at the trial, the court holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating that its December 5, 2008 marks provide a reasonable basis, under the circumstances, for the calculation of damages at the time of the breach. In so holding, the court rejects Highland's not fully articulated contention that only an auction, and not a mark-to-market methodology, is a reliable method for calculating damages. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 59.) Highland's reliance on the testimony of its damages expert, Adam Warren, in support of this contention (see id.) is misplaced. While Mr. Warren testified that CDSs are "bespoke contracts," he did not give any testimony that an auction was required to ascertain their value.

Further, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's damages due to the volatility of the market at the time of the auction. It bears emphasis that, although the market was also volatile at the time the December 5, 2008 marks were accumulated, Highland has not advanced an alternative, other than the non-viable auction, to the mark-to-market valuation methodology. Nor has Highland made any showing that the market value of the CDSs was not reasonably determinable as of the date of breach using the mark-to-market valuation methodology.[18]

The court further holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating the reasonableness of its calculation of damages using those marks. UBS's and Highland's experts both provided the court with calculations of damages using UBS's and Highland's marks, respectively, as of December 5, 2008. Mr. Warren confirmed that his main differences with Mr. Dudney regarding the calculation of damages for the Synthetic Warehouse were that Mr. Dudney considered it appropriate, and he did not, to include damages for unrealized CDS losses and for the 20 Internal Swaps in which UBS was both the protection seller and the protection buyer. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298; DX Demo. 12; PX Demo. 21; see also Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1004.)

Mr. Warren excluded from his damages calculation unrealized CDS losses for all CDSs as to which a designation of ineligibility had not been made. He testified that his basis for doing so was his understanding of the contract—i.e, his understanding that the SWA required such designation—and not industry custom. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1281-1282.) For the reasons discussed above, this court has rejected Highland's position that the SWA should be construed as requiring ineligibility designations as a condition of the inclusion of unrealized losses on the CDSs in the calculation of damages. Also for the reasons discussed above, the court has rejected Highland's position that the losses on the Internal Swaps should not be included in this calculation.

[18] In its post-trial briefing, Highland sought a finding that if UBS is held to be entitled to recover damages for CDS losses, Highland's marks are more reliable than UBS's for determining those damages. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65.) Highland did not argue that the market value of the losses could not reasonably be determined by using marks. In contrast, in support of its claim that it is entitled to an offset against CDS damages for post-breach termination payments received by UBS on the CDSs, Highland questioned the accuracy of the market valuation at the time of the breach. Highland thus asserted in a footnote: "Given the scant market pricing data available at the time of the breach, post-termination payments and asset dispositions are relevant for the additional reason that they provide a more accurate measurement of the actual value of the Knox assets." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8 n 5.) This assertion is unsupported by any citation to trial testimony. More important, at the trial Highland did not offer any expert testimony that the mark-to-market methodology was not a reliable basis for calculating the CDS damages. For the additional reasons set forth in the section of this decision on Highland's requested Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value, the court finds that offset of post-breach payments received by UBS on the CDSs would be inconsistent with calculation of UBS's damages based on their market value at the time of the breach.

Review of the experts' calculations shows, moreover, that when such losses are included in the calculations, the difference between Highland's and UBS's totals is substantially reduced. As previously noted, the parties stipulated to the introduction into evidence of charts prepared by Mr. Dudney comparing his and Mr. Warren's calculations of CDS damages using UBS's and Highland's marks as of December 5, 2008. Using Highland's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated CDS mark-to-market losses of $388,284,750, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $361,331,855. (DX Demo. 12.) Using UBS's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated losses of $470,113,605, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $443,160,710. (PX Demo. 21.)

The difference in the totals is largely due to Mr. Warren's exclusion from his calculation of all unrealized CDS losses and all losses for the Internal Swaps. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1296-1299.) His calculation of $26,952,895 for CDS losses includes only realized CDS losses. (Id. at 1250.) According to Mr. Warren, the Internal Swaps account for $93,952,173 of the CDS damages using UBS's marks, or $68,801,027 using Highland's marks. (Id. at 1269.) Although Mr. Warren disputed UBS's entitlement to unrealized CDS losses, he performed a calculation including such losses. Using UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, these losses totaled $355,487,606. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Using Highland's marks as of that date, these losses totaled $299,118,973. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1269; DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Mr. Warren's total, using UBS's marks, for the Internal Swaps ($93,952.173) and the unrealized CDS losses ($355,487,606) was $449,439,779. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) As stated above, Mr. Dudney's calculation of total Synthetic Warehouse losses, using UBS's December 5, 2008 marks, was $470,113,605. Given the magnitude of the damages, this disparity is not material.

The court accordingly holds that UBS incurred losses in the Synthetic Warehouse of $470,113,605 as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

CLO Damages

Highland does not dispute that unrealized losses are recoverable for the CLO assets. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1293.) Moreover, UBS's (Mr. Dudney's) and Highland's (Mr. Warren's) calculations of the CLO losses as of December 5, 2008 are the same: Using Highland's marks, these losses were $106,157,101. (DX Demo. 12, at 2.) Using UBS's marks, the losses were $128,848,101. (PX Demo. 21.) Having concluded that UBS's damages were properly calculated based on UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, the court holds that UBS incurred losses in the Cash Warehouse of $128,848,101, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

Adjustments to Damages Calculation

In calculating the Synthetic and Cash Warehouse losses, Mr. Dudney and Mr. Warren made adjustments for the same items: carry (premiums and interest), collateral value, financing fees, and financing savings. Mr. Dudney's adjustment of $79,587,557 and Mr. Warren's adjustment of $76,632,634 did not differ materially. (PX Demo. 21.) According to Mr. Warren, the difference of approximately $3 million is due to Mr. Warren's exclusion of the Internal Swaps in calculating the carry. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298-1299.) As the court has held that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the damages calculation, Mr. Dudney's adjustments will be accepted.

Reducing UBS's damages by the adjustments, the court holds that UBS sustained total damages of $519,374,149 (Cash Warehouse Losses of $128,848,101 plus Synthetic Warehouse Losses of $470,113,605 minus $79,587,557).

OFFSETS

Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value

A central issue in this action is whether Highland is entitled to an offset against UBS's damages for appreciation in the value of the CDSs after the breach. The parties stipulated that UBS received post-breach termination payments net of carry on the CDSs, including the Internal Swaps, in the amount of $202,223,059. (DX 491.) It is undisputed that these payments were received months and, for many of the CDSs, years after the termination of the transaction. (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10 [acknowledging that UBS "liquidated the assets years later"]; PX 335 [spreadsheet showing termination dates for CDSs through 2011].)

Highland argues that, at the time the transaction was terminated, "frozen credit markets had created a severe mismatch between the assets' alleged market value and their actual value based on their cash flows." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10.) Highland further argues that UBS was able to sell these assets for hundreds of millions of dollars more than their December 2008 marks and that, while UBS is entitled to retain the sale proceeds, "it cannot ignore these monies in calculating the harm it actually suffered." (Id. at 11.) According to Highland, if disposition of the assets after the termination is not considered, UBS will receive "an enormous windfall." (Id.) UBS acknowledges that if a non-breaching party obtains a benefit "because of the breach," the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 6 [emphasis UBS's].) UBS argues, however, that the Fund Counterparties' breach was not a but for cause of the post-breach payments UBS received for the CDSs. (Id. at 7.) Rather, subsequent gains that resulted from UBS's disposition of the assets were "the result of UBS's contractual rights [to retain the assets] in the event of any termination and of its subsequent

As discussed above, contract damages are intended to make "good or replace the loss" caused to a party by the breach of contract and "to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.) Further, "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 825 [applying New York law and citing Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146].)

The calculation of damages is also subject to the fundamental precept that where a non-breaching party acquires a "benefit or opportunity for benefit . . . because of the breach, a balance must be struck between benefit and loss" and the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Indu Craft, Inc. v Bank of Baroda, 47 F3d 490, 495 [2d Cir 1995] [applying New York law]; accord Aristocrat Leisure Ltd. v Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 727 F Supp 2d 256, 289 [SD NY 2010] ["[I]f a victim derives a benefit from the breaching party's breach of contract, the breaching party only is responsible for the victim's net loss"], reconsideration denied 2010 WL 3431132; Fertico Belgium S.A. v Phosphate Chemicals Export Assn., Inc., 70 NY2d 76, 84 [1987], rearg denied 70 NY2d 694 [holding, in a "cover" action governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, that "'[g]ains made by the injured party on other transactions after the breach are never to be deducted from the damages that are otherwise recoverable, unless such gains could not have been made, had there been no breach'"] [quoting 5 Corbin, Contracts § 1041].)

Here, although UBS and Highland agree that any benefit derived by UBS because of the breach must be offset against its losses, neither party has cited, and the court's own research has not located, any case in which a court has considered how to apply this precept to a non-breaching party's retention of assets upon a failed securitization transaction and realization of subsequent gains. There is, however, a substantial body of law involving a breaching party's failure to deliver or purchase assets subject to fluctuations in value, in which the courts have assessed damages based on the market value of the assets at the time of breach and have declined to consider any subsequent increases or decreases in value of the assets. As discussed further below, the court concludes that these cases are inconsistent with the offset sought by Highland.

As the Second Circuit has explained in reviewing this body of law, New York courts reject damage awards "based on what 'the actual economic conditions and performance' were in light of hindsight." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826, quoting Aroneck v Atkin, 90 AD2d 966, 967 [4th Dept 1982], lv denied 59 NY2d 601 [1983].) "They have explicitly rejected the use of subsequent changes in value or profits where they would increase an award, and where they would decrease the award." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826 [internal citations omitted].)

In the securities context, courts have repeatedly held that the damages for failure to deliver or purchase shares of stock should be based on their market value at the time of breach, and not on any subsequent increase or decrease in their value. (Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, holding: "The proper measure of damages for breach of contract is determined by the loss sustained or gain prevented at the time and place of breach. The rule is precisely the same when the breach of contract is nondelivery of shares of stock"] [internal citations omitted]; Aroneck, 90 AD2d at 967 [where the buyer breached a contract to purchase shares, holding that damages should be based on market value at the time of breach, and rejecting the buyer's theory that the "value should be based on the actual economic conditions and performance" of the company post-breach]; Emposimato v CIFC Acquisition Corp., 89 AD3d 418, 421 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Aroneck and citing Simon in holding that "[i]n the case of a breach of contract to sell securities, expectation damages are calculated as 'the difference between the agreed price of the shares and the fair market value at the time of the breach'"]; Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc. v Hollander, 337 F3d 186, 197 [2d Cir 2003] [following Simon and Aroneck in a case involving the defendant's breach of a contract to deliver warrants]; see also Kaminsky v Herrick Feinstein LLP, 59 AD3d 1, 11-12 [1st Dept 2008], lv denied 12 NY3d 715 [2009] [holding that damages for breach of contract to deliver shares prior to an initial public offering (IPO) should be awarded based on the value of the shares at time of the breach, not their higher value post-IPO].)

The court holds that these cases involve transactions that are analogous to (although far less complex than) the transaction at issue, and apply the same measure of damages that this court has adopted above—namely, the measure of damages based on the market value of the assets on the date of the breach. These cases accordingly govern the calculation of damages here. The court notes, moreover, that sound reasons support the application of this measure of damages without consideration of post-breach fluctuations in the value of the assets.

As the Second Circuit reasoned, a contrary rule that would permit calculation of damages at the time of trial "would be a two-edged sword, because courts would have to diminish damage awards where the value of the item decreased or where losses were encountered subsequent to the breach as well as enhance them where conditions improve. However, New York courts have expressly refused to adopt this 'wait and see' theory of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) In addition, although the court does not adjust for changes in the value of the shares when calculating damages according to the date of breach measure, the parties themselves can protect against changes in value by hedging or acquiring shares in the market. As the Second Circuit further reasoned: "To be sure, uncertainties about the future and lack of perfect information may cause an asset to be under- or over-valued at any particular time. At that time, however, either party has an opportunity to hedge according to his or her judgment about the future stream of income." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826; see also Simon, 28 NY2d at 146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, reasoning that "[i]f plaintiff were anxious to own the shares rather than obtain their value, he was free to purchase them in the market. His cause of action should not and may not be converted into carrying a market 'call' or 'warrant' to acquire the stock on demand if the price rose above its value as reflected in his cause of action"].)

The court further holds that application of the date of breach measure of damages, without adjustments for fluctuations in the value of the assets, will serve the objective of putting UBS in the position it would have been in had the contract been performed. If the securitization had closed, UBS would have been entitled, under the express terms of the SWA, to novate to the Issuer its positions as protection seller on all of the eligible Knox CDSs. (SWA § 5 [B] [1].) As a result of the breach, UBS was forced to assume a substantial risk of loss under the CDSs that would have been novated to the Issuer had the closing occurred. As discussed above, the loss in market value of the retained CDSs as of the date of breach was determined using the mark-to-market methodology. More specifically, as confirmed by both UBS's and Highland's experts, the mark-to-market losses calculated as of the date of breach represent the cost to UBS to exit the CDSs—

that is, the payments to be made to third-parties so that they would take on, and UBS could extricate itself from, the risk. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1304-1306; Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 894-895.) A damage award for these mark-to-market losses will therefore compensate UBS for the exposure to risk that it would not have faced had the contract been performed.

To the extent that Highland contends that a damage award is not appropriate for these mark-to-market losses because the losses were not realized, the court rejects that contention. The damage award is appropriate, notwithstanding that the losses were not realized, because, as held above, the contract affords UBS the right of recovery for such losses. (See CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, * 2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] [reasoning that, where the contractual definition of loss for the purpose of calculating damages did not require the CDS protection buyer to sustain "actual loss," "[t]he absence of an actual loss on a Reference Obligation transaction, thus, is not a barrier to [the protection buyer's] recovery. . ."] [emphasis in original].)

The court further holds that the record does not support Highland's contention that UBS's post-breach gains were realized because of the breach, and that this case therefore falls under the line of authority that requires an offset for such gains. Highland in effect contends that because UBS retained the CDSs as a result of the breach, it also realized the post-breach gains because of the breach.[19] That conclusion does not follow. As held above, UBS had a contractual right to retain the CDSs upon the termination of the transaction based on the Fund Counterparties' breach of the SWA by failing to meet the collateral call. The SWA does not contain any provision that limited UBS's discretion as to when to dispose of the assets after termination. Rather, as UBS persuasively argues, the gains realized as a result of the post-breach disposition of assets were attributable not to the breach itself but to UBS's assumption of the risk of loss on the CDSs and its investment strategy as to when to dispose of them based on its assessment of the market. (See G & R Corp. v American Sec. Trust Co., 523 F2d 1164, 1175 [DC Cir 1975] [holding that while the transfer of property to the plaintiffs was caused by the defendant's breach, the profit realized by the plaintiffs from a post-breach sale was not "caused by the breach" but was "attributable to the [plaintiffs'] decision to hold [the property] until [its] condition and the market were favorable for sale"].)

[19] In so holding, the court rejects UBS's contention that it would have been entitled to retain the CDS assets, regardless of the Fund Counterparties' breach, because the Agreements would have terminated in any event as of March 14, 2009, at which point UBS would have had the contractual right to retain the assets. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8.) This assertion is not only speculative but ignores that UBS did in fact acquire the right to retain the assets upon the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements as a result of their failure to meet the third collateral call. For the reasons discussed in the text, however, the court cannot accept Highland's further contention that UBS realized gains on the retained CDSs because of the breach.

Nor does Highland successfully argue that the gains realized by UBS on the post-breach disposition of the assets must be offset under general principles which require a party who suffers damages as a result of another's breach to take reasonable steps to mitigate its damages. (See Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 5-9.) Highland cites cases requiring mitigation in connection with the purchase and sale of securities and transactions in other markets. (See e.g. Drummond v Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., No. 95 Civ. 2011 [DC], 1996 WL 631723, * 2-3 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Oct. 31, 1996] [holding that where the buyer breached a contract to purchase securities, the seller must take steps to mitigate its damages by selling the securities within "a reasonable period of time"]; Saboundjian v Bank Audi (USA), 157 AD2d 278, 284-285 [1st Dept 1990] [holding that where a broker failed to execute a customer's speculative currency exchange order, the customer was required to direct execution of the trade "within a reasonable time after he learned that it had not been effected earlier"].)

These cases are inapposite, as the SWA affords UBS the contractual right to retain the securities upon the Fund Counterparties' breach. Ironically, although purporting to rely on these cases, which in fact require that the non-breaching party mitigate within a reasonable period of time, Highland argues not that UBS was required to dispose of the CDSs within a reasonable period of time after the breach but that it was required to hold them for months and, indeed, years, until the market improved. Highland thus asserts that UBS reasonably mitigated by "holding (as opposed to fire selling) fully performing interest and premium-bearing assets in the face of a dysfunctional market. . . ," and that "UBS's mitigation was not only reasonable, but required by law." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 7.) Put another way, Highland does not identify a specific date or dates by which UBS was required to mitigate. To the contrary, without citation to any legal authority, Highland argues that UBS was required to hold the assets for an indefinite period, until the market improved, to minimize its losses.

The mitigation cases provide no support for Highland's assertion that UBS's disposition, months and years after the breach, of assets that it had a contractual right to retain, constitutes mitigation.[20] Rather, in claiming that it is entitled to "offsets" for the post-breach gains realized by UBS, Highland appears in effect to advance a measure of damages that is patently inconsistent with the fundamental tenet of the date of breach measure of damages—namely, that a non-breaching party's damages for assets with a determinable market value must be calculated

[20] Nor does Highland cite any other authority that supports its claim that it is entitled to offsets for post-breach gains realized by UBS. Cases in which a party has a duty to cover (see e.g. Fertico Belgium S.A. v Phosphate Chemicals Export Assn., Inc., 70 NY2d 76, supra) are inapposite, given UBS's contractual right to retain the CDSs upon the breach. Cases in which a party is on both sides of a securities transaction are factually dissimilar. (See Aristocrat Leisure Ltd. v Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 727 F Supp 2d 256, supra [where the plaintiff company breached a contract affording the defendant bondholders the right to convert their bonds to the company's stock, and the bondholders held open existing short positions in the company's stock on which they realized post-breach gains, the company was entitled to an offset]; see also Minpeco, S.A. v Conticommodity Servs., Inc., 676 F Supp 486, 490 [SD NY 1987] [holding that the plaintiff's losses on short futures positions on silver as a result of the defendants' manipulation of the market were required to be offset by the plaintiff's profits on physical silver positions also then held by the plaintiff].)

at the date of breach, not based on hindsight, and that neither party can select the date on which the damages calculation will be most favorable to it. Thus, a non-breaching buyer cannot select the date on which the assets "had their highest value or a period of time that was profitable but that excludes periods when losses occurred." (See Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) Similarly, a breaching buyer cannot avoid or reduce the damages caused by its breach by invoking post-breach decreases in the value of the assets. (See id.)

The court accordingly holds that Highland's request for an offset for UBS's post-breach gains from the disposition of the CDSs must be denied.

Offset for Right of First Refusal Counterclaim

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) seeks judgment on its first counterclaim against plaintiff UBS Securities LLC for breach of the Cash Warehouse Agreement provision affording it the right to purchase CLO assets in the event UBS elected to retain such assets upon the termination of the Agreement. Section 5 (A) of the CWA provides that in event of failure to close, "UBS shall be authorized (but not required) to sell each Collateral Obligation then in the Warehouse Account in accordance with the Liquidation Procedures." The Liquidation Procedures set forth in section 7 (A) of the CWA provide in pertinent part:

> "If any Collateral Obligation is to be sold, UBS shall have the right to direct such sale on such terms and in such manner and at such time that it deems appropriate in its sole discretion. UBS may, in its sole discretion, elect to retain any such Collateral Obligation or to sell such Collateral Obligation to one of UBS's Affiliates in which event, for purposes of determining Net Collateral Gain and Net Collateral Loss, such Collateral Obligation shall be deemed to have been liquidated at a price equal to its Market Value. To the extent that UBS in its sole discretion elects to retain such Collateral Obligation, the Servicer will have the right to purchase such Collateral Obligation at its Market Value."

Section 7 (A) further provides that if UBS elects to sell CLOs upon termination, "the Servicer will have the right to bid for and purchase such Collateral Obligation at a purchase price equal to the highest third party bid received by UBS for the purchase of such Collateral Obligation."

It is undisputed that Highland Capital notified UBS that it sought to purchase six of the CLOs with a bid price of $1.9 million and a notional value of $44 million, but that it sought to provide the funds for the purchase, and to settle the trades, in the name of one of its affiliates, CLO Value Fund. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 21.) UBS declined to agree to the sale to the Highland Capital affiliate. (Id.; DX 72; PX 292.)

The court is unpersuaded that a Highland Capital affiliate had the right, under the CWA, to purchase the CLOs. Section 7 (A), which governs the disposition of the CLO assets upon termination, expressly affords one UBS Affiliate the right to purchase CLOs. In contrast, this Section affords the right to purchase only to the Servicer, and not to any other Highland entity. The Servicer is defined as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (CWA, First Paragraph.) Reading the CWA as a whole, the court further finds that no other provision modifies or is inconsistent with this limitation. On the contrary, where the acts of Highland Capital's Affiliates were implicated, the CWA expressly referred to the Affiliates. (CWA, § 13 [B] [limiting the liability of the "Servicer" "for any acts or omissions by the Servicer or any Affiliate of the Servicer, or any of their directors, officers, members, agents, equity holders [and others] under or in connection with this Agreement, or for any decrease in the value of the Collateral Portfolio . . . ."].)[21] The court accordingly holds that the CWA unambiguously provides that the right to purchase retained CLOs is limited, among the Highland entities, to Highland Capital.

In view of this holding that the CWA is not ambiguous with respect to Highland's post-

[21] The parties to the transaction knew how to afford rights to purchase assets to Affiliates of the Servicer. The SWA provides that if the closing fails to occur, UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, novate CDSs "to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer). . . ." (SWA § 6 [A].) The omission from the CWA of authorization to Affiliate(s) of the Servicer to purchase CLOs is therefore notable. Moreover, Highland Capital does not claim that the concerns—regulatory and other—that are implicated in novating CDSs are comparable to those in selling CLOs.

termination right to purchase CLOs, the court rejects Highland's contention that the court should consider evidence allegedly showing that UBS and Highland Capital had a prior course of conduct in which UBS permitted Highland Capital to settle trades "at its fund level." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 80-81.) Parol evidence of course of conduct is not admissible to construe an unambiguous contract. (See e.g. Sigismondi v Queens Transit Corp., 38 AD2d 71, 73 [2d Dept 1971], affd no opinion 32 NY2d 745 [1973]; Evans v Famous Music Corp., 1 NY3d 452, 459 [2004].)

The court further notes that even if Highland Capital could recover on its counterclaim, the damages it seeks are not recoverable. Highland Capital seeks a finding that because the CLOs continued to perform until maturity, "it would have profited $46 million" if it had been permitted to exercise its right of first refusal to purchase the CLOs. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 82; DX Demo. 9.) As Highland Capital acknowledges, however, the market value of the CLOs at the time of breach was $1,934,214. (DX Demo. 9.) The measure of damages, as explained above in connection with Highland Capital's claim for offsets against UBS's damages, is the market value of the assets as of the date of breach, not the increase in their value in the indefinite future.

Offset for Unjust Enrichment

Highland Capital also seeks judgment on its second counterclaim alleging that UBS was unjustly enriched by its failure to permit Highland Capital, through its affiliate CLO Value Fund, to purchase the Collateral Obligations upon termination. This claim for unjust enrichment is not maintainable as the right to purchase is governed by contract—the CWA. (See generally Pappas v Tzolis, 20 NY3d 228, 234 [2012], rearg denied 20 NY3d 1075 [2013]; Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v Long Is. R.R. Co., 70 NY2d 382, 388-389 [1987].)

Offset for Settlements with Highland Affiliates

Highland also requests an offset for settlements with three Highland Affiliates—Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. (Credit Strategies), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. (Crusader Offshore), and Highland Crusader Holding Corporation (Crusader Holding) (collectively, the Settling Highland Affiliates). Credit Strategies and Crusader Offshore were defendants in this action. UBS asserted its fraudulent conveyance cause of action against them as well as all of the other defendants. (Second Am Compl., Fifth Cause of Action.) Crusader Holding was a defendant in a separate complaint, which asserted a fraudulent conveyance cause of action against it. (UBS Secs. LLC v Highland Crusader Holding Corp., Sup Ct, NY County, Index No. 652646/11, Compl., First Cause of Action; Ps.'s Letters, dated July 21, 2015 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 397]; Jan. 7, 2016 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 398].) This court bifurcated the trial of this action, directing that it would first hold a bench trial on the breach of contract claims, which were triable by the court and are the subject of this decision, and that the fraudulent conveyance and other claims, which are triable by a jury, would be heard subsequently. (May 1, 2018 Decision on the Record [NYSCEF Doc. No. 494].)

The parties dispute whether the confidential settlements (DX 76 id and DX 77 id) may be considered in this action. They also dispute whether the settlements may be offset, pursuant to statute or case law, against the damages awarded by this decision to UBS against the Fund Counterparties on the breach of contract causes of action. (See Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 14-21; Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 15-19, 21-24.)

Even assuming, without deciding, that the damages may be subject to offset by the settlements, the determination of whether or to what extent the offset should be allowed must await determination of the jury trial. Where an offset for a settlement is sought, "the damages against which the settlement is sought to be applied should be determined so a proper comparison can be made between them and the damages covered by the settlement." (Carter v.

State of New York, 139 Misc 2d 423, 429 [Ct Cl, 1988], affd 154 AD2d 642 [2d Dept 1989]; accord Moller v North Shore Univ. Hosp., 12 F3d 13, 16 [2d Cir 1993] [applying New York law].)

Here, Highland argues that the causes of action against the settling defendants are "wholly derivative of its breach-of-contract claims against the Fund counterparties." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 16.) UBS persuasively argues, in opposition, that the fraudulent conveyance causes of action seek relief in addition to compensatory damages, including imposition of a constructive trust and punitive damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo, at 22-24; Second Am. Compl., at 57-58.) Moreover, the damages, if any, that will be awarded against the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital on the fraudulent conveyance cause of action remain to be determined at the jury trial. On this record the court accordingly cannot compare the settlements with the fraudulent conveyance damages. Nor is there any basis for the court to determine the extent to which the settlements cover the same damages, or damages that overlap with, the breach of contract damages awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties by this decision. The determination of the offset issue will therefore be deferred pending the jury trial. As it appears, however, that Highland may be entitled to an offset for some or all of the settlement amounts, the court will stay enforcement, to the extent of the settlement amount ($70.5 million), of the judgment to be awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties for the damages for breach of contract.

Conclusion

UBS is entitled to damages for $519,374,149 on the third and fourth causes of action against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements. Enforcement of the judgment for this amount will be stayed up to $70.5 million, the amount of the settlements with the Settling Highland Affiliates.

[22] By letter dated October 17, 2019 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 640), counsel (Reid Collins & Tsai LLP) for Highland Capital, the Fund Counterparties and other Highland defendants, advised the court of Highland Capital's bankruptcy filing, and represented that the automatic stay does not preclude decision of the causes of action against the Fund Counterparties or the counterclaim by Highland Capital. This letter sought to reserve defendants' position on the effect of the bankruptcy filing on subsequent proceedings in this action.

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	)	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	)	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (SGJ)
Debtor.	)

ADDENDUM TO PROOF OF CLAIM FILED BY UBS AG, LONDON BRANCH

1. UBS AG, London Branch hereby submits this addendum to its proof of claim (together, the "Proof of Claim") against Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Chapter 11 Case").

2. UBS AG, London Branch and UBS Securities LLC (together, the "Claimant" or "UBS") each have claims against the Debtor and each is filing a proof of claim in this Chapter 11 Case. Because their claims arise from the same set of factual events, including the same failed transaction, misconduct involving the Debtor and its affiliates, and subsequent litigation, the UBS claims overlap and their proof of claim forms and addendums are substantially the same.

3. This addendum is attached to, incorporated into, and constitutes an integral part of Claimant's Proof of Claim against the Debtor. Claimant files this Proof of Claim under compulsion of the Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488], as extended by the Joint Stipulation and Order Extending Bar Date [Docket No. 547] and modified by the Order Denying UBS's Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay to Proceed with State Court Action [Docket No. 765], solely for the purpose of asserting Claimant's claims against the Debtor, as more particularly described and subject to any limitations set forth below.

Factual Background

A. The Knox Transaction

2. Claimant's claims arise out of a failed transaction dating back thirteen years ago and the state court action (the "State Court Action") that followed between Claimant, the Debtor, Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC") (together with CDO Fund, the "Fund Counterparties," and the Fund Parties and the Debtor collectively, "Highland"), among other parties.[2]

3. In early 2007, Claimant and Highland agreed to pursue a complex form of securitization transaction known as a "CLO Squared" (the "Knox Transaction"). (Ex. B, Decision at 2.) The purpose of the Knox Transaction was to acquire and securitize a series of collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities and credit default swap ("CDS") assets (the "Knox Assets"). To that end, the Debtor agreed to be the "Servicer" of the Knox Transaction, and as such was responsible for identifying the specific CLO and CDS assets to be securitized. Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets identified by Highland. Claimant would then hold, or "warehouse," the assets until the securitization was completed (the "Knox Warehouse"). Under this arrangement, Claimant financed the acquisition of $818 million in Knox Assets. (Id.)

[2] The procedural history of the State Court Action is incorporated by reference, but is voluminous. The operative Second Amended Complaint and Phase I Decision and Order are attached as Exhibit A and Exhibit B, respectively. Additional pleadings and orders can be found on the State Court docket for Index No. 650097/2009 or by contacting Claimant's counsel. Claimant reserves the right to file a copy of additional pleadings or orders with this Court.

4. The parties' first attempt at the Knox Transaction was not completed successfully and the relevant agreements expired in August 2007 without the contemplated securitization having occurred. (Id. at 3.) Rather than end their relationship, however, Highland and Claimant continued to consider the possibility of pursuing the contemplated securitization in 2008 under restructured versions of the prior agreements. Highland and Claimant always understood that—if the securitization were not successful—the Fund Counterparties would be obligated to pay Claimant for 100% of the losses on any CLO or CDS assets that been acquired and warehoused for the securitization. In order to convince Claimant to agree to enter restructured versions of those agreements and to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets, Highland assured Claimant that the Fund Counterparties had sufficient assets to cover any losses. It did so by providing Claimant with false, incomplete, and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 47-61.)

5. In addition, Claimant specifically conditioned its agreement to enter the restructured agreements on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post an additional $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral"), in which Claimant would hold a security interest. (Id. ¶¶ 56-59; Ex. B, Decision at 3.) Highland assembled $70 million in such Initial Restructuring Collateral. But what Highland did not tell Claimant—and what is now clear was omitted on purpose—was that the Fund Counterparties did not own all of the Initial Restructuring Collateral they were expected to post. Instead, to meet this obligation, the Debtor exercised its control over other Highland affiliates, transferring and redirecting assets from such other entities that it controlled to assemble the Initial Restructuring Collateral. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 56-59.)

6. Similarly, while negotiating the restructured transaction, Highland provided Claimant with financial reports and statements that contained materially false and misleading information and omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 47-52.) The Debtor itself had prepared these financial statements and knew they contained material misstatements. (Id. ¶¶ 48-50, 54.) Among other things, Highland misrepresented the amount of cash held by CDO Fund. (Id. ¶ 52.) Highland also failed to disclose that many of the assets on the Fund Counterparties' financial statements already had been encumbered. (Id. ¶¶ 51, 53.) These misrepresentations not only evince a specific intent by Highland to induce Claimant into entering the restructured agreements, but a longstanding willingness to prevent Claimant from ever recovering the amounts owed under the parties' proposed agreements in the event the Knox Assets suffered any losses. In addition, these events show the Debtor's singular control over—and ability to move—assets from one Highland affiliate to another at will.

7. Based on Highland's material misstatements and omissions, Claimant agreed to pursue the restructured transaction and once more attempt the securitization, and the parties executed three new written agreements: an Engagement Letter, a Cash Warehouse Agreement, and a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (collectively, the "Warehouse Agreements"). (See Ex. B, Decision at 3.) The Engagement Letter was executed by Claimant and the Debtor; the Fund Counterparties were not parties to the Engagement Letter. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 62.) The Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements were executed by Claimant and the Debtor, along with the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 64-65.)

8. As described above, Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets that the parties planned to securitize. In so doing, the key risk Claimant faced was the possibility that the Knox Assets would lose value while securitization was pending. To address this risk, Claimant and the Debtor agreed in the Engagement Letter that the Fund Counterparties would bear this risk. Notably, at the time, the Debtor was the Investment Manager to the Fund Counterparties under agreements that gave the Debtor total control over those entities. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26.)

9. The Warehouse Agreements reiterated that the Fund Counterparties (as controlled by the Debtor) would bear the risk, specifying that if the Knox Assets lost value while securitization was pending, the Fund Counterparties "will in aggregate bear 100% of the risk" for the Knox Assets—with CDO Fund bearing 51% of any losses and SOHC bearing the remaining 49%.

10. To further protect Claimant in the event that the Knox Assets lost value, the Warehouse Agreements provided for recurring measurements of mark-to-market losses on all assets in the Knox Warehouse and required the Fund Counterparties to post collateral in the event the Knox Assets lost a set amount of value. Specifically, the parties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post an additional $10 million in collateral for each $100 million in losses to the overall value of the Knox Assets. (Ex. B, Decision at 4.)

11. In September and October 2008, amid the global economic recession, the value of the Knox Assets dropped by $100 million, twice. Thus, Claimant twice exercised its contractual right to demand additional collateral. And twice Highland posted the required collateral. (Id.) Although the Warehouse Agreements specified that it was the Fund Counterparties who would post collateral, the Debtor moved assets around from other entities it controlled to make the first two collateral calls (without disclosing this practice to Claimant). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 79.) On or about November 7, 2008, Claimant issued a third margin call, because the value of the Knox Assets suffered additional losses of $200 million (bringing the aggregate losses to over $400 million).

(Ex. B, Decision at 4.) This time, Highland refused to provide the additional collateral required under the Warehouse Agreements.

12. Highland's default on Claimant's third margin call triggered a termination event under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.) On December 5, 2008, Claimant gave Highland formal notice of default and demanded the Fund Counterparties pay Claimant for 100% of the losses incurred on the Knox Assets—which had, by then, grown to over $520 million.

13. There is no question that the Debtor knew the Fund Counterparties were liable for the losses under the Warehouse Agreements. Indeed, the Highland officer who executed the Warehouse Agreements admitted under oath that, "as of the end of the year 2008," Highland knew that the Fund Counterparties owed Claimant "hundreds of millions of dollars in connection with the Knox Warehouse Agreements." (Travers Dep. at 261:8-20).) But rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, the Debtor, with Mr. Dondero at the helm, "devised a strategy to delay the resolution of that obligation [to pay Claimant] for as long as possible." (Id.) To that end, Highland devised and subsequently deployed a multifaceted strategy—one that would last for many years thereafter—to intentionally frustrate and prevent Claimant from recovering any of the amounts that both the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties knew were rightfully owed to Claimant under the Warehouse Agreements.

14. First, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold any payment to Claimant—a position that the Fund Counterparties maintained (again, under the specific direction of the Debtor) for more than a decade. (See id.) The Debtor did so not only with the specific knowledge that the Fund Counterparties owed hundreds of millions of dollars to Claimant for the losses on the Knox Assets, but with the knowledge that Claimant would come seeking payment for such losses and, in particular, to look toward any and all collateral owned by the Fund Counterparties as one source of payment. As one of Highland's officers stated an internal email to Mr. Dondero in an internal email dated January 16, 2009: "[UBS] is going to be calling [] today asking for all additional collateral that cdo and sohc have left to cover the obligation left by the knox transaction." But rather than turning over the collateral in question to Claimant or, at the very least, securing such assets so that they could be used to pay Claimant, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold such assets and payments from Claimant: "[T]hey can see us in court for their additional collateral." True to that promise, even after Claimant filed suit and laid out the amounts due under the contracts, the Debtor forced the Fund Counterparties to launch an affirmative, multi-year campaign—one which would consume much of the cash and assets belonging to the Fund Counterparties themselves—to stave off any payment from the Fund Counterparties to force Claimant to try to recover such claims through litigation and, once in litigation, devising knowingly baseless defenses and arguments for the Fund Counterparties to assert in such litigation.

15. On top of directing the Fund Counterparties to withhold payment and force Claimant to litigate for amounts the Debtor already knew they rightfully owed to Claimant, the Debtor undertook a litany of other actions to ensure that, even if Claimant were successful in the litigation it had been forced to initiate against the Fund Counterparties, it would not be able to collect any judgment arising out of the litigation. Such actions included, but were not limited to, a series of fraudulent transfers out of, and away from, an alter ego of SOHC, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 109.) These internal transfers of funds—all overseen by James Dondero, the Debtor's founder and president—were designed to prevent Claimant from ever collecting the millions of dollars it was owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

16. In addition to such fraudulent transfers, the Debtor also took steps after the lawsuit was filed to ensure that no additional value would be transferred to the Fund Counterparties—deliberately taking steps to keep both SOHC and CDO Fund undercapitalized. Not only did the Debtor prevent additional value from being transferred to the Fund Counterparties, it is clear that the Debtor also failed to ensure that the Fund Counterparties retained assets that could be used to pay any such judgment. Quite to the contrary, it is now clear that any and all assets of any value that once belonged to the Fund Counterparties have, in one way or another, been transferred away, drained, or otherwise wasted by the Fund Counterparties, the Debtor itself, or the Debtor's affiliates—all at the Debtor's direction. Indeed, in a recent filing before this Court, the Debtor recently disclosed that both of the Fund Counterparties are completely "insolvent." (Docket No. 687 at 1.) This means that—separate and apart from the transfers of assets out of, and away from, HFP that occurred in 2009—the Debtor has directed, or otherwise permitted, the Fund Counterparties to engage in acts that have left these once marque investment funds with literally no assets that can be used to pay Claimant. All such actions and omissions by the Debtor were performed with either the specific intent to prevent or frustrate Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements, or a wanton and reckless disregard of Claimant's rights to those amounts. Such actions and omissions constitute breaches of the Debtor's duty of good faith and fair dealing under the Warehouse Agreements.

B. The State Court Action and the Debtor's Efforts to Avoid Paying Claimant

17. On February 24, 2009, Claimant filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York (the "State Court") against the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties. With knowledge of Claimant's lawsuit, the Debtor exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties to ensure they would not meet their obligations and to impede Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed by those entities. (Id. ¶¶ 112, 114.) Rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, and as discussed above, the Debtor orchestrated an extensive multi-part strategy to delay resolution of Claimant's claims for as long as possible. As a result, the Debtor further interfered with Claimant's contractual rights, thereby breaching the covenants of good faith and fair dealing inherent in the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.)

18. By this time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, HFP, had become insolvent, although they still owned significant assets. (Id. ¶ 108.) Nonetheless, the Debtor failed to act in good faith to cause HFP to satisfy the debts, as much as possible, then owed to Claimant. Instead, the Debtor caused HFP to make additional improper and fraudulent asset transfers, deliberately kept the Fund Counterparties undercapitalized, and allowed all assets of any value to be drained from the Fund Counterparties—acts which not only impaired Claimant's ability to recover anything from the Fund Counterparties, but precluded it altogether. (Id. ¶ 111.) In March 2009, conscious that Claimant had commenced an action against Highland a few weeks earlier, and in breach of their continuing duty of good faith and fair dealing, and with actual fraudulent intent, the Debtor and HFP caused asset transfers of millions of dollars of assets to the Debtor, Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (now Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) (collectively, the "Affiliated Transferee Defendants"), among others, thereby further reducing Highland's abilities to meet their obligations to Claimant. (Id. ¶¶ 111, 113.) The Debtor and its principals exercised domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties and HFP for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of the Debtor and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, the Debtor and its principals made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay Claimant the losses that they and the Debtor had agreed they would pay under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id. ¶¶ 112-114.)

19. As Claimant learned about Highland's conduct through discovery, Claimant amended its complaint to assert additional claims and name additional Highland entities, including HFP, the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, and Strand Advisors, Inc. As amended and stated in its Second Amended Complaint (attached hereto as Exhibit A) in the State Court Action, filed on May 11, 2011, Claimant's claims include breach of contract claims directly against the Fund Counterparties, as well as claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference, and declaratory judgments for alter ego liability against HFP and general partner liability against Strand Advisors, Inc. The Debtor subsequently brought counterclaims against Claimant for breach of contract and unjust enrichment. (See Ex. B, Decision at 35-37.)

20. The procedural history of the State Court Action is complex. The Debtor and its affiliates and Claimant filed, and the State Court ruled on, four sets of motions to dismiss. The Debtor and its affiliates then filed two sets of summary judgment motions, which led to a series of complex rulings by the State Court in 2017. The parties filed various interlocutory appeals of the State Court's rulings on the motions to dismiss and for summary judgment. Those appeals were heard by the Appellate Division for the First Judicial Department in the County of New York, with the Appellate Division issuing five decisions over this suit's protracted history (some of which are still subject to further appellate rights).

21. Also included in the Appellate Division's decisions was an order arising from an appeal of the State Court's ruling on Claimant's motion to restrain Defendants Highland Credit

Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P. from disposing of property received through the fraudulent transfers orchestrated by the Debtor. Claimant showed it had a likelihood of success on the merits of its fraudulent transfer claims, and the Appellate Division enjoined both Highland entities from disposing of their assets. Ultimately, these injunctions resulted in partial settlements between Claimant and Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P.

22. By early 2018, more than nine years after Claimant first filed suit, the parties were finally ready to proceed to trial. Due to a jury waiver clause in the Warehouse Agreements, however, and after related pre-trial briefing, the State Court bifurcated Claimant's claims into two distinct phases for trial: Phase I, consisting of a bench trial on Claimant's claims against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, as well as the Debtor's counterclaims; and Phase II, consisting of a jury trial on Claimant's remaining claims against all remaining Highland entities, including the Debtor.[3] (Ex. B, Decision at 2 n.1, 38.)

23. The State Court presided over a thirteen-day bench trial for Phase I from July 9 through July 27, 2018. (Id. at 1.) On November 14, 2019, the State Court entered a Decision and Order on Phase I (attached hereto as Exhibit B), ruling in favor of Claimant on almost every issue presented in Phase I. In particular, the court found the Fund Counterparties liable to Claimant for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, found no liability on the part of Claimant for either of the Debtor's counterclaims, and rejected almost every one of the Debtor's offset arguments with the only remaining issue (affecting approximately $70,500,000) to be determined after Phase II. (Id. at 39.) An Entry of Judgment on Phase I was entered on February 10, 2020. Under that Phase I final judgment, Claimant is entitled to $1,039,957,799.44, consisting of $519,374,149.00 in damages and $520,583,650.44 in pre-judgment interest as of January 22, 2020, with additional interest of $128,065 having accrued daily until the Entry of Judgment.

24. The next step in the State Court Action is Phase II of the trial, where Claimant's remaining claims against not only the Debtor, but also against other Highland affiliates are to be tried to a jury, with the court deciding liability as to the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim and the jury deciding all remaining claims. (Id. at 2 n.1, 38.) The claims to be tried in Phase II include claims for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyances, and alter-ego liability. The specific amounts the two non-Debtor affiliates owe to Claimant for their breach of the Warehouse Agreements are now set forth and embodied in the final $1 billion judgment from Phase I. And Claimant has stated claims against the Debtor—which was also a party to the same contract and exercised complete control over the two liable affiliates—under which Claimant is entitled to damages that are at least as much as the Phase I judgment amount. Claimant will seek damages for the Debtor's various breaches of the implied covenant as well as its specific role in the fraudulent transfer scheme, and pre-judgment interest and attorneys' fees where available. In addition, Claimant will seek punitive damages against the Debtor for its role in orchestrating the extended efforts to prevent Claimant from collecting the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

25. Currently, Phase II of the State Court Action is stayed against the Debtor by the automatic stay imposed pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code when the Debtor commenced this Chapter 11 Case.

26. Claimant hereby asserts a claim, pending litigation of Phase II, for damages arising from the Debtor's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, its specific role in directing the fraudulent transfers of assets involving HFP, additional interest, further damages (including punitive damages), and attorneys' fees that may be awarded by any court at the conclusion of Phase II.

Reservation of Rights

27. Claimant does not waive or release, and expressly reserves, all rights and remedies at law or in equity that it has or may have against the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, Strand Advisors, Inc., other non-Debtor Highland Defendants, or any other Debtor affiliate, subsidiary, person, or entity.

28. Claimant expressly reserves all of its rights to assert any additional claims, defenses, remedies, and causes of action, including without limitation, claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, tortious interference with contractual relations, fraudulent conveyances, or alter ego recovery. To the extent any payment to Claimant based on this Proof of Claim, or any portion thereof, is clawed back from Claimant, avoided, or set aside, for any reason whatsoever, or Claimant is required to disgorge any such payment, or any portion thereof, Claimant hereby reserves its rights to amend this Proof of Claim accordingly.

Right of Setoff and Recoupment

32. Claimant reserves all rights of setoff and recoupment that it may have. SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK COUNTY OF NEW YORK

1. UBS brings this action to recover damages in excess of $686 million resulting from the wrongful conduct of defendants, based on causes of action for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, fraudulent conveyances, and declaratory judgment.

2. Counterclaim-plaintiff Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland Capital") is a defendant in the action commenced by UBS (the "Highland Capital Action") concurrently with the filing of the First Amended Complaint in this action. The Highland Capital Action was consolidated with this action by a Decision and Order, entered by this Court on October 7, 2010 (this action and the Highland Capital Action are referred to herein as the "Consolidated Action"). Together with Highland Capital, the Fund Counterparties fraudulently induced UBS to restructure a transaction to avoid Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' contractual obligation to pay UBS over $86 million. Once Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties succeeded in misleading UBS into restructuring the original transaction, Highland Capital and its affiliates made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to meet their obligations to UBS by stripping the Fund Counterparties of their valuable assets through fraudulent conveyances and otherwise dealing in bad faith with their contractual obligations to UBS.

3. When UBS finally terminated the restructured transaction and demanded payment from Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, it was owed in excess of $686 million that the Fund Counterparties could not pay because of the misappropriations and improper transfers of assets directed by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Even after UBS demanded payment, Highland Capital and defendants engaged in further unlawful conduct that harmed UBS by [redacted]

SUMMARY OF THE ACTION

4. This action arises out of Highland Capital's efforts in the Spring of 2007 to sponsor a collateralized debt obligation ("CDO") securitization (the "Original Engagement"). In connection with the Original Engagement, UBS agreed to finance the purchase of various collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities, as well as credit default swap obligations that referenced similar CLO securities. UBS agreed to hold or "warehouse" the CLO securities and credit default swaps (collectively, the "Warehouse Assets" or "Warehouse Facility") for Highland Capital's benefit.

5. On or about August 15, 2007, the Original Engagement terminated by its terms without the contemplated securitization having occurred. As a result of the termination, Highland Capital and two of its affiliates, the Fund Counterparties, owed UBS in excess of $86 million related to the decline in the value of the Warehouse Assets.

6. Instead of paying UBS what it was owed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties fraudulently induced UBS to restructure the Original Engagement by providing UBS with false, incomplete and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Using both affirmative material misrepresentations and omissions (material facts or information needed to be disclosed to make the statements actually made not misleading, and which were not disclosed, are referred to hereinafter as "Omissions"), Highland Capital, its principals and the Fund Counterparties misled UBS regarding the financial health of the Fund Counterparties and their creditworthiness, thereby causing UBS to forego recovering its losses from Highland Capital in favor of agreeing to restructure the terms of the parties' prior agreements (the "Restructured Transaction").

7. For example, the strength of the Fund Counterparties' financial statements, and their purported ability to use the hundreds of millions of dollars worth of assets reflected therein to satisfy future obligations to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements were material to UBS's decision to agree to the restructuring. Consequently, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, UBS conditioned any restructuring on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral") with State Street Bank and Trust Company ("State Street"), in which UBS would hold a security interest. [redacted] Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties were able to conceal important information about the Fund Counterparties' financial weakness that was both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS, and which would have caused UBS not to enter the Restructured Transaction.

8. Similarly, while negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided UBS with financial reports and statements for the Fund Counterparties. The financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS contained materially false and misleading information and Omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. Among other things, [redacted]

9. In reliance on material misstatements and Omissions made by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, UBS agreed to restructure the Original Engagement, and thereby were fraudulently induced to give up contractual rights under the terms of the Original Engagement. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to believe that Highland Capital and its affiliates would provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets, as they in fact did.

10. Had UBS known that the Fund Counterparties could not [redacted], it would not have gone forward with the Restructured Transaction. UBS never would have agreed to the Restructured Transaction had it known prior to entering the Restructured Transaction the true status of the Fund Counterparties' financial condition and the true fair market value of the Fund Counterparties' holdings that would have been available to satisfy their then-existing and future obligations to UBS. UBS's losses described herein were directly and proximately caused by the conduct of Highland Capital and the defendants as described herein.

11. Almost immediately after UBS agreed to the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital began the process of making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to ever repay UBS what they owed. In particular, exercising its control over the Fund Counterparties, Highland Capital caused the Fund Counterparties to transfer cash for the benefit of Highland Capital and its principals, and, separately, in violation of UBS's rights, [redacted], all during a time when the Fund Counterparties owed UBS hundreds of millions of dollars.

12. For example, in or around May 2008, Highland Capital caused the dissipation of approximately $100 million in cash that CDO Fund held after it sold a long position in a company called SunCom Wireless. Highland Capital drained CDO Fund's cash resources despite CDO Fund's ever-increasing obligations to UBS. Highland Capital's bad faith conduct caused injury to UBS by making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to satisfy their contractual obligations to UBS.

13. In September 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility continued to grow, UBS began to exercise its contractual rights and make margin calls demanding additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. Because Highland Capital had routinely taken cash out of the Fund Counterparties, the Fund Counterparties were undercapitalized and lacked assets and liquidity to meet UBS's demands for additional collateral.

14. Highland Capital and its principals, including its president and founder, James D. Dondero, knew that if the Fund Counterparties defaulted on their obligations to UBS (or any other creditor), Highland Capital's ability to conduct business in the financial community and to keep or solicit investors would be harmed. Investors in Highland Capital's hedge fund family would withdraw their investments. In addition, creditors would take actions to protect themselves, including foreclosing on collateral and aggressively enforcing their contractual rights. Highland Capital and its principals were concerned that upon the disclosure of the true state of their affairs, their business would collapse.

15. To avoid that result, Highland Capital and its principals resorted to

16. Highland Capital's and its principals' belated attempt to protect their reputation by continuing to fraudulently portray the Fund Counterparties as viable independent entities was ultimately unsuccessful. By late October 2008, Highland Capital could no longer continue to prop up the Fund Counterparties.

17. On or about November 11, 2008, UBS demanded additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. The Fund Counterparties defaulted. On December 3, 2008, UBS terminated the Restructured Transaction. As a result of UBS's termination of the Restructured Transaction, the Fund Counterparties were contractually obligated to pay UBS in excess of $686 million.

18. On or about February 24, 2009, UBS filed the original complaint in this Court against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Warehouse Agreements that had been entered in connection with the Restructured Transaction. By that time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, Highland Financial, had been insolvent and unable to pay their creditors for some time. Nonetheless, Highland Capital and Highland Financial [redacted]

19. In sum, after fraudulently inducing UBS to agree to the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and its principals exercised their domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of Highland Capital and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, they made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay UBS the losses they had agreed to pay on the Warehouse Facility.

32. Venue in this Court is proper under CPLR 503 because plaintiff UBSS has a principal place of business in New York County.

33. Venue is also proper under CPLR 501, and this Court may exercise jurisdiction over the Fund Counterparties because UBS, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties all agreed in writing, before this action was commenced, to submit to such jurisdiction and venue, in connection with any dispute that may arise out of, in connection with, or related to, the Agreements (defined below), or any of the matters contemplated thereby. This Court also may exercise jurisdiction over Highland Financial because it is the alter ego of SOHC.

34. This Court also may exercise jurisdiction over all defendants pursuant to CPLR 301 and 302(a)(1) and (3), because defendants regularly transact and solicit business in New York, committed tortious acts causing injury in New York, should reasonably have expected that their tortious acts would have consequences in New York, the effect of their wrongful conduct was felt in New York, and/or derive substantial revenue from interstate or international commerce. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Original Engagement

35. In or around April 2007, Highland Capital approached UBS for short-term financing in connection with a securitization that Highland Capital wanted to sponsor. UBS agreed to do so (the "Original Engagement").

36. On or about April 20, 2007, UBSS and Highland Capital entered into an engagement letter (the "Original Engagement Letter"), which contemplated that UBSS would act as the exclusive financial arranger and placement agent for a type of collateralized debt obligation transaction ("CDO"), known as a collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") squared or "CLO Squared" transaction. (A copy of the Original Engagement Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit A.)

37. CLOs are a form of securitization where interest and principal payments on corporate loans made to multiple mid-sized and large businesses are pooled together by a lender or the owner of the loans, and then passed on through a securitization structure to investors. CLOs typically involve multi-million dollar loans known as syndicated loans, or leveraged loans made to new businesses or existing businesses, often to acquire other companies. The loan originators are able to spread risk through the CLO securitization, and simultaneously free up capital to make new loans to other businesses. The Original Engagement contemplated the securitization of CLO securities. Thus, the securitization contemplated by Highland Capital would have been a "CLO Squared" transaction.

38. On or about May 22, 2007, as contemplated by the Original Engagement Letter, UBSS and Highland Capital entered into a warehouse agreement (the "Original Cash Warehouse Agreement"). (A copy of the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit B.) In accordance with the terms of the Original Engagement Letter and the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement, UBSS agreed to acquire securities as directed by Highland Capital. Highland Capital instructed UBS to acquire various CLO securities issued in connection with prior CLO transactions involving other sponsors and issuers (the "Cash Portfolio").

39. In a separate but related synthetic warehouse agreement (the "Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement," and together with the "Original Cash Warehouse Agreement," the "Original Warehouse Agreements"), UBS AG agreed to enter into credit default swaps (the "CDS Portfolio," and together with the Cash Portfolio, the "Warehouse Assets"), pursuant to which UBS AG sold credit protection to various third parties. (A copy of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit C.)

40. For Highland Capital's benefit, UBS held the Warehouse Assets on its balance sheet (the "Warehouse Facility"). UBS was expected to hold the Warehouse Assets until such time as the parties could arrange for the assets to be securitized as part of the contemplated securitization. In particular, if the parties believed that a securitization was economically feasible, they would create a special purpose entity that would acquire the Warehouse Assets from UBS using the proceeds from the sale of securities to investors. The special purpose entity's debt securities would be secured by those Warehouse Assets.

41. Under the Original Warehouse Agreements, if the Original Engagement terminated without a securitization, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties were obligated to pay UBS for losses on the Warehouse Assets. In particular, under the terms of the Original Cash Warehouse Agreement, Highland Capital was directly responsible for the first $50 million in losses in the Cash Portfolio, and under the terms of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties were obligated to pay UBS for any and all losses suffered on the CDS Portfolio.

42. The Original Engagement Letter expired by its terms on August 15, 2007 without a securitization occurring. The Original Warehouse Agreements expired on the same date in accordance with their respective terms.

43. As of August 15, 2007, the Warehouse Assets in the Warehouse Facility had lost in excess of $86 million in value. Although they had sufficient capital to do so,

Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed and refused to pay UBS what it was owed under the Original Warehouse Agreements.

44. As a result of extensive negotiations as well as representations and warranties made by Highland Capital on its own behalf, and on behalf of the Fund Counterparties as their investment manager, UBS agreed to restructure the terms of the Original Engagement.

B. Highland Capital And The Fund Counterparties Resort To Fraud To Avoid Highland Capital's Obligations To UBS

45. As alleged above, as a result of the termination of the Original Engagement, Highland Capital was directly liable to UBS under the Original Warehouse Agreement for in excess of $86 million.

46. Between August 2007 and March 14, 2008, UBS, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had discussions and negotiations concerning a restructuring of the terms of the Original Engagement. Those negotiations resulted in agreements to restructure the Original Engagement (the "Restructured Transaction"), including a release by UBS of its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement. (The terms of the Restructured Transaction are set forth in the Engagement Letter and Warehouse Agreements described below (collectively, the "Agreements"), which are annexed hereto as Exhibits D, E and F, respectively.)

47. During the course of negotiations and before March 14, 2008, Highland Capital and Fund Counterparties made several material misrepresentations to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties. Dondero, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also failed to disclose to UBS information which would have been material to UBS's decision to enter the Restructured Transaction ("Omissions," as defined above). As

Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew, UBS reasonably relied upon those material misrepresentations and, due to the Omissions, a misstated assessment of the Fund Counterparties, all to its detriment in deciding whether to enter the Restructured Transaction. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on these misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information that were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS reasonably believed that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties would not provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets as it in fact did.

48. For example, on or about December 28, 2007, to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction and related Agreements, Gibran Mahmud of Highland Capital sent SOHC financial statements to UBS. On or about January 29, 2008, UBS requested additional financial information related to SOHC. Later that same day, to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction and related Agreements, Phil Braner of Highland Capital emailed UBS a copy of SOHC's Statement of Financial Condition, dated December 31, 2007.

49. As described with more particularity below, the SOHC financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS, which Highland Capital was responsible for preparing, was materially false and misleading. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that UBS would rely upon SOHC's financial information in connection with deciding whether to agree to the Restructured Transaction and the terms of the Agreements being negotiated.

50. On or about February 4, 2008, Matt Killebrew of Highland Capital provided UBS with financial reports via email that reflected financial summaries, and aggregate valuations for CDO Fund's assets as of December 31, 2007. On or about March 4, 2008, Mr. Killebrew sent UBS similar reports for the period ended January 31, 2008. As described with more particularity below, these financial reports, which Highland Capital prepared, also were materially false and misleading. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that UBS would rely upon CDO Fund's financial information in connection with deciding whether to agree to the Restructured Transaction and the terms of the Agreements being negotiated.

51. The Fund Counterparties' financial statements [redacted] These facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties.

52. CDO Fund's financial statements [redacted]

[redacted]

53. Similarly, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concealed from UBS the fact that the Fund Counterparties [redacted]

54. In addition, the Fund Counterparties' financial statements that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS in advance of the Restructured Transaction contained [redacted]

[redacted]

55. During the course of negotiations concerning the restructuring, UBS also insisted that the Fund Counterparties have the ability to post $70 million in cash and securities as collateral, which would be held at State Street Bank (the "Initial Restructured Transaction Collateral"), and in which UBS would hold a security interest. The Fund Counterparties' ability to do so using their own assets was qualitatively and quantitatively material to UBS. Among other things, it demonstrated the strength of their balance sheets, and by extension, their ability to satisfy future obligations to UBS.

56. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post $70 million in Initial Restructuring Collateral. [redacted]

57. [redacted]

58. As the Fund Counterparties' investment manager, Highland Capital maintained the Fund Counterparties' accounting records, and knew Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to believe, and reasonably did not believe, that Highland Capital would provide it with false, incomplete or otherwise misleading information about

59. If UBS had known that the Fund Counterparties

[redacted] It also would have drawn into question the Fund Counterparties' liquidity. [redacted]

60. But for Dondero's, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' false and misleading statements and Omissions concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets, and [redacted] UBS would not have entered into the Restructured Transaction or the Agreements that memorialized its terms. Given the Fund Counterparties' weak credit quality, additional adverse information about their collective or individual creditworthiness would have deterred UBS from going forward with the Restructured Transaction and putting more assets at risk. These misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

61. UBS would not have entered into a transaction with parties that made misrepresentations as Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties did. UBS also would not have agreed to release its valuable claims arising out of the Original Engagement under such circumstances. Because of, and in reliance on, the false and misleading information about the Fund Counterparties provided by Dondero, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties, UBS entered into the Restructured Transaction memorialized in the Agreements. Because each of the misrepresentations and Omissions identified above disguised the Fund Counterparties' inability to satisfy their obligations to UBS, the misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

C. The Restructured Transaction Agreements

1. The Engagement Letter

62. On or about March 14, 2008, the parties reached agreement on the terms of a restructured engagement, which were memorialized in a new engagement letter (the "Engagement Letter," annexed hereto as Exhibit D). Pursuant to the Engagement Letter, Highland Capital re-engaged UBSS to act as placement agent in the event that market conditions improved, and the parties could go forward with securitizing the Warehouse Assets already held by UBS in the Warehouse Facility. UBS agreed to continue holding the Warehouse Assets in the Warehouse Facility, which had a notional value of approximately $818 million.

63. Under the terms of the Engagement Letter, UBS released claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

2. The Restructured Warehouse Agreements

64. On March 14, 2008, UBSS, the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital also entered into a cash warehouse agreement (the "Cash Warehouse Agreement"), pursuant to which UBSS agreed to continue to hold the Cash Portfolio. (A true and correct copy of the Cash Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit E.)

65. UBS AG, the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital also entered into a synthetic warehouse agreement, dated as of March 14, 2008 (the "Synthetic Warehouse Agreement," and together with the Cash Warehouse Agreement, the "Warehouse Agreements"), pursuant to which UBS AG agreed to continue warehousing credit protection that it sold, i.e., the CDS Portfolio. (A true and correct copy of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is annexed hereto as Exhibit F.)

66. Section 13(B) of the Cash Warehouse Agreement and § 11(B) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement make Highland Capital liable for losses, including losses in the Warehouse Facility, by reason of acts or omissions constituting bad faith, willful misconduct, or gross negligence.

67. Under § 12 of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties agreed to transfer to State Street the Initial Restructuring Collateral to partially secure their respective obligations to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements. Annex C to the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement identified the six assets that the Fund Counterparties purportedly transferred to State Street to satisfy their Initial Restructuring Collateral obligations, along with $20 million in cash.

68. The Warehouse Agreements also contained releases whereby UBS agreed to release claims it had against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties for losses arising out of the Original Engagement.

D. Highland Capital Uses Its Control Over The Fund Counterparties To Dissipate Their Assets Without Regard For The Fund Counterparties' Growing Obligations To UBS

69. Almost immediately after the Restructured Transaction Agreements were executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knowingly began to dissipate the Fund Counterparties' assets and make it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to ever repay UBS what they owed. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties did so at various times when the Fund Counterparties owed UBS hundreds of millions of dollars.

70. For example, on or about March 26, 2008, just days after entering the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital caused certain SOHC assets to be encumbered by entering into a transaction with Barclays Bank, plc. ("Barclays"). At or around the same time, CDO Fund was negotiating financing arrangements with Morgan Stanley & Co. International Ltd. and Highland Capital IV SPC, whereby it granted a security interest in its assets to those entities. By granting a security interest in the Fund Counterparties' assets to other creditors, Highland Capital unfairly and improperly reduced the assets available to satisfy the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS in bad faith and in violation of UBS's rights.

71. Similarly, on or about April 2, 2008, Highland Capital advised UBS that defendant CDO Fund had recently monetized a $129 million long position in SunCom Wireless. When Highland Capital and CDO Fund subsequently provided UBS with additional financial information about CDO Fund, however, UBS discovered that Highland Capital had caused CDO Fund to transfer approximately $100 million of the cash proceeds from the SunCom Wireless sale out of CDO Fund.

72. By improperly removing such a substantial amount of cash from CDO Fund, Highland Capital interfered in bad faith with CDO Fund's ability to satisfy its steadily increasing financial obligations to UBS. In particular, in or around May 2008, when the cash proceeds from the SunCom Wireless position were siphoned off, the Fund Counterparties owed UBS in excess of $166 million related to losses in the Warehouse Facility, approximately 50% of which CDO Fund was obligated to pay.

73. Highland Capital also repeatedly caused SOHC's cash to be transferred by defendant Highland Financial. In particular, during the first five months of 2008, SOHC's cash position was reduced by over $10 million at a time when its obligations to UBS were increasing substantially.

E. In the Fall of 2008, Losses Mount And The Fund Counterparties Face Collateral Calls From Creditors Including UBS That They Cannot Meet Despite Highland Capital's Belated Efforts To Do So [redacted]

74. Under the terms of the Warehouse Agreements, the Fund Counterparties were required to post additional collateral with UBS if the combined market value of (a) the Warehouse Assets and (b) the Initial Restructured Transaction Collateral, declined below a certain amount.

75. By September 2008, losses in the Warehouse Facility had increased significantly. At the same time, the value of the Initial Restructuring Collateral had declined substantially, as had the value of the assets held by the Fund Counterparties.

76. Highland Capital was desperate to avoid a default by any of its affiliates, including the Fund Counterparties. If a Highland Capital affiliate defaulted on its obligations to a creditor, Highland Capital's reputation in the investment community would be damaged, and there was a risk that Highland Capital's business would collapse. Highland Capital feared that a public default would lead investors in Highland Capital's hedge fund family to withdraw their capital, and lead creditors to take aggressive actions to protect themselves, including foreclosing on collateral and aggressively enforcing their contractual rights.

1. The First Margin Call

77. On or about September 16, 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility continued to grow, UBS began to exercise its contractual rights and make margin calls demanding additional collateral from the Fund Counterparties. Specifically, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties were each required to post $10 million in cash or equivalent securities (the "First Margin Call").

78. Because Highland Capital had routinely drained cash from the Fund Counterparties, the Fund Counterparties lacked the liquidity to meet UBS's demands using their own assets.

79. On or about September 19, 2008, the Fund Counterparties satisfied the First Margin Call by together posting $20 million in cash as additional collateral. [redacted]

2. UBS Is Harmed By Highland Capital's Response To The Fund Counterparties' Liquidity Crisis

80. In the wake of the First Margin Call, the Fund Counterparties remained starved for liquidity. Still desperate to avoid defaults to creditors and the consequences described above, Highland Capital resorted to [redacted]

81. Highland Capital and the individuals that directed the Fund Counterparties knew that they had caused the Fund Counterparties to become incapable of satisfying their obligations to all of their respective creditors when they came due, and that they were insolvent or, at the very least, within the zone of insolvency.

82. For example, on or about September 26, 2008, Dondero and Highland Capital improperly [redacted]

86. [redacted] Highland Capital executed this plan at UBS's expense to protect their substantial personal stake in Highland Financial and prevent negative publicity associated with defaulting [redacted]. Implementing this plan, however, caused SOHC (and its alter ego, Highland Financial) to improperly and in bad faith breach duties and obligations to UBS.

87. [redacted] SOHC's expected obligations to UBS were well in excess of $250 million, which were due and owing to UBS no later than March 14, 2009. Thus, by [redacted], Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties made a fraudulent conveyance and interfered in bad faith with the Fund Counterparties' ability to meet their contractual obligations to UBS.

88. Given the state of the financial markets at the time, Highland Capital, Highland Financial and SOHC had no expectation that SOHC would be able to satisfy its obligations to UBS when they came due. [redacted]

89. [redacted]

3. The Second Margin Call

90. On or about October 21, 2008, UBS notified Highland Capital that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties each owed another $10 million (the "Second Margin Call").

91. In response to the Second Margin Call, Highland Capital offered UBS numerous assets as collateral. UBS rejected those offers for various business-related reasons. As UBS would later learn, however, at the time Highland Capital was offering the assets to UBS, the Fund Counterparties did not own them.

92. On or about October 24, 2008, the Fund Counterparties satisfied the Second Margin Call by together posting assets with a notional value of $49.97 million (but a market value of approximately $20 million), with the understanding that UBS would authorize State Street to return the securities if and when the Fund Counterparties were able to replace those securities with $20 million in cash. As UBS would later learn, [redacted]

93. Moreover, at the same time that Highland Capital was telling UBS that the Fund Counterparties did not have sufficient cash assets to meet the Second Margin call, [redacted]

4. The Third Margin Call

94. On or about November 7, 2008, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties that, pursuant to § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, the Fund Counterparties had an obligation to post another $10 million as collateral (the "Third Margin Call").

95. On or about November 11, 2008, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties offered to post various securities to satisfy the Third Margin Call. In response to the Third Margin Call, Phil Braner of Highland Capital emailed UBS a list of proposed collateral including eight securities with a purported market value of approximately $20 million (i.e., twice the amount of cash due to satisfy the Third Margin Call).

96. Pursuant to the Warehouse Agreements, UBS was authorized to reject proposed collateral. UBS determined that the proposed additional collateral offered by Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties was unacceptable. On or after November 13, 2008, UBS formally rejected the offered securities, and requested that the Fund Counterparties provide cash or cash equivalent collateral to satisfy their obligations under § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

97. UBS would later learn that [redacted]

F. Termination Of The Agreements And Demand For Payment Of Losses

99. As of December 3, 2008, the Fund Counterparties still had not met the Third Margin Call in accordance with § 12(C) of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement. This failure resulted in UBS's declaration of a termination date ("Termination Date") under the Agreements.

100. On December 3, 2008, UBS delivered a letter (the "Termination Date Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties notifying them of such failure and the occurrence of a Termination Date under each Agreement. (A true and correct copy of the Termination Date Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit G.)

101. Sections 5 and 7 of the Cash Warehouse Agreement provided that if the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, UBSS could, in its sole discretion, retain any of the securities in the Warehouse Facility or sell such securities to one of UBSS's affiliates or an unaffiliated party.

102. Pursuant to the terms of the Agreements, if the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, each of the Fund Counterparties was obligated to pay to UBS its pro rata share of any market value losses on the Warehouse Assets, which UBS determined it had experienced and so notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties.

103. On December 19, 2008, UBSS delivered a letter (the "Cash Warehouse Demand Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties demanding payment for its losses. (A true and correct copy of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit H.) UBSS demanded that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties wire that required amount to UBSS no later than 5:00 pm on December 24, 2008 (i.e., the third business day after the date of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter) (the "Final Payment Date"). Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed to make the required payment to UBSS.

104. The Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided that in the event the closing date of the securitization contemplated by the Restructured Transaction failed to occur on or prior to March 14, 2009, the Fund Counterparties would be collectively responsible for 100% of the aggregate amount of losses on the CDS Portfolio and each of the Fund Counterparties would pay, after notice of such amount due from UBS, its pro rata share of such amount to UBS within three business days.

105. On December 19, 2008, UBS AG delivered a letter (the "Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter") to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties demanding payment for its losses. (A true and correct copy of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter is annexed hereto as Exhibit I.) UBS AG demanded that the Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties wire the required amount to UBS AG no later than 5:00 PM on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 — the third business day after the date of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter). Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties failed to make the required payment to UBS AG.

G. Notice Of Failure to Pay, Auction And Final Accounting Letter

106. On January 5, 2009, UBS notified Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties of the failure to make the requisite payments when due pursuant to the Agreements and the applicable demand letters. On or about January 16, 2009, in connection with unwinding the Warehouse Facility, UBS conducted the auction contemplated by the Warehouse Agreements.

107. On or about March 19, 2009, UBS delivered a letter to Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concerning a final accounting concerning the auction and the losses in the Warehouse Facility. UBS determined that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties owed it $686,853,290.26.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud Against The Fund Counterparties)

115. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 114 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

116. In connection with restructuring the Original Engagement, and negotiating the terms of the Agreements and Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had a duty to communicate accurate and complete information to UBS.

117. As alleged above, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intentionally misrepresented material facts and made Omissions (as defined earlier herein).

118. As set forth in more detail above, prior to the restructuring being completed, and the Agreements being executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties misrepresented information and made Omissions to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties as well as information about their finances and assets, including, but not limited to, information regarding the following:

(a) [redacted]

(b) [redacted]

(c) [redacted]

119. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties acted knowingly and purposefully in making the materially false representations and Omissions to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction to induce UBS to enter the Agreements. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that their representations and Omissions were materially false and misleading. Knowingly using material misrepresentations and Omissions, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intended to induce, and fraudulently induced UBS into entering the Agreements.

120. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also knew that their false representations and Omissions were material to and caused UBS's decision to enter the Agreements. In particular, the misrepresentations and Omissions were both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS inasmuch as UBS would have acted differently had it known the truth about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets when UBS made the decision to go forward with the restructuring and releasing, among other things, valuable claims against Highland Capital.

121. UBS was not aware and could not have been aware of the falsity and misleading nature of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions. The facts and information underlying the false, inaccurate and incomplete financial reports that Highland Capital provided to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction were peculiarly within Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' knowledge.

122. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had superior knowledge compared to UBS about Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Indeed, such facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Moreover, it was necessary for Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties to complete or clarify the information that it provided to UBS concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. Consequently, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' concealment of the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets was fraudulent.

123. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions regarding the Fund Counterparties' financial condition and assets. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to question the veracity and completeness of the financial information that Highland Capital provided to UBS about the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. UBS also had no reason to believe that the financial information that Highland Capital provided to it to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction would be false, incomplete or otherwise misleading. When UBS evaluated the Fund Counterparties' financial statements in early 2008, [redacted]

124. But for Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS would not have entered the Agreements, or released its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

125. In reasonable and justifiable reliance on the foregoing material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS also surrendered and released valuable claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties at a time when UBS could have been made whole for the losses that it had suffered to that point as a result of the Original Engagement. Nor would UBS have suffered the additional losses in the Warehouse Facility.

126. UBS reasonably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS continued to maintain the Warehouse Facility through, at least, December 3, 2008, suffering in excess of $686 million in losses that the Fund Counterparties cannot pay to UBS.

127. Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions were the direct and proximate cause of UBS's losses complained of herein. As a direct result of, and in reliance upon, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS was induced to, among other things, (a) enter the Agreements; (b) release its pre-existing claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties related to the Original Engagement; and (c) assume the credit-risk of the Fund Counterparties; and as a direct result, caused UBS to incur substantial losses and damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud Against The Fund Counterparties)
(Pled Solely To Preserve For Appeal)

128. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 127 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

129. In connection with restructuring the Original Engagement, and negotiating the terms of the Agreements and Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had a duty to communicate accurate and complete information to UBS.

130. As alleged above, in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intentionally misrepresented material facts and made Omissions (as defined earlier herein).

131. As set forth in more detail above, prior to the restructuring being completed, and the Agreements being executed, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties misrepresented information and made Omissions to UBS concerning the creditworthiness of the Fund Counterparties and information about their finances, assets and business practices, including, but not limited to, information regarding the following:

(a) [redacted]

(b) [redacted]

(c) [redacted]

(d) [redacted]

(e) [redacted]

(f) [redacted]

(g) [redacted]

132. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties acted knowingly and purposefully in making the materially false representations and Omissions to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction to induce UBS to enter the Agreements. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties knew that their representations and Omissions were materially false and misleading. Knowingly using material misrepresentations and Omissions, Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties intended to induce, and fraudulently induced UBS into entering the Agreements.

133. These Omissions rendered the Fund Counterparties' representations, statements and financial statements materially misleading. Because Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties concealed this information from UBS, UBS could not properly evaluate SOHC's ability to satisfy its obligations to UBS. For instance, UBS received financial reports from Highland Capital for the Fund Counterparties that suggested that the Fund Counterparties held hundreds of millions of dollars worth of assets that could be used to satisfy their obligations to UBS. However, a substantial portion of the assets that UBS reasonably believed would be available, were, in fact, not going to be available to pay UBS because they were going to be encumbered as a result of other transactions. In other words, because Highland Capital concealed its intentions, the financial reports that it provided to UBS were misleading as they provided UBS with false and illusory comfort regarding the Fund Counterparties' capacity to fulfill their contractual obligations to UBS. As the Fund Counterparties' investment manager, Highland Capital would have led the negotiations related to the other financing arrangements.

134. Similarly, during negotiations concerning the Initial Restructuring Collateral, Highland Capital and SOHC made an additional Omission by not disclosing to UBS

the fact that SOHC had a serious liquidity problem. SOHC had to borrow cash from Highland Capital to satisfy the cash portion of its Initial Restructuring Collateral obligation. On or about December 18, 2007, while the parties were negotiating the restructuring, Highland Capital loaned $30 million to SOHC, which Highland Capital and SOHC's alter ego, Highland Financial, earmarked for SOHC to use as collateral in connection with negotiating extensions of warehouse facilities, including the one with UBS. As Highland Financial's and SOHC's investment manager, Highland Capital knew about SOHC's liquidity problems since they were discussed openly at Highland Financial board meetings attended by Highland Capital. The failure to fully disclose SOHC's liquidity problem, and its inability to meet the Initial Restructuring Collateral obligation using its own cash assets was an Omission, because it was indicative of the strength of SOHC's finances and assets, and SOHC's ability to satisfy obligations to UBS.

135. Highland Capital and Fund Counterparties also concealed from UBS that Highland Capital had to commingle assets among its various affiliates and disregard corporate formalities to satisfy the Fund Counterparties' liquidity needs. Facts and information concerning these business practices, including Highland Capital's commingling of assets and disregard of corporate formalities was information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and its affiliates. As the investment manager to Highland Financial, SOHC and CDO Fund (as well as the Affiliated Transferee Defendants), Highland Capital knowingly arranged and caused the asset transfers between and among the various affiliates in disregard of corporate formalities.

136. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties also knew that their false representations and Omissions were material to and caused UBS's decision to enter the Agreements. In particular, the misrepresentations and Omissions were both quantitatively and qualitatively material to UBS inasmuch as UBS would have acted differently had it known the truth about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices when UBS made the decision to go forward with the restructuring and releasing, among other things, valuable claims against Highland Capital.

137. In addition, if UBS had known that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties ignored corporate formalities or that Highland Capital freely transferred assets among its controlled entities, UBS would not have entered the Restructured Transaction. These misrepresentations and Omissions proximately caused harm to UBS.

138. UBS was not aware and could not have been aware of the falsity and misleading nature of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions. The facts and information underlying the false, inaccurate and incomplete financial reports that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to UBS in connection with negotiating the Restructured Transaction were peculiarly within Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' knowledge.

139. Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties had superior knowledge compared to UBS about Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. Indeed, such facts and information were solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Moreover, it was necessary for Highland Capital and the Highland Entities to complete or clarify the information that it provided to UBS concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. Consequently, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' concealment about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices was fraudulent.

140. UBS reasonably and justifiably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions regarding the Fund

Counterparties' financial condition, assets and business practices. In particular, UBS reasonably and justifiably relied on misrepresentations and Omissions of facts and information solely and peculiarly within the knowledge of Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties. Given UBS's prior dealings with Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as Highland Capital's size and presence in the market, UBS had no reason to question the veracity and completeness of the financial information that Highland Capital provided to UBS about the Fund Counterparties' finances, assets and business practices. UBS also had no reason to believe that the financial information that Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties provided to it to induce UBS to enter the Restructured Transaction would be false, incomplete or otherwise misleading. When UBS evaluated the Fund Counterparties' financial statements in early 2008, [redacted]

141. But for Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS would not have entered the Agreements, or released its claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties arising out of the Original Engagement.

142. In reasonable and justifiable reliance on the foregoing material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS also surrendered and released valuable claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties at a time when UBS could have been made whole for the losses that it had suffered to that point as a result of the Original Engagement. Nor would UBS have suffered the additional losses in the Warehouse Facility.

143. UBS reasonably relied to its detriment on Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS continued to maintain the Warehouse Facility through, at least, December 3, 2008, suffering in excess of $686 million in losses that the Fund Counterparties cannot pay to UBS.

144. Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions were the direct and proximate cause of UBS's losses complained of herein. As a direct result of, and in reliance upon, Highland Capital's and the Fund Counterparties' material misrepresentations and Omissions, UBS was induced to, among other things, (a) enter the Agreements; (b) release its pre-existing claims against Highland Capital and the Fund Counterparties related to the Original Engagement; and (c) assume the credit-risk of the Fund Counterparties; and as a direct result, caused UBS to incur substantial losses and damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract Under the Cash Warehouse Agreement Against The Fund Counterparties)

145. Plaintiff UBSS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 144 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

146. The Cash Warehouse Agreement is a valid and binding contract.

147. UBSS has performed all of its obligations under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

148. Pursuant to the Cash Warehouse Agreement, each of the Fund Counterparties was required to transfer their respective pro rata shares of additional collateral to satisfy the Third Margin Call within two business days of November 7, 2008. The Fund Counterparties failed to make the required transfer. The Fund Counterparties' failure to make such transfer is a breach under the Cash Warehouse Agreement, and resulted in a Termination Date under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

149. In accordance with the terms of the Cash Warehouse Agreement, UBSS demanded that each of the Fund Counterparties pay to UBS their respective pro rata shares of the amount of losses on the Cash Portfolio and estimated expenses by 5 P.M. on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 – the third business day after the date of the Cash Warehouse Demand Letter). The Fund Counterparties failed to pay this amount to UBSS. The failure to pay these amounts to UBSS when due under the Cash Warehouse Agreement constituted a further breach under the Cash Warehouse Agreement.

150. By reason of the foregoing, UBSS has suffered and will continue to suffer damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract Under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement Against The Fund Counterparties)

151. Plaintiff UBS AG, repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 150 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

152. The Synthetic Warehouse Agreement is a valid and binding contract.

153. UBS AG has performed all of its obligations under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

154. Pursuant to the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, each of the Fund Counterparties were required to transfer their respective pro rata shares of additional collateral to satisfy the Third Margin Call within two business days of November 7, 2008. The Fund Counterparties failed to make the requisite transfer. The failure to make such transfer resulted in a breach and a Termination Date under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

155. UBS AG demanded that each of the Fund Counterparties pay to UBS AG their pro rata share of losses on the CDS Portfolio and estimated expenses by 5 P.M. on the Final Payment Date (i.e., December 24, 2008 – the third business day after the date of the Synthetic Warehouse Demand Letter). The Fund Counterparties failed to pay this amount to UBS. The failure to pay these amounts when due under the Agreements was a further breach under the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement.

156. By reason of the foregoing, UBS AG has suffered and will continue to suffer damages in an amount to be determined at trial.

157. Paragraphs 157 to 166 have been intentionally left blank.

(Fraudulent Conveyances Against All Defendants)

167. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 166 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

168. Between March 14, 2008 and December 3, 2008, as losses in the Warehouse Facility grew, Highland Capital exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties and caused the Fund Counterparties to transfer valuable cash and assets out of the Fund Counterparties, thereby impairing their ability to bear losses in the Warehouse Facility, and otherwise satisfy their obligations to creditors, including UBS. SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Tortious Interference With Contractual Relations Against The Affiliated Transferee Defendants)
(Pled Solely To Preserve For Appeal)

180. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 179 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

181. The Agreements are valid and binding contracts.

182. The parties agreed that UBS would not bear the risk of any losses in connection with the Restructured Transaction. As a direct result of the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Warehouse Agreements, UBS suffered no less than $686,853,290.26 in damages. Under the terms of the Warehouse Agreements, the Fund Counterparties' obligation to pay UBS for losses in the Warehouse Facility expressly survived the termination of the Agreements.

183. Highland Capital knew of the Agreements, and were familiar with their terms, including the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS thereunder. The Affiliated Transferee Defendants, also knew of the Agreements, and their terms, including the Fund Counterparties' obligations to UBS thereunder.

184. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants intentionally and improperly caused and ensured a breach of the Warehouse Agreements by the Fund Counterparties, thereby tortiously interfering with UBS's rights under the Agreements.

185. Specifically, in 2008 and 2009 Highland Capital wrongfully caused the improper and fraudulent asset transfers, payments, distributions and dividends described above, and thereby tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual relationship with the Fund Counterparties by knowingly impairing UBS's contractual right under the Warehouse Agreements to be reimbursed by the Fund Counterparties for the losses on the Warehouse Assets. For example, Highland Capital wrongfully caused the March 2009 Fraudulent Conveyance for which there was no legitimate purpose. The Affiliated Transferee Defendants [redacted]

186. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants [redacted]

187. Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants engaged in the foregoing unlawful and improper conduct, and tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual rights under the Warehouse Agreements, for their own improper personal gain by knowingly violating UBS's rights and making it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to perform under the Warehouse Agreements. In particular, the foregoing conduct constitutes independent torts and predatory acts directed at UBS for Highland Capital's and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants' own personal gain.

188. As a direct and proximate result of Highland Capital's and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants' tortious interference with UBS's contractual rights under the Agreements, UBS has suffered damages in an amount to be determined at trial. Had Highland Capital and the Affiliated Transferee Defendants not tortiously interfered with UBS's contractual rights, the Fund Counterparties would have been able to make payments to UBS of the amount they owed to UBS under the Warehouse Agreements.

SEVENTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Judgment For General Partner Liability Against Strand)

189. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 188 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

190. A limited partnership's general partner is personally liable for the partnership obligations of the limited partnership.

191. Highland Capital is a Delaware limited partnership. Defendant Strand is Highland Capital's general partner. As such, Strand is personally liable for the liability, debts and obligations of Highland Capital, including but not limited to Highland Capital's liabilities to UBS arising out of the Consolidated Action.

192. A justiciable controversy exists as to whether Strand is liable to UBS for the injuries caused by Highland Capital complained of in the Consolidated Action as a result of Strand being Highland Capital's general partner.

EIGHTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Judgment For Alter Ego Liability Against Highland Financial)

193. UBS repeats and realleges the allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 192 of this Second Amended Complaint as if fully set forth herein.

194. As alleged above, SOHC breached the Warehouse Agreements and otherwise harmed UBS by engaging in fraudulent misconduct. Highland Financial is SOHC's alter ego and should be held responsible and liable for SOHC's breach of the Warehouse Agreements and fraudulent misconduct.

195. SOHC is a mere instrumentality of Highland Financial. SOHC had no independence and could not exercise any business discretion whatsoever. [redacted] SOHC did not have its own offices, officers or employees. Rather, it shared common officers, directors and employees, as well as common office space, with Highland Financial.

196. As alleged in detail above, Highland Financial completely dominated the day-to-day operations of SOHC as well as SOHC's sister-affiliates. In particular, Highland Financial operated Highland Financial and its subsidiaries, including SOHC, as a single entity, [redacted]

[redacted]

197. A justiciable controversy exists as to whether Highland Financial is liable to UBS as SOHC's alter ego for the losses and harm that UBS suffered that were caused by SOHC's breach of the Warehouse Agreements, and the fraudulent and tortious conduct complained of herein.

RELIEF DEMANDED

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs UBSS and UBS AG demand judgment:

(a) On the first cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that UBS was induced to enter the Agreements as a result of fraud committed by the Fund Counterparties, and awarding damages to UBS for all losses and liabilities incurred by UBS, and that UBS incurs, with respect to the Agreements and the Warehouse Facility, including, without limitation, interest, reasonable attorneys' and accountants' fees and expenses and any other losses, fees and expenses that UBS incurred or incurs, in an amount to be determined at trial but in any event, no less than $686,853,290.26;

(b) On the second cause of action, which is pled solely to preserve UBS's appellate rights, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that UBS was induced to enter the Agreements as a result of fraud committed by the Fund Counterparties, and awarding damages to UBS for all losses and liabilities incurred by UBS, and that UBS incurs, with respect to the Agreements and the Warehouse Facility, including, without limitation, interest, reasonable attorneys' and accountants' fees and expenses and any other losses, fees and expenses that UBS incurred or incurs, in an amount to be determined at trial but in any event, no less than $686,853,290.26;

(c) On the third cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that the Fund Counterparties breached the Cash Warehouse Agreement, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(d) On the fourth cause of action, as against the Fund Counterparties, declaring that the Fund Counterparties breached the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(e) On the fifth cause of action, as against all defendants, (i) declaring that the dispositions of the Fund Counterparties' and Highland Financial's assets, as directed by Highland Capital, constituted fraudulent conveyances; (ii) appointing a receiver over defendants; (iii) directing that a full accounting be had of defendants' affairs and finances; (iv) imposing a constructive trust over defendants' assets until such an accounting is completed; and/or (v) awarding UBS damages in an amount to be determined at trial, but no less than the value of the assets fraudulently and improperly transferred, or, alternatively, directing that defendants and their partners, members or shareholders return to the Fund Counterparties any assets or consideration received from Highland Financial or the Fund Counterparties, directly or indirectly, as distributions, dividends, consideration, compensation, fees, interest, principal or otherwise, between March 14, 2008 and the present.

(f) On the sixth cause of action, as against the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, which is pled solely to preserve UBS's appellate rights, declaring that each of those defendants is liable for tortiously interfering with UBS's contractual rights under the Warehouse Agreements, and awarding UBS an amount to be determined at trial;

(g) On the seventh cause of action, as against defendant Strand, declaring that Strand is responsible for Highland Capital's liability and obligations arising out of the Consolidated Action;

(h) On the eighth cause of action, as against defendant Highland Financial, declaring that Highland Financial is SOHC's alter ego, and that as such, Highland Financial is responsible for SOHC's liability and obligations to UBS arising out of this action;

(i) Awarding UBS punitive damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

(j) Granting UBS its costs and disbursements, including reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses of this action;

(k) Granting UBS pre-judgment interest; and

(l) Granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

DECISION AND ORDER AFTER TRIAL

This action arises out of a failed restructured transaction between plaintiffs UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch (collectively, UBS) and defendants Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. (CDO Fund) and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company (SOHC) (together, the Fund Counterparties), and defendant Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) (together with the Fund Counterparties, Highland), for the securitization of collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) and credit default swaps (CDSs).

The court conducted a bench trial from July 9 through July 27, 2018 on plaintiffs' third and fourth causes of action in the second amended complaint for breach of contract, and on defendant Highland Capital's first and second counterclaims against plaintiff UBS Securities

LLC for breach of contract and unjust enrichment, respectively.[1] Based on the credible evidence at trial, the court now makes the following determination as to the breach of contract causes of action and counterclaims.[2]

In April and May 2007, the parties agreed to pursue a collateralized debt obligations transaction governed by an Engagement Letter, a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement for CDSs, and a Warehouse Agreement for CLOs (Original Agreements). (DX 4, DX 5, DX 6.)[3] It is undisputed that UBS acted as the "financial arranger" for the transaction and was responsible for financing the acquisition of assets, which would then be held in portfolios, which the parties refer to as the Cash Warehouse and the Synthetic Warehouse or collectively as the Knox Warehouse. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.)[4] Highland Capital acted as the "Servicer" and was responsible for identifying the specific CLOs to be securitized and the Reference Obligations for the CDSs to be securitized. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 3, 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 6, 8.)

In furtherance of the transaction, UBS acquired assets with a notional value of $818 million. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 5.) There were 33 CLO tranches in the Cash Warehouse, with a notional value of $174 million. UBS paid $170 or $170.5 million to acquire the CLOs because the bonds were purchased at a slight discount on their par value. (Ds.' Findings, ¶ 6; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.) The Synthetic Warehouse contained 87 credit default swaps,

[1] By decision on the record on May 1, 2018 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 494), the court bifurcated the trial. The decision held that the breach of contract claims, which were to be heard by the court, would be determined prior to claims, including fraudulent conveyance claims, which were to be heard by a jury.

[2] At the trial, the parties agreed to the submission of extensive evidence, subject to standing objections. This decision is not based on such evidence, unless the decision expressly states otherwise.

[3] Defendants' and plaintiffs' trial exhibits will be referred to as DX _ and PX _, respectively. The parties' demonstrative exhibits will be referred to as DX Demo. _ and PX Demo. _

[4] The Fund Counterparties' and Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ds.'s Findings. Plaintiffs' Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law will be referred to as Ps.'s Findings. Defendants' Findings are all identified by paragraph number. with a notional value of $644 million. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 7; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 6.). UBS served as the protection seller on all of the CDSs. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 4; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 8.) For five of the CDSs, with a notional value of $45 million, Lehman Brothers Special Financing, Inc. (Lehman) acted as the protection buyer (Lehman Swaps). (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 8; Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755[5], at 1.) For 20 of the CDSs, with a notional value of $124 million, UBS acted as both protection seller and protection buyer (the Internal Swaps). (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 10; Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 9; PX 755, at 4-5.)

The Original Agreements expired by their terms on August 15, 2007. (PX 1, at 1.) The parties agreed to restructure the transaction, signing a new Engagement Letter, the 2008 Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA), and the 2008 Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (SWA), as of March 14, 2008. (See PX 1, PX 2, PX 3.) As of March 14, 2008, the Knox assets had lost significant value and the parties agreed that, given the market conditions existing as of the date of the restructured transaction, it was not then feasible to sell the securities and close the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, ¶ 20; 2008 Engagement Letter [PX 1, at 8].)

As discussed further below, the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided for the roll-over of the Existing Credit Default Swaps and the Existing Collateral Portfolio into the warehouses created under the 2008 restructured transaction. (See SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 12 of the Synthetic Warehouse Agreement provided that the Fund Counterparties would transfer additional cash and securities "to secure its obligations to UBS" under the SWA and the CWA. In particular, this Section required the Fund Counterparties to make an Initial Deposit of $20 million in cash and approximately $54 million in Eligible Securities on the date of the execution of the SWA. (Id., § 12 [A].) The SWA contained a collateral call provision under which UBS was required to track its CDS and Cash Exposure to losses, as defined under the Agreement, on a semi-monthly basis, and the Fund Counterparties were required to deposit an additional $10 million in collateral (cash and/or Eligible Securities) for every $100 million increase in the defined Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount. (Id., §§ 12 [B], [C].)

It is undisputed that, pursuant to Section 12 (C) of the SWA, UBS made a first collateral call for $10 million on September 17, 2008 (PX 4), and a second collateral call for $10 million on October 21, 2008 (PX 5), both of which were satisfied by the Fund Counterparties. (Testimony of Keith Grimaldi, Former Head of UBS's CDO Secondary Trading Desk, Trial Transcript (Tr.) at 81, 112, 119.)

On November 7, 2008, UBS issued the third, and final, collateral call to the Fund Counterparties for an additional $10 million. (PX 6.) It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties did not meet this collateral call. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 17; Ps.'s Findings, ¶¶ 43-47).[6]

On December 3, 2008, UBS sent a notice to Highland stating that, to date, no deposits have been made in response to the November collateral call, and that "a Termination Date has occurred under the Warehouse Agreements and a termination date has occurred under the Engagement Letter." (PX 7; PX 9.) The notice further stated that "UBS is forbearing from exercising its remedies [under the Agreements] for a period of two Business Days from the date hereof in order to permit [the Fund Counterparties] to pay the Additional Deposits by 5 pm New York time on December 5, 2008." (Id.) On December 5, 2008, UBS sent an additional notice to

[6] It is undisputed that the Fund Counterparties offered to post CLO assets to satisfy the third collateral call and that UBS did not accept that collateral. UBS's Keith Grimaldi testified that UBS rejected the CLOs because "at that time the marketplace was declining and declining rapidly. We thought there would be more declines, so we collectively made a decision that we wanted cash or government securities ... that would be easily liquid and reflect better value." (Trial Tr. at 122.) Defendants stipulated that UBS had the right to insist on cash. (See Statement of Andrew Cruciani [Ds.'s Atty.], Trial Tr. at 1736.)

Highland stating that the Additional Deposit has not been made, and that "[c]onsequently, UBS will proceed to exercise the rights and remedies available to it under the Warehouse Agreements, the Engagement Letter, at law and otherwise." (PX 8.)

THIRD COLLATERAL CALL

As a threshold matter, the parties dispute whether the third collateral call was proper. Highland argues that UBS should not have included the 20 Internal Swaps in calculating the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount "because the Intradesk [i.e., Internal] Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps under the SWA . . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 28.) Highland also claims that the Lehman Swaps were not properly included in the calculation because they had been terminated prior to the third collateral call. (See id., ¶ 27.)

More particularly, Highland claims that the Internal Swaps were not Existing Credit Default Swaps because they were not documented, as allegedly required by Section 3 of the SWA, in the form of an ISDA Master Agreement and ISDA Confirmation. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 28, 30-31.) UBS does not dispute that the Internal Swaps were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement and Confirmation, but argues that Section 3 does not require such documentation for the Internal Swaps. (Ps.'s Findings, at 24-25.)[7]

Resolution of this dispute involves an issue of contract interpretation. It is well settled that the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace v 600 Partners Co., 86 NY2d 543, 548 [1995]; W.W.W. Assocs., Inc. v Giancontieri, 77 NY2d 157, 162 [1990].) Written agreements are to be construed in accordance with the parties' intent, and "the best evidence of what parties to a written agreement

intend is what they say in their writing." (Schron v Troutman Sanders LLP, 20 NY3d 430, 436 [2013] [internal quotation marks, brackets, and citation omitted].) The court should determine from contractual language, without regard to extrinsic evidence, whether there is any ambiguity. (Chimart Assocs. v Paul, 66 NY2d 570, 573 [1986].) Extrinsic or parol evidence "may not be considered when the intent of the parties can be gleaned from the face of the instrument." (Id. at 572-573.) "Extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent may be considered only if the agreement is ambiguous. . . ." (Greenfield v Philles Records, Inc., 98 NY2d 562, 569 [2002].) "Ambiguity in a contract arises when the contract, read as a whole, fails to disclose its purpose and the parties' intent, or where its terms are subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 25 NY3d 675, 680 [2015] [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].)

It is also well settled that a court should "construe the [contract] so as to give full meaning and effect to the material provisions. A reading of the contract should not render any portion meaningless. Further, a contract should be read as a whole, and every part will be interpreted with reference to the whole; and if possible it will be so interpreted as to give effect to its general purpose." (Beal Sav. Bank v Sommer, 8 NY3d 318, 324-25 [2007] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; National Conversion Corp. v Cedar Bldg. Corp., 23 NY2d 621, 625 [1969] [holding that "[a]ll parts of an agreement are to be reconciled, if possible, in order to avoid inconsistency"].)

Applying these precepts, the court holds that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to the requirements for documentation of CDSs, that Section 3 of the SWA only applies to CDSs in which a third party is the protection buyer, and that this Section does not require ISDA documentation for the Internal Swaps.

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 641 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 11/14/2019

The SWA defines "Existing Credit Default Swap[s]" as the CDSs "that were the subject of the Original Synthetic Warehouse Agreement." (SWA, Whereas Clause 5.) Section 3 of the SWA provides, in pertinent part:

> "Form of Documentation. Each Existing Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, has been documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) an ISDA published confirmation. . . . Each Additional Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the related counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and such counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached [to the SWA] . . . ."

As the Agreement that governs the securitization of Existing and Additional Credit Default Swaps, the SWA contains numerous detailed provisions regarding the accumulation and disposition of these financial instruments. Section 3, which pertains to documentation of the swaps, is the only provision in the SWA that is limited to CDSs in which UBS is the Seller and a counterparty is the Buyer. All of the other provisions of the SWA refer to CDSs without such limitation.

Moreover, like SWA Section 3, the Original SWA provided: "Each Credit Default Swap between UBS, acting as Seller, and a counterparty, acting as Buyer, will be documented in the form of (i) the ISDA Master Agreement and Schedule currently in effect between UBS and the counterparty, which documents are confidential between UBS and each counterparty and (ii) the Confirmation attached hereto. . . ." (Original SWA, § 3 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 626].) It is undisputed, however, that the Internal Swaps were included in the Original SWA portfolio but were not documented by the ISDA Master Agreement or Confirmation. It is also undisputed that the Internal Swaps were nevertheless again included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount in the SWA for the restructured transaction. (Testimony of Peter Vinella [Highland's expert in structured financial products], Trial Tr. at 1097, 1124-1125 [acknowledging that the Internal Swaps were included in the Initial Net Exposure Amount].)

Initial Net Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA[8] as "111,767,486.88, being the amount by which the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of the date hereof [i.e., the March 14, 2008 "as of" date of the SWA] exceeds the Initial Deposit." As defined in SWA Section 12 (A), the Initial Deposit is the deposit of approximately $74,000,000 in cash and Eligible Securities made on the date of execution of the SWA. Aggregate Net Exposure Amount is defined as the amount by which CDS Exposure and Cash Exposure, as of the date of the collateral calculation, exceed the balance on deposit in the Deposit Account plus Positive Carry with respect to each Collateral Obligation.[9] As discussed above, Section 12 (C) of the SWA requires a deposit of $10 million in additional collateral when the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is greater than or equal to $100 million. The Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount is defined in the SWA as "the amount, if any, by which (i) the Aggregate Net Exposure Amount as of [the date of the collateral calculation] exceeds (ii) the Initial Net Exposure Amount." The Initial Net Exposure Amount, which includes the Internal Swaps, is thus integral to the calculation of the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount.

Based on this reading of the SWA as a whole, the court concludes that the Internal Swaps were Existing Credit Default Swaps within the meaning of the SWA. The lack of ISDA documentation was therefore not a bar to their inclusion in the collateral call calculation.

The court rejects Highland's further contention that the Internal Swaps should not have been included because there was "no economic consequence" to UBS from these swaps. (Ds.'s

[8] Definitions are found in the Definitions section of the SWA (SWA, Ex. A), unless the term is defined in a particular provision of the SWA, in which case the provision will be cited.
[9] Positive Carry is defined in the CWA. As explained by Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, carry includes interest payments from the CLOs. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1299.)

Findings, ¶ 33.) The complex formula set forth in Section 12 for calculating the exposure of UBS on the assets in the warehouse that would trigger a collateral call does not contain any requirement that UBS include in the calculation only assets for which it was at risk of sustaining actual losses.[10]

The court further holds that, although the Internal Swaps were properly included in the third collateral call calculation, the Lehman Swaps were not. The parties do not dispute that the Lehman Swaps had been terminated based on the Event of Default that occurred upon Lehman's filing for bankruptcy on September 15, 2008. (DX 87 [UBS Default Notice].) Highland asserts, and UBS does not persuasively counter, that the Lehman Swaps should not have been included in the third collateral call. Indeed, UBS's Grimaldi forthrightly acknowledged that, given the termination, there should not have been "markdowns" on the Lehman Swaps. (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 297-298.).

Highland contends, based on the inclusion of the Lehman Swaps and Internal Swaps in the third collateral call calculation, that UBS "committed a prior material breach by failing to

[10] In view of this holding that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the collateral call calculation pursuant to the unambiguous terms of the SWA, the court has not considered parol evidence on the issue.

The court thus rejects Highland's request for a finding that UBS admitted that the SWA required ISDA documentation of the Internal Swaps. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 30-31.) This request is based on testimony of UBS's Keith Grimaldi who, when shown Section 3 during cross-examination and asked if every CDS was required to have ISDA documentation, responded: "According to the language, yes." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 262-264.) Even if this evidence were properly considered, Highland's reliance on this answer ignores that Mr. Grimaldi further testified that ISDA documentation would not be "filled out" until the assets were transferred in the securitization. (Id. at 267-270.)

The court further notes that Highland requests a finding, arguably in support of its claim that the CDSs were not Existing Credit Default Swaps, that a CDS "cannot be created with the same legal entity on both sides of the transaction. . . ." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 29.) Even if parol evidence were properly considered, there was substantial evidence in the record that internal swaps were common in securitizations of synthetic assets. (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1673-1676; (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1158-1162 [denying that intracompany swaps are "economic transactions" but acknowledging their use in CLO securitizations].)

properly calculate the collateral call[]." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 23, 27-28.) In support of this contention, Highland relies on the testimony of its expert Peter Vinella. According to Mr. Vinella's own analysis, however, if the Lehman swaps are excluded from the calculation for the third collateral call, but the Internal Swaps are included, the total increase in the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount as of November 4, 2008 is $328.62 million—an amount greater than the $300 million required to authorize the third collateral call pursuant to Section 12 of the SWA. (Vinella Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1122-1139; DX Demo. 8.) Louis Dudney, UBS's expert in forensic accounting and damages (Trial Tr. at 824), analyzed Mr. Vinella's testimony and confirmed, using the same numbers as Mr. Vinella, that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount still exceeded $300 million on November 4, 2008, after excluding the Lehman Swaps but including the Internal Swaps. (PX Demo. 20 [accepted without objection in lieu of Dudney rebuttal testimony, Trial Tr. at 1870-1871].)

Based on this credible testimony that the threshold for the collateral call was met without the Lehman Swaps, the court holds that the third collateral call did not constitute a material breach of the contract, notwithstanding UBS's improper inclusion of the Lehman Swaps in the calculation.[11] (See generally Awards.Com v Kinko's, Inc., 42 AD3d 178, 187 [1st Dept 2007], affd 14 NY3d 791, 793 [2010]; Frank Felix Assocs., Ltd. v Austin Drugs, Inc., 111 F3d 284, 289 [2d Cir 1997] [under New York law, for a breach to be material, "it must go to the root of the agreement between the parties"] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted].)

[11] In view of this holding that the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of November 7, 2008, the court need not reach UBS's contention that the collateral call was proper because the Deposit Threshold Exposure Amount exceeded $300 million as of December 2, 2008, prior to the termination of the transaction. (Ps.'s Findings, at 15 n 10.)

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 641 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 11/14/2019

As discussed above, there is no dispute that the Fund Counterparties failed to meet the third collateral call. The court accordingly finds that the Fund Counterparties breached the SWA and turns to the issue of damages.

DAMAGES

Designation of Ineligible Securities

A critical issue in determining UBS's damages is whether UBS may recover damages for CDSs that UBS retained after its termination of the 2008 transaction, under these circumstances in which UBS did not designate the underlying reference obligations for any of the CDSs as "Ineligible Securities." Resolution of this issue requires interpretation of the SWA. Highland and UBS both contend that the SWA is unambiguous as to whether Ineligible Securities must be designated, but assert fundamentally inconsistent readings of the Agreement. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 44-49; see Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

As held above, the determination of whether a contract is ambiguous is one of law to be resolved by the court. (Matter of Wallace, 86 NY2d at 548.) Ambiguity will be found to arise where the terms of a contract are "subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." (Universal Am. Corp., 25 NY3d at 680 [internal quotation marks and citation omitted].) As also held above, a court should construe a contract so as to give full meaning and effect to its material provisions, and should read the contract as a whole and so as not to render any portion meaningless, if possible. (See Beal Sav. Bank, 8 NY3d at 324-25.)

Sections 5 (A), 5 (B), and 6 of the SWA are relevant to the calculation of CDS damages: Section 5 (A) provides for the calculation of losses with respect to CDSs removed from the warehouse during the term of the Agreement or "otherwise pursuant to Section 6"; Section 5 (B) (2) governs the calculation of losses upon a closing; and Section 6 governs this calculation in the event of a failure to close, incorporating terms from Sections 5 (A) and 5 (B).

Section 6 provides in pertinent part:

> "(A) If the Closing Date fails to occur on or prior to the Termination Date, then UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, either (at the election of the Servicer; provided that notice of such election is received on or prior to the Termination Date) (i) terminate each Credit Default Swap or (ii) novate each Credit Default Swap to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer), in each case, on the Termination Date.
>
> (C) To the extent there are any CDS Losses, the CDO Fund and SOHC shall collectively be responsible for 100% of any such CDS Losses. Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

CDS Losses are in turn defined in Section 5 (B) (2), the closing provision, as:

> "(x) the sum of (1) the aggregate Floating Amount payments and Physical Settlement Amount payments made by UBS with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps as to which a Floating Amount Event or a Credit Event occurred under the terms thereof, plus (2) the aggregate amount of Net Hedging Payments made by UBS with respect to all Hedging Transactions related to the Credit Default Swaps, plus (3) the aggregate Replacement Losses determined with respect to all of the Credit Default Swaps and the related Hedging Transactions that were terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security (such amount in this clause (x), the 'CDS Losses') . . . ."

Relying on the requirement in the definition of CDS Losses that Reference Obligations be designated as Ineligible Securities, Highland argues that "[t]he term 'CDS Losses'

unambiguously limits UBS's recovery for unrealized (mark-to-market) losses to securities designated as 'Ineligible Securities,' and the Court is bound to enforce the agreement pursuant to its unambiguous terms." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46.) Put another way, Highland argues that UBS may recover mark-to-market losses only on CDSs that have been designated Ineligible Securities. (Id., ¶ 53.)[12] UBS asserts, among other things, that under Section 6, UBS may terminate, novate, or retain CDSs regardless of eligibility, that ineligibility designations are not relevant absent a closing, and that Highland's reading renders meaningless other provisions of the SWA. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29 n 21.)

Upon close reading of the SWA, the court concludes that the SWA is not ambiguous with respect to ineligibility designations and that, under Section 6, upon the failure to close UBS is entitled to retain CDSs and to recover losses for the retained CDSs, without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities. Section 6 (A) expressly provides for UBS to terminate or novate the CDSs, and does not require UBS to first make such designation. Although Section 6 (A) does not also, by its terms, provide for UBS to retain CDSs, a reading of the contract as a whole leaves no question that UBS was not only entitled to retain the CDSs upon the failure to close, but also that it was entitled to recover losses on the retained CDSs without first designating the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible.[13]

[12] Highland's damages expert, Adam Warren, testified that realized losses are losses sustained where a transaction has been closed out and an actual cash payment has been made. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1249, 1253.) He also testified that, in his opinion, there were no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because no assets had been designated as ineligible. (Id. at 1257 ["[O]ur computation is that there are no unrealized losses in the Synthetic Warehouse because of the need to . . . create a designation of ineligible. And we saw no evidence of any Synthetic Warehouse asset being designated ineligible"].)

[13] In its decision of defendants' motion for summary judgment, this court held that it could not determine on the record of that motion whether the SWA was ambiguous with respect to UBS's entitlement to recover losses on retained CDSs, pursuant to Section 6, without a prior designation of such assets as Ineligible Securities. (2017 NY Slip Op. 30546[U], 2017 WL 1103879, * 4-7 [Sup Ct, NY County Mar. 13 2017], affd 159 AD3d 512, lv dismissed 32 NY3d 1080.) With the benefit of the parties' extensive trial briefing on this issue, the court now concludes, for the reasons discussed further in the text, that the agreement is not ambiguous.

As the above-quoted definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) shows, this definition relates to Credit Default Swaps which, upon a closing, have been "terminated or novated or as to which the exposure was retained by UBS, in each case upon the designation of the Reference Obligation relating to such Credit Default Swap as an Ineligible Security . . . ." After setting forth the definition of CDS Losses (and CDS Gains) in the context of a closing, Section 5 (B) (2) further provides: "To the extent the Closing Date fails to occur, allocation of CDS Losses, CDS Gains and any other amounts payable hereunder will be determined in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 hereof."

Significantly, while Section 6 (C) incorporates the defined term CDS Losses, the term CDS Losses also incorporates both the definition of Ineligible Security and the term Replacement Losses from Section 5 (A). These incorporated terms modify the definition of CDS Losses where a closing does not occur.

The definition of Ineligible Security pertains to securities that are ineligible for securitization upon a closing. The SWA thus defines Ineligible Security, in pertinent part, as "any Reference Obligation in the CDS Portfolio which has become ineligible for sale to the Issuer on the Closing Date as a result of the failure of such Reference Obligation to conform to the Eligibility Criteria as it exists at such time of determination . . . ." (SWA, Exhibit A-2 [emphasis added].)

Section 5 (A), which defines the term Replacement Losses, distinguishes between such Losses sustained during the term of the Agreement and those sustained upon termination in the event of a failure to close pursuant to Section 6. Section 5 (A) primarily addresses the removal of CDSs from the warehouse "during the term of this [the SWA] Agreement" where "a Reference Obligation or the related Credit Default Swap does not conform to the Eligibility Criteria" that must be met for securitization. This section provides that "UBS shall be entitled in good faith to designate any Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) as an Ineligible Security and (ii) in its sole discretion to remove any such Reference Obligation (and the related Credit Default Swap) from the CDS Portfolio." Section 5 (A), however, continues:

> "To the extent any such Credit Default Swaps are terminated or novated, or at UBS's discretion, such exposure is retained following the designation of such Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities or otherwise pursuant to Section 6, UBS shall determine the Replacement Gain or Replacement Loss relating to such Credit Default Swaps [according to the formula that follows]."

(emphasis added). Section 5 (A) then sets forth a formula for calculating Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss, which specifically provides for such calculation not only upon termination or novation but also upon UBS's retention of the CDSs. (SWA § 5 [A] [1] – [3].)

Section 5 (A) thus clearly contemplates that UBS may novate, terminate, or retain CDSs both during the term of the Agreement and in the event of a failure to close. The Section affords UBS the discretion to terminate, novate, or retain CDSs "pursuant to Section 6," as distinct from its discretion to do so upon a designation of the underlying Reference Obligation as Ineligible during the term of the Agreement. Any other reading would render meaningless the Section 5 (A) provision "or otherwise pursuant to Section 6."

Moreover, in order to reconcile all of the provisions of the SWA, the Section 5 (B) (2) definition of CDS Losses, when used in Section 6, cannot be construed as requiring a designation of Ineligible Securities. As discussed above, Ineligible Securities are defined as securities ineligible for sale at a closing. Section 5 (B) (2), which governs the calculation of losses where a closing will occur, requires the designation of Ineligible Securities to facilitate the parties' calculation of losses on assets deemed ineligible for inclusion in the securitization that will occur upon the closing. When a closing will not occur, none of the CDSs or other assets will be securitized, and there is no need to distinguish between eligible and ineligible assets. While the definition of CDS Losses with the Ineligible Security designation requirement serves the purposes of Section 5 (B) (2) in the event of a closing, it is inconsistent with the CDS Loss calculation required in Section 6 where the closing does not occur.

Contrary to Highland's apparent contention (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 46), a reading of the CDS Loss provision in Section 6 to permit calculation of losses on retained assets without an Ineligible Security designation does not violate the fundamental precept that a defined term in a contract must be given effect. (See generally Mionis v Bank Julius Baer & Co., 301 AD2d 104, 109 [1st Dept 2002].) Rather, the CDS Loss definition, as used in Section 6, is modified by the contractual provisions discussed above.

Although inartfully drafted, the SWA is not ambiguous. If the contract is read as a whole, and all of the provisions are given meaning, it is reasonably susceptible to only one meaning—namely, that CDS Losses for retained assets may be recovered without a designation of the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities where, as here, the contract has been terminated before the closing.[14] The court accordingly holds that UBS is entitled to recover damages for the retained CDSs in the Synthetic Warehouse.[15]

Calculation of Damages

[14] The court notes that the SWA and the Cash Warehouse Agreement (CWA) both contain provisions which state that the two agreements "set forth the entire understanding of the parties hereto relating to the subject matter hereof . . . ." (SWA, § 18; CWA, § 18.) Assuming, without deciding, that these agreements should be read together in construing the SWA, the court finds that, although the assets at issue in the SWA and the CWA have markedly different attributes, the CWA is consistent with the SWA to the extent that the CWA permits UBS, in the event a closing does not occur, to retain and recover for losses on the CLOs that are the subject of the CWA, without a designation of the CLOs as Ineligible Securities. (See CWA, §§ 5 [A], 7 [A].)

[15] In view of this holding that the SWA is not ambiguous as to whether CDS losses may be recovered without designation of the underlying Reference Obligations as Ineligible Securities, the court has not considered any parol evidence, either documentary or testimonial, in construing the SWA in this regard. Without limiting the foregoing, the court has not considered prior drafts of the SWA, which Highland offered in the event parol evidence were to be admitted. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 53.)

failure to meet the third collateral call. UBS sent Highland a notice, dated December 3, 2008, stating that a Termination Date had occurred under the Warehouse Agreements but that it would forbear from exercising its remedies for two days to permit the Fund Counterparties to meet this collateral call. (PX 7.) UBS then sent a further notice to Highland, dated December 5, 2008, stating that it would exercise its remedies as the call had not been met. (PX 8.) UBS held a public auction of the assets in the Knox Warehouse on December 16, 2008. By notice dated December 19, 2008, UBS demanded payment for its claimed losses based on the results of the auction—$157,949,885.47 for the assets in the Cash Warehouse (PX 10) and $587,357,060.59 for the assets in the Synthetic Warehouse. (PX 11.) UBS also notified Highland that it elected to retain the Collateral Obligations in the Cash Warehouse. (PX 10.)

CDS Damages

Highland argues that even if the recovery of damages for the CDSs is not barred by UBS's failure to designate the Reference Obligations for the CDSs as Ineligible Securities (a claim this court has rejected above), UBS has not proved damages for these CDSs. Specifically, Highland contends that UBS did not comply with the contractual requirements for calculation of losses because its post-termination auction was untimely and otherwise improper. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 57-59.) Highland also contends that UBS's marks do not otherwise "establish a reasonable connection between the asset value and UBS's alleged damages." (Id., ¶¶ 60-65.) UBS disputes these assertions. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29-31.)

Sections 6 (C), 5 (B) (2), and 5 (A) (3) are the provisions of the SWA that govern the calculation of CDS Losses upon termination. Section 6 (C) provides in full:

> "To the extent there are any CDS Losses, the CDO Fund and SOHC shall collectively be responsible for 100% of any such CDS Losses. Such CDS Losses shall be allocated between the CDO Fund and SOHC on the basis of their respective Allocation Percentages. Each of the CDO Fund and SOHC shall, after notice of the amount due from UBS, remit such > amounts by wire transfer in immediately available funds to UBS within three Business Days after the Termination Date."

As discussed above, the definition of CDS Losses in Section 5 (B) (2) includes Replacement Loss, the calculation of which is governed by Section 5 (A). With respect to Replacement Loss relating to CDSs that are retained, Section 5 (A) (3) provides in full:

> "To the extent UBS retains such exposure, the Replacement Gain and Replacement Loss will be imputed based on the arithmetic average of at least three bids (or, if UBS if unable to obtain three such bids having made commercially reasonable efforts, such lesser number of bids as UBS is able to obtain) obtained by or on behalf of UBS from nationally recognized derivatives dealers in the relevant market (no more than one of which may be UBS or any of its Affiliates; provided that any such bid must be provided in good faith) to assume UBS's position under such Credit Default Swap."

The SWA, by its terms, thus contemplated that payment would be made within three days after the Termination Date, subject to notice from UBS. As the SWA provided for an auction to calculate the amount of the losses, it also contemplated that an auction could or would occur within that three day period.

By the terms of UBS's notices to Highland, although a Termination Date had occurred as of December 3, UBS extended the Fund Counterparties' time to meet the third collateral call until December 5. The court thus finds that the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements for failure to meet the third collateral call occurred on December 5. UBS did not conduct the auction to calculate the CDS Losses until December 16.

UBS's delay of approximately 11 days in conducting the auction, while seemingly de minimis, in fact had momentous financial consequences, given that the delay occurred in the wake of the September 15, 2008 Lehman bankruptcy filing and at the height of the financial crisis. With the market spiraling downward, the CDS losses ascertained through the auction process were approximately $117 million more than the losses calculated by using UBS's marks on either December 3 or December 5. (PX Demo. 21; DX Demo. 12 [showing UBS and Highland marks as of December 3 and 5; PX Demo. 28 at 60 [Ps.'s Closing Statement Demonstrative Exhibit, acknowledging that CDS damages, as calculated based on the auction, exceeded the losses calculated using UBS's marks on December 3 and 5 by over $117 million].)[16]

UBS contends that the three day payment period was for its benefit and that it "could exercise its right to get paid after three business days without waiver." (Ps.'s Findings, at 28.) The court agrees that UBS's delay in demanding payment or holding the auction did not result in a waiver of its right to seek payment of its damages resulting from the Fund Counterparties' breach. (See SWA § 20 ["Neither the failure nor any delay on the part of any party hereto to exercise any right, remedy, power or privilege under this Agreement shall operate as a waiver hereof. . . ."].) Highland correctly contends, however, that the delayed auction could not serve as a basis for calculating UBS's damages because the results of the auction did not reflect market conditions as of the date of termination or breach. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 57.)

As explained by the Court of Appeals:

> "It has long been recognized that the theory underlying damages is to make good or replace the loss caused by the breach of contract. Damages are intended to return the parties to the point at which the breach arose and to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach."

[16] At the trial, the parties stipulated to dispense with rebuttal testimony from plaintiffs' damages expert, Louis Dudney and, in lieu of such testimony, to the admission into evidence of plaintiffs' Demonstrative Exhibits 20 and 21, and defendants' Demonstrative Exhibit 12. (Trial Tr. at 1868, 1870 [Stipulation].) PX Demo. 21 and DX Demo. 12, which were prepared by Mr. Dudney, calculated damages using plaintiffs' and defendants' marks, respectively, on December 3 and 5, 2008. (Trial Tr. at 1870-1877.)

It is further settled that damages need not be proven with mathematical certainty. It is sufficient that a reasonable basis for the calculation of damages be shown. (See generally J.R. Loftus, Inc. v White, 85 NY2d 874, 877 [1995] ["While a plaintiff may recover damages when the measure of damages is unavoidably uncertain or difficult to ascertain, a reasonable connection between a plaintiff's proof and a [] determination of damages is nevertheless necessary"]; CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, *2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] ["The law of New York is clear that once the fact of damage has been established, the non-breaching party need only provide a stable foundation for a reasonable estimate [of damages]" [internal quotation marks and citations omitted, brackets in original].)

UBS's December 16, 2008 auction cannot satisfy either of these standards because, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's losses at, or even shortly after, the breach, due to the exceptional circumstances presented by the financial crisis.[17] The court accordingly turns to the alternative basis advanced by UBS for the calculation of damages—its marks on December 5, 2008. (Ps.'s Findings, at 29.)

It is well settled that "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma v Skaarup Ship Mgt. Corp., 916 F2d 820, 825 [2d Cir 1990], cert denied 499 US 907 [1991] [applying New York law and citing Simon v Electrospace

[17] There is authority that "in accordance with the objective that a party seeking recovery for breach of contract is entitled 'to be made whole' as of the time of the breach, the [factfinder] should be able to make its valuation determination on all relevant elements of the case, whether dated prebreach, on the date of breach, or 'some short time period thereafter.'" (Credit Suisse First Boston v Utrecht-America Fin. Co., 84 AD3d 579, 580 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Boyce v Soundview Tech. Group, Inc., 464 F3d 376, 389 [2d Cir 2006] [other internal quotation marks and citations omitted].) Although the auction was held shortly after the breach, this authority does not support calculation of damages based on the auction results, as the auction did not provide a reliable basis for assessing the losses.

Corp., 28 NY2d 136, 145-146 [1971], motion to amend remittitur and clarify denied 28 NY2d 809].) In accordance with the objective that the injured party be made whole, "damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.)

UBS offered credible testimony that its December 5, 2008 marks reasonably reflected the market value of the CDSs as of the December 5 breach date. In particular, Timothy LeRoux, who at the time of the transaction was second in command to Mr. Grimaldi on the UBS trading desk (LeRoux Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1640), gave credible testimony that, in the regular course of business, the trading desk "marked to market" hundreds of CLO assets, and every week or two was required to assign values on every one of the assets, both cash and synthetic, in the Knox Warehouse. (Id. at 1724.) Mr. LeRoux also described the marking process and identified information, including public information as to offers and bids on CDSs in the marketplace, that UBS considered in developing "objective" prices. (Id. at 1727, 1745-1750.) Mr. Grimaldi also testified that, although the trading desk performed the mark-to-market valuation of the assets in the Knox Warehouse, the UBS valuation group established oversight due to the volatility of the market and "would look at other market observations and make sure that those [the trading desk marks] were in line with the marketplace." (Grimaldi Testimony, Trial Tr. at 207-208.)

Highland does not dispute that the mark-to-market process is a methodology for determining loss in market value of retained assets. (See e.g. Testimony of Adam Warren [Highland's damages expert], Trial Tr. at 1268-1269; Testimony of Philip Braner [Highland former executive], Trial Tr. at 469-472; Testimony of UBS's Timothy LeRoux, Trial Tr. at 1640, 1727-1729.)

Rather, in claiming that UBS's marks are not competent evidence on which to award damages, Highland suggests that the setting of marks by the trading group involved a conflict of interest, because the trading group's bonuses were based on the performance of the mark-to-mark assets and the group had the incentive to inflate the value of the assets. (Ds.s' Findings, ¶¶ 61-62.) Highland makes no showing that UBS inflated the value of the CDSs or that trading groups do not routinely develop marks. Moreover, Highland's assertion that "UBS's trading group alone set the marks for the Knox Warehouse assets" (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 62) ignores UBS's credible testimony, discussed above, that the valuation group exercised oversight in connection with the development of the marks.

Highland's further assertion that its own marks are more reliable (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65) is unsupported by persuasive evidence. Philip Braner, who ultimately became Chief Operating Officer of the Highland Capital Management CLO Group and COO of Highland Financial Partners (Braner Testimony, Trial Tr. at 397), testified that Highland was itself tracking marks on the assets in the Knox Warehouse (id. at 615) and had an "internal valuation team that was responsible for accumulating marks" in a process in which portfolio managers of the Highland funds participated. (See id. at 467.) While Highland appears to assert that its marks are more reliable than UBS's because they were set by a valuation team, Highland fails to show that the role of its valuation team differed in any material respect from that of the UBS valuation group that performed oversight on its trading group in the marking process.

Notably, Highland fails to explain how its methodology in setting marks was more reliable than UBS's. Adam Warren, Highland's damages expert, forthrightly testified that he was not opining on the reasonableness of any marks in this case (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1247-1248), and he did not in fact give any testimony on whether UBS's or Highland's marks were more reliable.

The evidence at trial also demonstrated that Highland, like UBS, set marks on the CDSs on an asset by asset basis from March 2008 through October 2008. While there were differences between Highland's and UBS's marks during this period, the Highland and UBS marks in the month of October were substantially similar. The difference in the marks did not escalate substantially until November 2008. (PX Demo. 9, at 4.) Mr. Dudney gave testimony, which was not disputed, that although Highland, like UBS, had been setting marks on an asset by asset basis, Highland stopped doing so as of October 2008 and, in a November 30, 2008 calculation of damages, attributed the same mark (37) to each asset. (Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 883-884, 905-909, DX 116.) Highland offered no explanation for this change in methodology. Mr. Dudney, in contrast, gave plausible testimony that this use of the same mark did not make sense given the deterioration of the market. (Id. at 908.)

In sum, based on the credible evidence at the trial, the court holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating that its December 5, 2008 marks provide a reasonable basis, under the circumstances, for the calculation of damages at the time of the breach. In so holding, the court rejects Highland's not fully articulated contention that only an auction, and not a mark-to-market methodology, is a reliable method for calculating damages. (See Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 59.) Highland's reliance on the testimony of its damages expert, Adam Warren, in support of this contention (see id.) is misplaced. While Mr. Warren testified that CDSs are "bespoke contracts," he did not give any testimony that an auction was required to ascertain their value.

Further, as held above, the auction did not provide a reliable basis for determining UBS's damages due to the volatility of the market at the time of the auction. It bears emphasis that, although the market was also volatile at the time the December 5, 2008 marks were accumulated, Highland has not advanced an alternative, other than the non-viable auction, to the mark-to-market valuation methodology. Nor has Highland made any showing that the market value of the CDSs was not reasonably determinable as of the date of breach using the mark-to-market valuation methodology.[18]

The court further holds that UBS has met its burden of demonstrating the reasonableness of its calculation of damages using those marks. UBS's and Highland's experts both provided the court with calculations of damages using UBS's and Highland's marks, respectively, as of December 5, 2008. Mr. Warren confirmed that his main differences with Mr. Dudney regarding the calculation of damages for the Synthetic Warehouse were that Mr. Dudney considered it appropriate, and he did not, to include damages for unrealized CDS losses and for the 20 Internal Swaps in which UBS was both the protection seller and the protection buyer. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298; DX Demo. 12; PX Demo. 21; see also Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1004.)

Mr. Warren excluded from his damages calculation unrealized CDS losses for all CDSs as to which a designation of ineligibility had not been made. He testified that his basis for doing so was his understanding of the contract—i.e, his understanding that the SWA required such designation—and not industry custom. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1281-1282.) For the reasons discussed above, this court has rejected Highland's position that the SWA should be construed as requiring ineligibility designations as a condition of the inclusion of unrealized losses on the CDSs in the calculation of damages. Also for the reasons discussed above, the court has rejected Highland's position that the losses on the Internal Swaps should not be included in this calculation.

[18] In its post-trial briefing, Highland sought a finding that if UBS is held to be entitled to recover damages for CDS losses, Highland's marks are more reliable than UBS's for determining those damages. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 65.) Highland did not argue that the market value of the losses could not reasonably be determined by using marks. In contrast, in support of its claim that it is entitled to an offset against CDS damages for post-breach termination payments received by UBS on the CDSs, Highland questioned the accuracy of the market valuation at the time of the breach. Highland thus asserted in a footnote: "Given the scant market pricing data available at the time of the breach, post-termination payments and asset dispositions are relevant for the additional reason that they provide a more accurate measurement of the actual value of the Knox assets." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8 n 5.) This assertion is unsupported by any citation to trial testimony. More important, at the trial Highland did not offer any expert testimony that the mark-to-market methodology was not a reliable basis for calculating the CDS damages. For the additional reasons set forth in the section of this decision on Highland's requested Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value, the court finds that offset of post-breach payments received by UBS on the CDSs would be inconsistent with calculation of UBS's damages based on their market value at the time of the breach.

Review of the experts' calculations shows, moreover, that when such losses are included in the calculations, the difference between Highland's and UBS's totals is substantially reduced. As previously noted, the parties stipulated to the introduction into evidence of charts prepared by Mr. Dudney comparing his and Mr. Warren's calculations of CDS damages using UBS's and Highland's marks as of December 5, 2008. Using Highland's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated CDS mark-to-market losses of $388,284,750, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $361,331,855. (DX Demo. 12.) Using UBS's marks, Mr. Dudney calculated losses of $470,113,605, compared to Mr. Warren's calculation of $26,952,895—a difference of $443,160,710. (PX Demo. 21.)

The difference in the totals is largely due to Mr. Warren's exclusion from his calculation of all unrealized CDS losses and all losses for the Internal Swaps. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1296-1299.) His calculation of $26,952,895 for CDS losses includes only realized CDS losses. (Id. at 1250.) According to Mr. Warren, the Internal Swaps account for $93,952,173 of the CDS damages using UBS's marks, or $68,801,027 using Highland's marks. (Id. at 1269.) Although Mr. Warren disputed UBS's entitlement to unrealized CDS losses, he performed a calculation including such losses. Using UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, these losses totaled $355,487,606. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Using Highland's marks as of that date, these losses totaled $299,118,973. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1269; DX Demo. 10, at 14.) Mr. Warren's total, using UBS's marks, for the Internal Swaps ($93,952.173) and the unrealized CDS losses ($355,487,606) was $449,439,779. (DX Demo. 10, at 14.) As stated above, Mr. Dudney's calculation of total Synthetic Warehouse losses, using UBS's December 5, 2008 marks, was $470,113,605. Given the magnitude of the damages, this disparity is not material.

The court accordingly holds that UBS incurred losses in the Synthetic Warehouse of $470,113,605 as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

CLO Damages

Highland does not dispute that unrealized losses are recoverable for the CLO assets. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1293.) Moreover, UBS's (Mr. Dudney's) and Highland's (Mr. Warren's) calculations of the CLO losses as of December 5, 2008 are the same: Using Highland's marks, these losses were $106,157,101. (DX Demo. 12, at 2.) Using UBS's marks, the losses were $128,848,101. (PX Demo. 21.) Having concluded that UBS's damages were properly calculated based on UBS's marks as of December 5, 2008, the date of the breach, the court holds that UBS incurred losses in the Cash Warehouse of $128,848,101, subject to the adjustments discussed below.

Adjustments to Damages Calculation

In calculating the Synthetic and Cash Warehouse losses, Mr. Dudney and Mr. Warren made adjustments for the same items: carry (premiums and interest), collateral value, financing fees, and financing savings. Mr. Dudney's adjustment of $79,587,557 and Mr. Warren's adjustment of $76,632,634 did not differ materially. (PX Demo. 21.) According to Mr. Warren, the difference of approximately $3 million is due to Mr. Warren's exclusion of the Internal Swaps in calculating the carry. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1298-1299.) As the court has held that the Internal Swaps were properly included in the damages calculation, Mr. Dudney's adjustments will be accepted.

Reducing UBS's damages by the adjustments, the court holds that UBS sustained total damages of $519,374,149 (Cash Warehouse Losses of $128,848,101 plus Synthetic Warehouse Losses of $470,113,605 minus $79,587,557).

OFFSETS

Offset for Post-Breach Appreciation In CDS Asset Value

A central issue in this action is whether Highland is entitled to an offset against UBS's damages for appreciation in the value of the CDSs after the breach. The parties stipulated that UBS received post-breach termination payments net of carry on the CDSs, including the Internal Swaps, in the amount of $202,223,059. (DX 491.) It is undisputed that these payments were received months and, for many of the CDSs, years after the termination of the transaction. (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10 [acknowledging that UBS "liquidated the assets years later"]; PX 335 [spreadsheet showing termination dates for CDSs through 2011].)

Highland argues that, at the time the transaction was terminated, "frozen credit markets had created a severe mismatch between the assets' alleged market value and their actual value based on their cash flows." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 10.) Highland further argues that UBS was able to sell these assets for hundreds of millions of dollars more than their December 2008 marks and that, while UBS is entitled to retain the sale proceeds, "it cannot ignore these monies in calculating the harm it actually suffered." (Id. at 11.) According to Highland, if disposition of the assets after the termination is not considered, UBS will receive "an enormous windfall." (Id.) UBS acknowledges that if a non-breaching party obtains a benefit "because of the breach," the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 6 [emphasis UBS's].) UBS argues, however, that the Fund Counterparties' breach was not a but for cause of the post-breach payments UBS received for the CDSs. (Id. at 7.) Rather, subsequent gains that resulted from UBS's disposition of the assets were "the result of UBS's contractual rights [to retain the assets] in the event of any termination and of its subsequent

As discussed above, contract damages are intended to make "good or replace the loss" caused to a party by the breach of contract and "to place the nonbreaching party in as good a position as it would have been had the contract been performed. Thus, damages for breach of contract are ordinarily ascertained as of the date of the breach." (Brushton-Moira Cent. Sch. Dist., 91 NY2d at 261.) Further, "where the breach involves the deprivation of an item with a determinable market value, the market value at the time of the breach is the measure of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 825 [applying New York law and citing Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146].)

The calculation of damages is also subject to the fundamental precept that where a non-breaching party acquires a "benefit or opportunity for benefit . . . because of the breach, a balance must be struck between benefit and loss" and the benefit must be offset against the non-breaching party's damages. (Indu Craft, Inc. v Bank of Baroda, 47 F3d 490, 495 [2d Cir 1995] [applying New York law]; accord Aristocrat Leisure Ltd. v Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 727 F Supp 2d 256, 289 [SD NY 2010] ["[I]f a victim derives a benefit from the breaching party's breach of contract, the breaching party only is responsible for the victim's net loss"], reconsideration denied 2010 WL 3431132; Fertico Belgium S.A. v Phosphate Chemicals Export Assn., Inc., 70 NY2d 76, 84 [1987], rearg denied 70 NY2d 694 [holding, in a "cover" action governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, that "'[g]ains made by the injured party on other transactions after the breach are never to be deducted from the damages that are otherwise recoverable, unless such gains could not have been made, had there been no breach'"] [quoting 5 Corbin, Contracts § 1041].)

Here, although UBS and Highland agree that any benefit derived by UBS because of the breach must be offset against its losses, neither party has cited, and the court's own research has not located, any case in which a court has considered how to apply this precept to a non-breaching party's retention of assets upon a failed securitization transaction and realization of subsequent gains. There is, however, a substantial body of law involving a breaching party's failure to deliver or purchase assets subject to fluctuations in value, in which the courts have assessed damages based on the market value of the assets at the time of breach and have declined to consider any subsequent increases or decreases in value of the assets. As discussed further below, the court concludes that these cases are inconsistent with the offset sought by Highland.

As the Second Circuit has explained in reviewing this body of law, New York courts reject damage awards "based on what 'the actual economic conditions and performance' were in light of hindsight." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826, quoting Aroneck v Atkin, 90 AD2d 966, 967 [4th Dept 1982], lv denied 59 NY2d 601 [1983].) "They have explicitly rejected the use of subsequent changes in value or profits where they would increase an award, and where they would decrease the award." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826 [internal citations omitted].)

In the securities context, courts have repeatedly held that the damages for failure to deliver or purchase shares of stock should be based on their market value at the time of breach, and not on any subsequent increase or decrease in their value. (Simon, 28 NY2d at 145-146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, holding: "The proper measure of damages for breach of contract is determined by the loss sustained or gain prevented at the time and place of breach. The rule is precisely the same when the breach of contract is nondelivery of shares of stock"] [internal citations omitted]; Aroneck, 90 AD2d at 967 [where the buyer breached a contract to purchase shares, holding that damages should be based on market value at the time of breach, and rejecting the buyer's theory that the "value should be based on the actual economic conditions and performance" of the company post-breach]; Emposimato v CIFC Acquisition Corp., 89 AD3d 418, 421 [1st Dept 2011] [quoting Aroneck and citing Simon in holding that "[i]n the case of a breach of contract to sell securities, expectation damages are calculated as 'the difference between the agreed price of the shares and the fair market value at the time of the breach'"]; Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc. v Hollander, 337 F3d 186, 197 [2d Cir 2003] [following Simon and Aroneck in a case involving the defendant's breach of a contract to deliver warrants]; see also Kaminsky v Herrick Feinstein LLP, 59 AD3d 1, 11-12 [1st Dept 2008], lv denied 12 NY3d 715 [2009] [holding that damages for breach of contract to deliver shares prior to an initial public offering (IPO) should be awarded based on the value of the shares at time of the breach, not their higher value post-IPO].)

The court holds that these cases involve transactions that are analogous to (although far less complex than) the transaction at issue, and apply the same measure of damages that this court has adopted above—namely, the measure of damages based on the market value of the assets on the date of the breach. These cases accordingly govern the calculation of damages here. The court notes, moreover, that sound reasons support the application of this measure of damages without consideration of post-breach fluctuations in the value of the assets.

As the Second Circuit reasoned, a contrary rule that would permit calculation of damages at the time of trial "would be a two-edged sword, because courts would have to diminish damage awards where the value of the item decreased or where losses were encountered subsequent to the breach as well as enhance them where conditions improve. However, New York courts have expressly refused to adopt this 'wait and see' theory of damages." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) In addition, although the court does not adjust for changes in the value of the shares when calculating damages according to the date of breach measure, the parties themselves can protect against changes in value by hedging or acquiring shares in the market. As the Second Circuit further reasoned: "To be sure, uncertainties about the future and lack of perfect information may cause an asset to be under- or over-valued at any particular time. At that time, however, either party has an opportunity to hedge according to his or her judgment about the future stream of income." (Sharma, 916 F2d at 826; see also Simon, 28 NY2d at 146 [where the seller breached a contract to deliver shares, reasoning that "[i]f plaintiff were anxious to own the shares rather than obtain their value, he was free to purchase them in the market. His cause of action should not and may not be converted into carrying a market 'call' or 'warrant' to acquire the stock on demand if the price rose above its value as reflected in his cause of action"].)

The court further holds that application of the date of breach measure of damages, without adjustments for fluctuations in the value of the assets, will serve the objective of putting UBS in the position it would have been in had the contract been performed. If the securitization had closed, UBS would have been entitled, under the express terms of the SWA, to novate to the Issuer its positions as protection seller on all of the eligible Knox CDSs. (SWA § 5 [B] [1].) As a result of the breach, UBS was forced to assume a substantial risk of loss under the CDSs that would have been novated to the Issuer had the closing occurred. As discussed above, the loss in market value of the retained CDSs as of the date of breach was determined using the mark-to-market methodology. More specifically, as confirmed by both UBS's and Highland's experts, the mark-to-market losses calculated as of the date of breach represent the cost to UBS to exit the CDSs—

that is, the payments to be made to third-parties so that they would take on, and UBS could extricate itself from, the risk. (Warren Testimony, Trial Tr. at 1304-1306; Dudney Testimony, Trial Tr. at 894-895.) A damage award for these mark-to-market losses will therefore compensate UBS for the exposure to risk that it would not have faced had the contract been performed.

To the extent that Highland contends that a damage award is not appropriate for these mark-to-market losses because the losses were not realized, the court rejects that contention. The damage award is appropriate, notwithstanding that the losses were not realized, because, as held above, the contract affords UBS the right of recovery for such losses. (See CDO Plus Master Fund Ltd. v Wachovia Bank, N.A., No. 07 Civ. 11078 [LTS], 2011 WL 4526132, * 2 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Sept. 29, 2011] [reasoning that, where the contractual definition of loss for the purpose of calculating damages did not require the CDS protection buyer to sustain "actual loss," "[t]he absence of an actual loss on a Reference Obligation transaction, thus, is not a barrier to [the protection buyer's] recovery. . ."] [emphasis in original].)

The court further holds that the record does not support Highland's contention that UBS's post-breach gains were realized because of the breach, and that this case therefore falls under the line of authority that requires an offset for such gains. Highland in effect contends that because UBS retained the CDSs as a result of the breach, it also realized the post-breach gains because of the breach.[19] That conclusion does not follow. As held above, UBS had a contractual right to retain the CDSs upon the termination of the transaction based on the Fund Counterparties' breach of the SWA by failing to meet the collateral call. The SWA does not contain any provision that limited UBS's discretion as to when to dispose of the assets after termination. Rather, as UBS persuasively argues, the gains realized as a result of the post-breach disposition of assets were attributable not to the breach itself but to UBS's assumption of the risk of loss on the CDSs and its investment strategy as to when to dispose of them based on its assessment of the market. (See G & R Corp. v American Sec. Trust Co., 523 F2d 1164, 1175 [DC Cir 1975] [holding that while the transfer of property to the plaintiffs was caused by the defendant's breach, the profit realized by the plaintiffs from a post-breach sale was not "caused by the breach" but was "attributable to the [plaintiffs'] decision to hold [the property] until [its] condition and the market were favorable for sale"].)

[19] In so holding, the court rejects UBS's contention that it would have been entitled to retain the CDS assets, regardless of the Fund Counterparties' breach, because the Agreements would have terminated in any event as of March 14, 2009, at which point UBS would have had the contractual right to retain the assets. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 8.) This assertion is not only speculative but ignores that UBS did in fact acquire the right to retain the assets upon the Fund Counterparties' breach of the Agreements as a result of their failure to meet the third collateral call. For the reasons discussed in the text, however, the court cannot accept Highland's further contention that UBS realized gains on the retained CDSs because of the breach.

Nor does Highland successfully argue that the gains realized by UBS on the post-breach disposition of the assets must be offset under general principles which require a party who suffers damages as a result of another's breach to take reasonable steps to mitigate its damages. (See Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 5-9.) Highland cites cases requiring mitigation in connection with the purchase and sale of securities and transactions in other markets. (See e.g. Drummond v Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., No. 95 Civ. 2011 [DC], 1996 WL 631723, * 2-3 [US Dist Ct SD NY, Oct. 31, 1996] [holding that where the buyer breached a contract to purchase securities, the seller must take steps to mitigate its damages by selling the securities within "a reasonable period of time"]; Saboundjian v Bank Audi (USA), 157 AD2d 278, 284-285 [1st Dept 1990] [holding that where a broker failed to execute a customer's speculative currency exchange order, the customer was required to direct execution of the trade "within a reasonable time after he learned that it had not been effected earlier"].)

These cases are inapposite, as the SWA affords UBS the contractual right to retain the securities upon the Fund Counterparties' breach. Ironically, although purporting to rely on these cases, which in fact require that the non-breaching party mitigate within a reasonable period of time, Highland argues not that UBS was required to dispose of the CDSs within a reasonable period of time after the breach but that it was required to hold them for months and, indeed, years, until the market improved. Highland thus asserts that UBS reasonably mitigated by "holding (as opposed to fire selling) fully performing interest and premium-bearing assets in the face of a dysfunctional market. . . ," and that "UBS's mitigation was not only reasonable, but required by law." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 7.) Put another way, Highland does not identify a specific date or dates by which UBS was required to mitigate. To the contrary, without citation to any legal authority, Highland argues that UBS was required to hold the assets for an indefinite period, until the market improved, to minimize its losses.

The mitigation cases provide no support for Highland's assertion that UBS's disposition, months and years after the breach, of assets that it had a contractual right to retain, constitutes mitigation.[20] Rather, in claiming that it is entitled to "offsets" for the post-breach gains realized by UBS, Highland appears in effect to advance a measure of damages that is patently inconsistent with the fundamental tenet of the date of breach measure of damages—namely, that a non-breaching party's damages for assets with a determinable market value must be calculated

[20] Nor does Highland cite any other authority that supports its claim that it is entitled to offsets for post-breach gains realized by UBS. Cases in which a party has a duty to cover (see e.g. Fertico Belgium S.A. v Phosphate Chemicals Export Assn., Inc., 70 NY2d 76, supra) are inapposite, given UBS's contractual right to retain the CDSs upon the breach. Cases in which a party is on both sides of a securities transaction are factually dissimilar. (See Aristocrat Leisure Ltd. v Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas, 727 F Supp 2d 256, supra [where the plaintiff company breached a contract affording the defendant bondholders the right to convert their bonds to the company's stock, and the bondholders held open existing short positions in the company's stock on which they realized post-breach gains, the company was entitled to an offset]; see also Minpeco, S.A. v Conticommodity Servs., Inc., 676 F Supp 486, 490 [SD NY 1987] [holding that the plaintiff's losses on short futures positions on silver as a result of the defendants' manipulation of the market were required to be offset by the plaintiff's profits on physical silver positions also then held by the plaintiff].)

at the date of breach, not based on hindsight, and that neither party can select the date on which the damages calculation will be most favorable to it. Thus, a non-breaching buyer cannot select the date on which the assets "had their highest value or a period of time that was profitable but that excludes periods when losses occurred." (See Sharma, 916 F2d at 826.) Similarly, a breaching buyer cannot avoid or reduce the damages caused by its breach by invoking post-breach decreases in the value of the assets. (See id.)

The court accordingly holds that Highland's request for an offset for UBS's post-breach gains from the disposition of the CDSs must be denied.

Offset for Right of First Refusal Counterclaim

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital) seeks judgment on its first counterclaim against plaintiff UBS Securities LLC for breach of the Cash Warehouse Agreement provision affording it the right to purchase CLO assets in the event UBS elected to retain such assets upon the termination of the Agreement. Section 5 (A) of the CWA provides that in event of failure to close, "UBS shall be authorized (but not required) to sell each Collateral Obligation then in the Warehouse Account in accordance with the Liquidation Procedures." The Liquidation Procedures set forth in section 7 (A) of the CWA provide in pertinent part:

> "If any Collateral Obligation is to be sold, UBS shall have the right to direct such sale on such terms and in such manner and at such time that it deems appropriate in its sole discretion. UBS may, in its sole discretion, elect to retain any such Collateral Obligation or to sell such Collateral Obligation to one of UBS's Affiliates in which event, for purposes of determining Net Collateral Gain and Net Collateral Loss, such Collateral Obligation shall be deemed to have been liquidated at a price equal to its Market Value. To the extent that UBS in its sole discretion elects to retain such Collateral Obligation, the Servicer will have the right to purchase such Collateral Obligation at its Market Value."

Section 7 (A) further provides that if UBS elects to sell CLOs upon termination, "the Servicer will have the right to bid for and purchase such Collateral Obligation at a purchase price equal to the highest third party bid received by UBS for the purchase of such Collateral Obligation."

NYSCEF DOC. NO. 641 RECEIVED NYSCEF: 11/14/2019

It is undisputed that Highland Capital notified UBS that it sought to purchase six of the CLOs with a bid price of $1.9 million and a notional value of $44 million, but that it sought to provide the funds for the purchase, and to settle the trades, in the name of one of its affiliates, CLO Value Fund. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 21.) UBS declined to agree to the sale to the Highland Capital affiliate. (Id.; DX 72; PX 292.)

The court is unpersuaded that a Highland Capital affiliate had the right, under the CWA, to purchase the CLOs. Section 7 (A), which governs the disposition of the CLO assets upon termination, expressly affords one UBS Affiliate the right to purchase CLOs. In contrast, this Section affords the right to purchase only to the Servicer, and not to any other Highland entity. The Servicer is defined as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (CWA, First Paragraph.) Reading the CWA as a whole, the court further finds that no other provision modifies or is inconsistent with this limitation. On the contrary, where the acts of Highland Capital's Affiliates were implicated, the CWA expressly referred to the Affiliates. (CWA, § 13 [B] [limiting the liability of the "Servicer" "for any acts or omissions by the Servicer or any Affiliate of the Servicer, or any of their directors, officers, members, agents, equity holders [and others] under or in connection with this Agreement, or for any decrease in the value of the Collateral Portfolio . . . ."].)[21] The court accordingly holds that the CWA unambiguously provides that the right to purchase retained CLOs is limited, among the Highland entities, to Highland Capital.

In view of this holding that the CWA is not ambiguous with respect to Highland's post-

[21] The parties to the transaction knew how to afford rights to purchase assets to Affiliates of the Servicer. The SWA provides that if the closing fails to occur, UBS may, with the consent of the related counterparty, novate CDSs "to a third party or to the Servicer (or any Affiliate of the Servicer designated by the Servicer). . . ." (SWA § 6 [A].) The omission from the CWA of authorization to Affiliate(s) of the Servicer to purchase CLOs is therefore notable. Moreover, Highland Capital does not claim that the concerns—regulatory and other—that are implicated in novating CDSs are comparable to those in selling CLOs.

termination right to purchase CLOs, the court rejects Highland's contention that the court should consider evidence allegedly showing that UBS and Highland Capital had a prior course of conduct in which UBS permitted Highland Capital to settle trades "at its fund level." (Ds.'s Findings, ¶¶ 80-81.) Parol evidence of course of conduct is not admissible to construe an unambiguous contract. (See e.g. Sigismondi v Queens Transit Corp., 38 AD2d 71, 73 [2d Dept 1971], affd no opinion 32 NY2d 745 [1973]; Evans v Famous Music Corp., 1 NY3d 452, 459 [2004].)

The court further notes that even if Highland Capital could recover on its counterclaim, the damages it seeks are not recoverable. Highland Capital seeks a finding that because the CLOs continued to perform until maturity, "it would have profited $46 million" if it had been permitted to exercise its right of first refusal to purchase the CLOs. (Ds.'s Findings, ¶ 82; DX Demo. 9.) As Highland Capital acknowledges, however, the market value of the CLOs at the time of breach was $1,934,214. (DX Demo. 9.) The measure of damages, as explained above in connection with Highland Capital's claim for offsets against UBS's damages, is the market value of the assets as of the date of breach, not the increase in their value in the indefinite future.

Offset for Unjust Enrichment

Highland Capital also seeks judgment on its second counterclaim alleging that UBS was unjustly enriched by its failure to permit Highland Capital, through its affiliate CLO Value Fund, to purchase the Collateral Obligations upon termination. This claim for unjust enrichment is not maintainable as the right to purchase is governed by contract—the CWA. (See generally Pappas v Tzolis, 20 NY3d 228, 234 [2012], rearg denied 20 NY3d 1075 [2013]; Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc. v Long Is. R.R. Co., 70 NY2d 382, 388-389 [1987].)

Highland also requests an offset for settlements with three Highland Affiliates—Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. (Credit Strategies), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. (Crusader Offshore), and Highland Crusader Holding Corporation (Crusader Holding) (collectively, the Settling Highland Affiliates). Credit Strategies and Crusader Offshore were defendants in this action. UBS asserted its fraudulent conveyance cause of action against them as well as all of the other defendants. (Second Am Compl., Fifth Cause of Action.) Crusader Holding was a defendant in a separate complaint, which asserted a fraudulent conveyance cause of action against it. (UBS Secs. LLC v Highland Crusader Holding Corp., Sup Ct, NY County, Index No. 652646/11, Compl., First Cause of Action; Ps.'s Letters, dated July 21, 2015 [NYSCEF Doc. No. 397]; Jan. 7, 2016 [NYSCEF Doc. This court bifurcated the trial of this action, directing that it would first hold a bench trial on the breach of contract claims, which were triable by the court and are the subject of this decision, and that the fraudulent conveyance and other claims, which are triable by a jury, would be heard subsequently. (May 1, 2018 Decision on the Record [NYSCEF Doc. No. 494].)

The parties dispute whether the confidential settlements (DX 76 id and DX 77 id) may be considered in this action. They also dispute whether the settlements may be offset, pursuant to statute or case law, against the damages awarded by this decision to UBS against the Fund Counterparties on the breach of contract causes of action. (See Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 14-21; Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 15-19, 21-24.)

Even assuming, without deciding, that the damages may be subject to offset by the settlements, the determination of whether or to what extent the offset should be allowed must await determination of the jury trial. Where an offset for a settlement is sought, "the damages against which the settlement is sought to be applied should be determined so a proper comparison can be made between them and the damages covered by the settlement." (Carter v.

State of New York, 139 Misc 2d 423, 429 [Ct Cl, 1988], affd 154 AD2d 642 [2d Dept 1989]; accord Moller v North Shore Univ. Hosp., 12 F3d 13, 16 [2d Cir 1993] [applying New York law].)

Here, Highland argues that the causes of action against the settling defendants are "wholly derivative of its breach-of-contract claims against the Fund counterparties." (Ds.'s Post-Trial Memo., at 16.) UBS persuasively argues, in opposition, that the fraudulent conveyance causes of action seek relief in addition to compensatory damages, including imposition of a constructive trust and punitive damages. (Ps.'s Post-Trial Memo, at 22-24; Second Am. Compl., at 57-58.) Moreover, the damages, if any, that will be awarded against the Fund Counterparties and Highland Capital on the fraudulent conveyance cause of action remain to be determined at the jury trial. On this record the court accordingly cannot compare the settlements with the fraudulent conveyance damages. Nor is there any basis for the court to determine the extent to which the settlements cover the same damages, or damages that overlap with, the breach of contract damages awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties by this decision. The determination of the offset issue will therefore be deferred pending the jury trial. As it appears, however, that Highland may be entitled to an offset for some or all of the settlement amounts, the court will stay enforcement, to the extent of the settlement amount ($70.5 million), of the judgment to be awarded to UBS against the Fund Counterparties for the damages for breach of contract.

Conclusion

UBS is entitled to damages for $519,374,149 on the third and fourth causes of action against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements. Enforcement of the judgment for this amount will be stayed up to $70.5 million, the amount of the settlements with the Settling Highland Affiliates.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the parties shall meet and confer with a view to reaching agreement on the form of the judgment, including but not limited to the Allocation Percentages of CDO Fund and SOHC, and the award of interest. If the parties are unable to reach such agreement, they shall promptly settle judgment; and it is further ORDERED that this decision shall be filed under seal for ten business days from the date hereof to afford the parties the opportunity to confer and to advise the court as to whether there is any information in the decision which is claimed by any party to be confidential. The parties shall, within five business days of the date hereof, submit a joint letter of no more than three pages, advising the court of their positions on this issue. The letter should be accompanied by a joint copy of the decision, highlighting the portion(s) of the decision which each party claims is confidential and should be redacted in the decision that will be publicly filed; and it is further ORDERED that the parties shall telephone the court on a conference call within five business days of the date hereof (at a specific date and time to be arranged with the Clerk of Part 60) to discuss the above confidentiality issue as well as the jury trial phase of this action. The parties should be prepared to address whether, or to what extent, the jury trial may proceed in light of Highland Capital's filing of a bankruptcy petition.[22]

This constitutes the decision and order of the court.

MARCY FRIEDMAN, J.S.C.

[22] By letter dated October 17, 2019 (NYSCEF Doc. No. 640), counsel (Reid Collins & Tsai LLP) for Highland Capital, the Fund Counterparties and other Highland defendants, advised the court of Highland Capital's bankruptcy filing, and represented that the automatic stay does not preclude decision of the causes of action against the Fund Counterparties or the counterclaim by Highland Capital. This letter sought to reserve defendants' position on the effect of the bankruptcy filing on subsequent proceedings in this action.

THE COURT: Good afternoon. Please be seated.

First I wanted to acknowledge, we have an honored guest with us today. We have the Honorable Essam Yahyaoui, who is a judge from Tunisia. He presides over the commercial chamber of Tunisia's First Instance Court. So he's here to observe with his colleagues.

Welcome, sir.

All right. I'm going to start with the motion to compel, and then we'll move on to the motion for commission. And then there may be questions, and maybe take a break and regroup and we can move on with the other motions.

I'm going to grant Daugherty's motion to compel in part. For simplicity, I'm going to refer to Abrams & Bayliss as A&B. And I see four categories of documents at issue here. The first is regarding the initiation, negotiation, and establishment of A&B as Highland's escrow agent. The second is regarding A&B's legal work during the pendency of the Texas action to determine whether and how Daugherty might access the escrowed assets. The third is A&B's work responding to the Texas subpoena. And the fourth is documents regarding A&B's resignation as Highland's escrow agent.

I grant the motion to compel as to Categories 1, 2, and 4 for one of two reasons.

The first reason is unfortunately my in camera review confirmed Daugherty's fear that Highland is improperly withholding documents in Categories 1 and 4 illustrating A&B's service and resignation as escrow agent, which are nonprivileged materials.

In a hearing on September 18, 2018, concerning an earlier subpoena, Vice Chancellor Glasscock stated that "... information regarding the actions of Abrams & Bayliss in connection with its operation of the escrow as agents of Highland, HERA, those documents, that information is relevant, and it doesn't appear to me to be generally privileged." That's a quote from the transcript.

Highland has been adamant that it was only withholding documents that implicated its role as legal counsel, and not in its role as escrow agent. For example, on page 28 of the transcript from the April 12th argument, Highland's counsel stated that, "We do not assert any privilege based solely on Abrams & Bayliss's roles as escrow agents. It's purely because they have the dual roles both as escrow agents and also legal counsel, that when they were in the capacity of legal counsel, those communications were privileged."

At that argument, I requested the documents and stated I would review them in camera. I expressed my frustration that I had already given Highland multiple chances, and invited it to redo its privilege log for a final time.

In reviewing the documents, I concluded that more than 70 documents that were withheld based on claims of privilege or work product protection were improperly withheld. Those documents were Privilege Log No. 1 through 25, 27 through 29, 35, 36, 41, 54, 56, 62, 85 through 87, and 336 through 372.

This represents nearly 20 percent of the 372 documents in the log. But even that doesn't tell the full story, because more than 200 of the listed documents were simply attachments to e-mails collecting documents in response to the Texas subpoena. Excluding those, more than 50 percent of the documents listed were improperly withheld as privileged.

Documents regarding A&B's nonlegal work and resignation as escrow agent are not privileged or work product because when A&B agreed to be an escrow agent, it stepped into a nonlegal role despite its status as a law firm.

The cases are clear on that point. Northeast Credit Union v. CUMIS: "It is well understood ... that the services of an escrow agent, even when that escrow agent is an attorney, are not legal services." CCS Associates v. Altman: "[C]ourts have specifically held that an attorney in the role of escrow agent does not transform communications pertaining to the administration of the escrow account into privileged documents." The first case is from the District of New Hampshire, and the second one is from the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

These non-Delaware decisions more specifically enunciate a principle common in our own law. Including an attorney, or having an attorney perform nonlegal work, does not attach the privilege to the communications or the work. That is because "... the attorney-client privilege protects legal advice only, [and] not business or personal advice."

That's a quote from MPEG v. Dell from this court in 2013.

And as Vice Chancellor Laster said in the Facebook Class C Reclassification litigation, "Making the lawyer the point person creates a pretext for invoking the attorney-client privilege, but it is only a pretext." That's from his December 12th, 2016 order in Case No. 12286-VCL.

Categories 1 and 4 reflect communications between A&B and Highland concerning the start of the escrow relationship, or A&B resigning as escrow agent. To be sure, there were legal ramifications and issues regarding the work A&B was doing in setting up and then ending the escrow relationship. But any legal component of A&B's escrow-related work was secondary to the role as escrow agent. A&B was a contractual counterparty with Highland under the escrow agreement, and each had obligations under that agreement.

A&B did perform legal work on the escrow issue. For example, A&B attorneys analyzed what document 351 on the log calls the "HERA Strategy." But that legal advice was not for the benefit of Highland, who was A&B's contractual counterparty. A&B could potentially claim that its attorneys were providing legal services to A&B as escrow agent. But that is not what is before me; A&B has claimed no privilege. The only issue is whether Highland can claim a privilege and withhold the communications containing A&B's legal analysis regarding its service as escrow agent.

I think an example here might be helpful. If Highland had retained a bank or other repository to act as escrow agent rather than a law firm, the result would be more clear. If the employees of that non-law firm escrow agent communicated internally about the relationship or the contract, it would not be privileged.

If those employees received legal advice from attorneys about how to structure the escrow, what the terms of the escrow agreement meant, or how it could fulfill Highland's request to unwind the escrow and transfer the assets back, Highland could not claim that the in-house or outside counsel retained by the escrow agent was providing legal advice for Highland's benefit. It would be much clearer that the attorneys were providing legal advice to, and for the benefit of, the escrow agent, not its contractual counterparty, Highland.

The facts here are more muddied because there are only lawyers involved because Highland selected a law firm, that otherwise represented Highland, to act as escrow agent. But the result should be the same. A&B's privilege over its in-house advice regarding its conduct under the escrow agreement does not belong to Highland just because A&B is itself Highland's attorney.

The next question is one of remedy for improperly withholding so many of the documents as privileged. Waiver "... has been characterized as a 'harsh result' typically only justified 'in cases of the most egregious conduct by the party claiming the privilege.'" That's from TCV v. TradingScreen.

"If a party falls substantially short of the well-established requirements, then waiver is an appropriate consequence that helps dissuade parties from engaging in dilatory tactics." That's from Mechel Bluestone v. James C. Justice Companies.

Daugherty has been dogged in his pursuit of these documents, and Highland was just as resolute in refusing to produce them. Vice Chancellor Glasscock said last September these types of documents are not privileged. I gave Highland multiple opportunities to address this. Because Highland stuck by its position and continued to assert such a large percentage of improper privilege assertions while claiming it was producing documents concerning A&B's role as escrow agent, any privilege related to that topic is waived, and a full waiver of Highland's privilege could be an appropriate consequence.

But I am reluctant to go that far because Categories 2 and 3 were properly withheld and logged adequately. Category 2 relates to a memorandum A&B prepared analyzing avenues available for Daugherty to pursue the escrowed assets. This work started in February 2014. Category 3 relates to efforts to collect documents in response to the subpoena for the Texas case. I conclude Highland's unjustified withholding of other documents related to the escrow was not so egregious as to waive any privilege over these two sets of documents.

This brings me to the crime-fraud exception. If Categories 1 and 4 were privileged, I would conclude that the crime-fraud exception applies and so A&B should produce those documents regardless. I reach the same conclusion for Category 2, the subset of documents related to A&B's 2014 memorandum that were privileged and properly logged.

Rule of Evidence 502(d)(1) says that "There is no privilege ... If the services of the lawyer were sought or obtained to enable or aid anyone to commit or plan to commit what the client knew or reasonably should have known to be a crime or fraud."

To fall within this exception, "... a mere allegation of fraud is not sufficient; there must be a prima facie showing that a reasonable basis exists to believe a fraud has been perpetrated or attempted." That's from Princeton Insurance Company v. Vergano. That case also explains that "... when a client seeks out an attorney for the purpose of obtaining advice that will aid the client in carrying out a crime or a fraudulent scheme, the client has abused the attorney-client relationship and stripped that relationship of its confidential status."

The client must intend the communications to be used as a bases for the fraud. "The advice must advance, or the client must intend the advice to advance the client's ... fraudulent purpose." That's from Buttonwood Tree Partners v. R.L. Polk.

As Chief Justice Strine wrote while Vice Chancellor in Princeton Insurance v. Vergano, "The quintessential circumstance [when this exception applies] is when the client obtains the advice of the lawyer in order to help shape a future course of criminal or fraudulent activity. This is the classic situation when the privilege gives way, as the societal purpose of the confidential relationship has been entirely subverted, with the client seeking the expertise of someone learned in the law not so as to comply with the law or mitigate legitimately the consequences of his prior behavior, but to craft a course of future unlawful behavior in the most insidiously effective manner."

Here, there is a reasonable basis to believe a fraud has been perpetrated. Daugherty's claim for fraudulent conveyance survived a motion to dismiss, and I will refer the parties to Vice Chancellor Glasscock's January 16, 2018 opinion on that point.

The question is whether Highland sought the services of attorneys to enable or aid it in furtherance of that fraud. I believe there is a reasonable basis to believe that as well. Highland's attorney at Andrews Kurth contacted A&B almost immediately after the Texas judgment became final and nonappealable. That's at Exhibit K.

Highland claims A&B then provided it legal advice interpreting the escrow agreement, and A&B resigned as escrow agent intending to cause, and in fact causing, the assets to return to Highland/HERA. That is the transfer that Daugherty claims was fraudulent.

This was not the first legal work A&B performed in pursuit of keeping the escrowed assets from Daugherty. Starting in February 2014, it analyzed Daugherty's ability to get at the assets while the appeal was pending. Because that appears to be the beginning of the efforts that culminated in the allegedly fraudulent acts, the crime-fraud exception strips the privilege from these documents.

Daugherty has made a prima facie showing that a reasonable basis exists to believe that a fraud has been perpetrated, and that Highland sought A&B to serve as escrow agent and to provide legal analysis in furtherance of that fraud; specifically, to protect the escrowed assets from Daugherty while the Texas case was pending, and then to transfer them back to Highland after the Texas verdict was finalized. I conclude any privilege Highland claims over A&B's legal advice regarding the escrow arrangement and A&B's resignation has been stripped under the crime-fraud exception.

I want to be clear on what I am not saying. I am not saying that a fraud claim merely surviving a motion to dismiss permits the supposed victim to invade the defendant's privilege for any legal advice the defendant received in regards to the underlying transaction or act. This is a unique case in which it presently appears that the law firm that provided the legal advice, one, was a contractual counterparty to the defendant in the very contract under which the fraudulent transfer was allegedly made; two, provided legal advice interpreting that agreement and charting the course for the transfer; and, three, implemented its own advice to effectuate the transfer.

On these allegations, which are supported by the documents I have reviewed, it appears the defendant sought the firm's legal advice to further the alleged fraud based on the terms of the contract to which the defendant and the firm were parties. Based on these uncommon facts, the crime-fraud exception applies here.

Accordingly, the privilege is either nonexistent or waived as I just described for Categories 1, 2, 4; in other words, all documents regarding A&B's service as escrow agent. The crime-fraud exception also applies to documents in these categories designated as work product, under Playtex v. Columbia out of the Superior Court.

I find that Category 3, regarding the Texas subpoena, was properly logged as privileged, and that the crime-fraud exception does not reach those documents. Daugherty has not alleged that the subpoena response was in furtherance of the fraud. Category 3 comprises the families associated with lines 91 through 327, which are the parent e-mails attaching documents collected in response to a subpoena.

Mr. Katz, is any of that unclear?

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor. It's clear.

THE COURT: Mr. Uebler, any questions?

MR. UEBLER: No questions, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you.

We'll turn to the motion for commissions.

Daugherty seeks commissions to take the depositions of James C. Bookhout and Marc D. Katz, both of DLA Piper. I will refer to Mr. Bookhout and Mr. Katz collectively as "the requested deponents." Both requested deponents represented Highland in its dispute with Daugherty in Texas, beginning in 2012, and Mr. Katz and his colleagues at DLA represent Highland in this action as well. Daugherty seeks fact testimony from the requested deponents on five topics, all pertaining to the events surrounding the escrow as alleged in Daugherty's operative complaint.

The discovery Daugherty seeks is clearly within the bounds of Court of Chancery Rule 26. And, based on the privilege log Highland produced for the escrow-related documents, the requested deponents have personal knowledge of at least some of the escrow events.

The parties disagree on the threshold standard for evaluating whether counsel can be deposed. Highland contends this court has adopted the Shelton test, while Daugherty points to a series of standards from Rainbow Navigation, Sealy Mattress, Kaplan & Wyatt, and Dart.

I note that in a transcript ruling from 2018 in LendUS, LLC v. Goede, Vice Chancellor Glasscock considered in the first instance whether it was necessary to gather the evidence sought from counsel, given the risk of disqualification. I agree this is a threshold consideration present in all the cases the parties have cited. And I conclude, like Vice Chancellor Glasscock did in LendUS, that Daugherty has not made a sufficient showing that he needs to depose Mr. Bookhout and Mr. Katz at this juncture.

As I just explained in my ruling on Daugherty's motion to compel, Daugherty will receive A&B's documents regarding the escrow. Daugherty can also depose the escrow agents. He can depose the Highland principals who were involved. And I do not see that any of this has happened yet. He should pursue those avenues before pursuing one that jeopardizes Highland's choice of counsel. His motions for commission for the proposed deponents are denied without prejudice.

I am mindful that trial is scheduled for September, and that -- if Daugherty renews his motions after taking the rest of the fact discovery -- the risk of disqualification carries more prejudice to Highland the closer we get to trial. I also note that the discovery cutoff in this case is June 28, 2019. I am, therefore, interspersing an intermediate discovery cutoff.

Escrow discovery, including depositions of fact witnesses other than the requested deponents, must be complete by June 14th, 2019, and Daugherty must make any renewed motion for commission by June 17, 2019, with briefing on that motion to be expedited.

The burden this timeframe places on both parties I think is appropriate in light of the requested deponents' apparent knowledge of significant aspects of Daugherty's allegations, and in light of the desire to protect Highland's choice of counsel. Any renewed motion by Daugherty must demonstrate what gaps in the record he needs to fill, and why he believes the requested deponents can fill those gaps.

Mr. Uebler, is any of that unclear?

MR. UEBLER: Your Honor, nothing is unclear about that ruling, but I do have a question about the escrow agent depositions. Can the parties assume that the ruling that the Court has made with respect to the documents will also apply to deposition testimony? in other words, categories that may be subject to privilege such as the subpoena response, but all other escrow-related categories would presumably be fair game and not subject to privilege in a deposition?

THE COURT: That's correct, at least as to A&B. I note that we haven't really tested the boundaries of where my ruling might go with regard to DLA. And I think that's probably another conversation we would need to have.

MR. UEBLER: Understood. Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Mr. Katz, is any of that unclear?

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor. That's clear.

THE COURT: I'll give you-all maybe ten minutes to kind of regroup a little bit, and then I'll hear the motion for status quo order first.

We're in recess.

(Recess taken from 1:53 p.m. until 2:00 p.m.)

THE COURT: Mr. Uebler?

MR. UEBLER: Your Honor, my colleague, Mr. Christensen, is going to argue the status quo motion. But I'd just like to point out, we had an issue with our File & Serve converting Word documents to pdf, and it would drop the occasional citation in footnotes. I don't know if it's our system or theirs. But, in any event, we've brought revised copies of our papers with all the citations for the Court.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. UEBLER: You're welcome.

MR. CHRISTENSEN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Joseph Christensen from McCollom D'Emilio for the plaintiff, Pat Daugherty.

I just want to start very briefly with how we got here. Your Honor is familiar with the facts, so I won't go over that in too much detail. But I do want to highlight some of the additional points that we included in our briefing related to what Highland was saying about these assets during the Texas action.

So Thomas Surgent, during the Texas action, he was the chief compliance officer of Highland. During the Texas action, he testified that the assets listed in the escrow agreement were being held for Pat's benefit for his interest in HERA. These are all from Exhibit V. That one is at page 15 of 53.

Jim Dondero, the head of Highland, testified that Pat's share of all the assets, including the cash, is in escrow. He also testified that Pat's pro rata share of all the assets, including the cash, are all sitting in escrow. There's been nothing deducted or removed from Pat's account. And he also said that the escrow agreement was to protect Pat Daugherty.

The point of all these statements was to convince everybody who would listen that these assets were being held for Pat Daugherty, and that if he prevailed in the Texas action, he would obtain those assets. And we haven't done anything with them. We haven't offset any legal expenses, which is also noted in our reply brief.

Coupled with the statements that Pat continued to hold the HERA units, this was a clear expression that Highland was trying to convince people that they intended to hold onto these assets but give them to Pat if he prevailed in the Texas action.

In HERA's closing argument its counsel said, "If Pat Daugherty happens to prevail in his lawsuit against Lane, Patrick and HERA you heard Jim Dondero testify he gets his interest, which is currently escrowed in the third-party escrow account, all of it."

And the jury clearly believed that the escrow meant to preserve Daugherty's interest. One of the questions the jury sent back to the judge in the Texas action referred to his -- that is Pat's -- HERA units currently in escrow. That's the third to the last page in Exhibit U.

The defendants now say, "Well, sure, Pat continued to be an owner of HERA, but there was never anything in HERA, at least during the Texas action and before the Texas action." Which reminds me of a scene from my life at a movie theater with my two sons, where the younger one was complaining that his brother wouldn't give him the box of candy. He asked me to intervene, and I told him to give him the box of candy, at which point the older brother emptied the candy into his popcorn and gave him the empty box.

That's exactly what happened here. When they told everyone they were holding assets for Pat's benefit, they would now have you believe that what they really meant was that he was just entitled to an empty box, and they had no intention -- and Pat should have known that they never had any intention of ever letting him have them.

There are two possibilities to explain the contrast between what they said during the Texas action and what they're saying now. One is that they knew at the time that they were never going to give them back. The other is that they believed at the time and were sincere in saying that they would give them back, but they later changed their mind.

Under either of those circumstances, Daugherty prevails on at least one of his claims. If they changed their mind but initially intended it, his promissory estoppel claim is very strong. If they never intended from the beginning to give them to him, then his fraud and unjust enrichment claims are equally strong. The status quo order should be entered to make sure that they can't do either of those things this time.

I think that's all the background we need, except for a clarification on what Daugherty is seeking. He is seeking those assets. His relief -- Your Honor will note that we did not include in our briefing any discussion of our claims for indemnification. Our indemnification claim is effectively a monetary relief sort of claim. But we did discuss promissory estoppel, unjust enrichment, and fraudulent transfer. Each one of those theories includes potential relief divesting those assets from whoever holds them, which brings me to the next point, which is that we do not know where these assets are.

We have asked the defendants where these assets are; were they ever transferred after December 2016. They told us they would not provide any information on those requests. And that's at our Exhibit L, Request No. 8 and 11, and Exhibit W, our Request No. 34 and 37.

THE COURT: I'm certainly not inviting more or different motions. But isn't the remedy for that a motion to compel instead of a motion for a status quo order?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: It would be. And we are not seeking through this status quo order effectively a back door to answering these requests for documents and interrogatories. But the fact that they will not tell us where these assets are is consistent with the prior behavior in the Texas action and gives us a lot of pause about waiting until the end of this trial.

So we started out this case with -- I guess I should first turn to the defendants' argument that the Court doesn't have power to enter this status quo order. Clearly it does. The kind of relief that we're seeking is in aid of the ultimate relief that we are seeking. Because we are trying to obtain or move particular assets, we are seeking the status quo order to make sure those assets are still available for the court to issue an effective ruling at the end of this case.

THE COURT: And how do you get around the Hillsboro and HEM cases that discourage intermediate injunctive relief for the purpose of preserving assets?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: Well, I think generally the cases are referring to when you're seeking monetary relief. And that's not what we're doing in this case. And I think the history is probably the most important point in this situation.

One simply cannot ignore that the very assets and the very parties in this litigation -- the reason we're here is because we were chasing after these assets that we believe we obtained the right to in the previous action. So it's a unique situation. None of the cases involve the same parties and the same assets.

And the cases -- even the cases that have history as a basis for granting the status quo order, none of them have this kind of sort of clear evidence that there was a fraud and moving of assets to defeat a judgment in an earlier iteration of the dispute between the parties.

THE COURT: And how does that sort of long history or long series of allegations of fraud and hiding assets, how does that square up with the requirement that the harm to be prevented by the status quo order be imminent?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: The imminence, Your Honor, to be frank, is probably the most difficult aspect of our situation to square with the law. Because -- in part because they haven't told us whether things have been transferred, where things are, we cannot give Your Honor very many facts about some imminent action that is going to take place.

But at the same time, we -- again, we started as a frog in a pot at a very high temperature having come out of the experience in Texas. Then adding to that was the fact that they will not tell us where these assets are. They will not tell us whether they are currently in a solvent entity or not. They will not really just come out and say whether those assets are still in Highland or not. There's a suggestion in their brief that can be read as a representation that they are in the Highland and never have left, but they also make the argument in their brief that the assets never went over to Abrams & Bayliss; that during the whole time that Abrams & Bayliss was holding the assets, that really Highland held the assets, retained legal title, and Abrams & Bayliss was simply holding onto them in trust. We don't know if something like that is happening in this case either.

On top of that, we had -- and what spurred us to action was the affidavit of Highland saying that they did not have current assets to satisfy the judgment in the Crusader Redeemer action. So that's on the front end of that judgment. We, at this point, don't know what Highland is going to look like from a solvency standpoint on the back end of that after those assets have gone out the door, and so at some point we have to act. We need to act before the end of this case.

We didn't believe that we had enough imminence at the beginning of this case that we would get a status quo order or a preliminary injunction. But when they filed that affidavit saying that in a cash flow basis they were insolvent for purposes of satisfying a judgment, against the backdrop of all the history, it starts to look like we're doing a replay of what happened in Texas.

Your Honor referred to, I think, a memo from Abrams & Bayliss talking about the HERA strategy. And what we're afraid of is that there is a HERA Strategy Version 2 that we do not know about right now and they just won't tell us. So at some point, in order to avoid them doing the same thing again, we have to act. We can't, unfortunately, identify when they're going to do that in the same clean kind of way that one often can in a status quo or preliminary injunction case. But the danger, I would submit, is just as high as in those cases.

I've talked some about the history. And the defendants do talk about three of the cases that we talked about regarding the history. They address the Crusader Redeemer action that Your Honor is familiar with, the UBS litigation, and the Acis. The ones that they don't mention are Trussway, for example.

Trussway, in this court under Vice Chancellor Glasscock, he actually already found that the kind of history that one would have to establish to obtain a status quo order was found with respect to these principals. He said he took into account the "... prior history of the controllers of the entities in examining equitable matters that come before us." And true to the way he is, he said, "... I would just as soon not list all the reasons I have that make me suspicious that a remedy will not be available here ...." "But I think it suffices to say that I have experience with other cases involving the principals here." And he went on. That's from page 40 of Exhibit S, which is the transcript in the Trussway action.

On the next page he said that, "... given ... some of the factors that I've mentioned, including the Acis bankruptcy and my other experiences with the principals here ... there is a reasonable probability that without some action, any victory will be a Pyrrhic victory."

THE COURT: It sounds like what you're suggesting is that given the track record of Highland in this action and in other actions, that you're suggesting that the imminence requirements be dispensed with because of what's going on here.

MR. CHRISTENSEN: I don't think I would say that, Your Honor. I would say that given the caginess on discovery, we are not able to identify the moment of imminence. But we are, through the history, able to establish the same point as imminence.

Imminence is this -- the point of addressing imminence is that if you don't address this, it is going to happen, and it's going to happen very soon. We can't tell you that it's going to happen very soon, but we can tell you that there's every reason to believe that it will happen before the end of this trial.

THE COURT: But what about the -- I think many times when one is considering imminence, there's sort of a laches-esque element that comes into it. And this case was filed in 2017. So this "it" that we're discussing very well may have already happened.

And so I wonder what the justification is for sort of after the fact -- maybe, I don't know -- after the fact then seizing up Highland simply based on the way that things have played out in other cases.

MR. CHRISTENSEN: So I think I can explain why we didn't act earlier, and why it wouldn't have been justified to act earlier, and so why we shouldn't be subject to laches on this argument.

When we started, we had no reason to believe that those assets had gone anywhere other than Highland. Then the Acis bankruptcy discussed that Dondero was moving out tens of millions of dollars to his charitable foundation. That was another brick in the wall. Then we got the discovery responses that were not responsive.

And to be clear, we have not given up on that. We had a meet-and-confer as recently as this morning, and one on Friday of last week, in which we are trying to get these documents. It doesn't appear that we're going to have much success on our own. But we are absolutely pursuing that and have pursued those documents as vigorously as we pursued the Abrams &

Bayliss documents.

To mix the metaphors, the straw that broke the camel's back was the Crusader Redeemer action where Highland said: We cannot pay this judgment right now. We have more assets than liabilities, but we cannot pay this right now.

And it's also important to remember that it's not just large judgments that Highland has a history of not paying, and it's not only Daugherty's relatively small judgment that they refused to pay. But in the Acis bankruptcy, it was an $8 million claim at issue, and they made him go through -- or are still going through involuntary bankruptcy.

So I think we acted when it was prudent to act. And before that occurred, I don't think any member of this court would have been likely to give us relief without something to point to, a reason to believe that Highland wouldn't pay apart from the history.

THE COURT: And the reason is that affidavit in the Redeemer case stating that Highland doesn't have the liquid assets to pay the $175 million judgment? That's what you're interpreting to say that they will not pay or will somehow manage to avoid paying Mr. Daugherty's -- what is allegedly owed to him?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: We aren't sure about the damages, but effectively, yes. That Highland -- which is, we assume, the most solvent of any of the entities -- now has a cash flow solvency issue. And so at that point we felt we needed to act.

THE COURT: Understand.

MR. CHRISTENSEN: The other thing that I think Your Honor should consider, it doesn't fit exactly within the three factors of a status quo or a preliminary injunction standard; but I think Your Honor should also take into account that it may not be a question of whether or not Highland is able to satisfy the judgment, but whether it will, even if it is able.

THE COURT: That's what I'm wondering. That's the part that I'm wondering how that's being derived from the affidavit in the Redeemer case, if that's the precipitating factor. Am I understanding you to read that affidavit only to inform solvency and not intent?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: It is consistent with an intent to make people work for their judgments, but I mostly consider it separately. And what I'm really referring to, the short name for it is spite. It appears, if you look, not only at the previous action in Texas, but also the Josh Terry situation, that a major factor motivating whether or not Highland pays judgments is how Highland feels or how Jim Dondero feels about the people who are trying to collect that judgment.

And so you have the court in the bankruptcy case in Acis said that the expenditures were out of whack versus what's at stake. Or in the Credit Strategies Fund case -- which the defendants did not address -- the factual findings there refer to some notes from a call between those parties and Dondero. Those notes read, "Dondero directly threatens Concord and Brant personally. We are very good at being spiteful."

And so that spite doesn't -- it's not one of the factors normally considered on a status quo motion or a preliminary injunction. I do think, as a matter of equity, Your Honor ought to consider that. And I think it's consistent with, and maybe grows out of the kind of considerations that Vice Chancellor Glasscock was taking into account in the Trussway

I think I'll skip to likelihood of success on the merits. We do think the likelihood of success on the merits prong of this analysis is fairly straightforward. At a big-picture level, Daugherty had a claim on these assets, either directly or through HERA. He was entitled to that compensation, he earned it, and it was taken from him after he proved his entitlement not only to damages -- which he received in the amount of 2.6 million and has never seen, but also the underlying assets.

So for fraudulent transfer purposes, we think actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud based on the documents that we have seen so far is compelling evidence that there was actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud.

Your Honor only has to find that we have a reasonable probability of success on one of our claims. You do not have to decide that we have a reasonable probability of success on all of them. And that comes out of the Destra Targeted Income case.

But we also think our other claims are quite strong, the alternative bases under fraudulent transfer law. We do not believe that HERA got equivalent value, for example, in the transfer. Unjust enrichment, it's an equitable doctrine, so in some sense you back away and look at what really happened, what's the substance.

And again, what happened was Daugherty earned compensation, he proved his entitlement to it, and then it was taken from him. That enriched Highland; it impoverished Daugherty to the extent that he was entitled to it. There was obviously a connection between those two results.

And as far as their defense of justification, the evidence doesn't seem to show that. I take their justification argument to mean that they were justified in taking the money because of the legal expenses. But the bills that we have seen so far do not support that HERA was receiving the benefit of those legal expenses.

And just briefly on the promissory estoppel claim -- I'm not going to spend much time on that; you'll hear a lot about that in a minute. But I do want to refer to those quotations from the Texas trial as additional reasons that support our probability of success on the merits of that claim. They demonstrate that throughout the trial, the strategy appears to have been to convince the jury that Highland was the good guy because they were -- don't worry, they're going to hold on to the assets for Pat. Pat is going to get those assets if he proves his entitlement to them. But -- you know, so don't think we're bad for taking them. Tell us that we win now and we don't have to give them to him.

The narrowest way to grant the motion, I think, is based on probability of success of the fraudulent transfer claim for actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud. And Your Honor only needs to find that to issue the status quo order.

On the balance of equities, also seems very clear to us. On the one hand, our client would go through potentially another half a decade or decade of litigation if he has to chase these assets again. And it would be a real shame to have to do that twice. On the other hand, the defendants, the harm that they identify on their side is that it would lower the bar for future plaintiffs against Highland that are seeking monetary damages to obtain a status quo order. And on that point, I just have to point out, again, that it is not only monetary damages that we are seeking, but seeking to move the escrow assets.

The other harm that they identify is the harm to their reputation if they're required to freeze these assets for what I take them to perceive as a very small claim. But again, we're not only seeking monetary assets, so this is not just, as they characterize it, a $3 million claim but a claim on specific assets. And their history of paying small claims is not great. So we think the balance of equity also favors Daugherty.

Unless Your Honor has any other questions, that's all I have.

THE COURT: I don't. Not at this time. Thank you.

MR. REED: Good afternoon, Your Honor. John Reed from DLA Piper for the defendants.

First of all, I want to apologize for what happened at the last hearing. We were only into the case for like two days. I had no idea that the lawyer that was going to present was not going to be able to answer Your Honor's questions. I was not happy about that, probably much more unhappy than the Court was and the Court was very unhappy.

Mr. Katz is the lawyer most familiar with everything in this case. And he's here today to present the arguments and should be able to answer all of Your Honor's questions.

THE COURT: I appreciate your comment. Thank you.

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, may I approach?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. KATZ: Thank you for letting me be heard today.

And as Mr. Reed said, I echo his apologies for the last hearing. I apologize that I was not able to be here at that last hearing. But if Your Honor does have questions about -- I understand Your Honor's ruling, but if Your Honor does have questions about any of those matters, I'm happy to address those as well.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. KATZ: With respect to the status quo motion. Obviously, the Court is aware of the legal standard. I'm not going to go into that. I just want to address a few of the points that counsel addressed.

And I'd like to start with the irreparable harm element, which is one of the required elements. And counsel said a number of times that they're seeking the assets, not just monetary relief. And I presume that that argument is being proffered because they recognize, otherwise, the issue with irreparable harm component that they have to show.

And I note, just by way of background, is that the Texas award was not in favor of Mr. Daugherty vis-a-vis HERA. It was not for specific assets; it was a monetary award. And, moreover, Mr. Daugherty never had ownership of -- direct ownership of any assets in HERA. Mr. Daugherty was a shareholder in an LLC and the LLC owned some assets.

So if their lawsuit is now seeking recovery of specific assets as opposed to monetary relief, I note that there's a host of procedural and substantive issues with that which I think goes well to the likelihood of success on the merits.

But the point for us today, Your Honor, is that a monetary award would certainly be sufficient to recompense Mr. Daugherty if he were to prevail on any of his claims in this case. And there's no evidence -- and maybe more importantly, there's no evidence that's been offered to the Court in support of the status quo motion that would demonstrate otherwise. And when I say "demonstrate otherwise," demonstrate that there are assets that were in HERA that can't be valued, or some other basis to show some sort of irreparable harm. That issue is not even addressed.

We're -- this is, I think, very apparently a case that -- where there is no irreparable harm. And money can certainly compensate for any harm that Mr. Daugherty may be able to prove ultimately that he suffered. The only evidence on that issue, I think as Your Honor correctly pointed out, was the affidavit of Scott Ellington. And that affidavit says to the contrary. It says, "... the value of Highland's assets exceed[s] the amount of the ... Award."

There's absolutely no evidence in connection with the status quo motion that would show that there is irreparable harm or there is insolvency. In fact, what a good counsel wants to do is make allegations of what they believe is inappropriate conduct some by Highland, some by Highland's affiliates. And I note that the conduct that they've cited to in their motion are allegations taken from pleadings in other cases, as opposed to direct evidence of anything that has been done by Highland.

And most of it, again, is not directly Highland allegations to any extent.

There is -- and then also as Your Honor appropriately, I believe, questioned counsel about, there's no evidence of anything imminent on the horizon that might give rise to any potential concern that would support the status quo order. And what they're seeking is really, truly an extraordinary remedy. And I don't believe that they've pointed to any concrete basis which they can meet the high standard that they need to show to justify a status quo order.

THE COURT: How do you justify the situation here from the one in Trussway?

MR. KATZ: Well, I guess, Your Honor, in two ways. One, in Trussway, there's allegations of specific conduct. Where here, we've got -- there's no allegations of any conduct that they believe is about to occur or evidence to support that.

THE COURT: I suspect they would say that's because you haven't answered their questions, but I don't know.

MR. KATZ: Well, but, Your Honor, I guess that it would also go back to the irreparable harm issue that, you know, there's nothing that -- even the allegations, that if they were able to provide some supportive allegations in this case as opposed to relying on allegations in other cases, there would still be -- they still have not shown that there's any risk of insolvency or potential irreparable harm.

And the Mitsubishi case that they cited in their brief I think is very on point. And on this issue where they had -- the Court noted that there was an allegation -- actually more than an allegation -- there actually was a prior incident that the Court had very serious concerns about but that on its own wasn't enough. It was -- the Court specifically found that the defendant in that case was insolvent. And they also found that there was a sale being negotiated, actual evidence of a sale, where the assets were going to be transferred. But we don't have that type of evidence with us in this case, Your Honor.

On the likelihood of success on the merits, Counsel spent a little bit of time on that issue. But I think it's important, Your Honor, again, that this is an extraordinary remedy they're seeking that has a heightened standard. And their motion on the likelihood of success on the merits simply has conclusory allegations, that they believe they're going to be able to prevail on the merits without addressing the specific elements and what evidence they've got to show the specific elements.

I note, you know, Counsel, in a number of pleadings has -- and I know Your Honor has noted this as well -- that Judge Glasscock had expressed his skepticism about when he was trying to determine what the nature of the escrow agreement was. And I note that Judge Glasscock, when he was doing that, also when he was talking about the formation of the escrow agreement, he was not talking about the resignation of Abrams & Bayliss or the -- what happened to the assets that formerly were held by HERA.

And, in fact, even Judge Glasscock indicated at that time that it may be that this fraudulent transfer claim was appropriate for summary judgment. I think his direct quote -- I know I wrote it down. His direct quote was that it wasn't prepared -- on page 79 and 80 of the transcript, that, "It may be ... perfectly fit ... for a motion for summary judgment. I'm just not convinced I can get rid of it on a motion to dismiss ...." That was his quote.

But I think that has been turned on its head a little bit to say that because he didn't understand the purpose of the escrow agreement and why that was formed, that somehow that shows that the fraudulent transfer claim is a sure-fire winner. In fact, I also note that Judge Glasscock dismissed the same fraudulent transfer claim against Mr. Dondero in the motion to dismiss.

So we think there's a number of problems with each of the claims. And I know we're going to get to the promissory estoppel claim. But I think a couple of issues with that is that we've got -- that claim is predicated on two statements that were by individuals that I don't believe were clear and unequivocal type of statements that could support a promissory estoppel claim. But moreover, they went to the representation of what was in the terms of the escrow agreement.

And I believe the law is fairly clear that if there is a contract provision that addresses the issue at hand, then you cannot have a promissory estoppel claim based on a representation about that contract claim. And Mr. Daugherty is absolutely seeking relief pursuant to the provisions in the escrow agreement. And that, in and of itself, would knock out his promissory estoppel claim.

And then -- and maybe the biggest problem -- I think he's got a number of problems with the promissory estoppel claim, but maybe the biggest one is reasonable reliance. Again, Mr. Daugherty hasn't even alleged that any of the statements were made for the purpose of causing Mr. Daugherty to reasonably -- to rely, and that it would be reasonable to expect him to do so.

But Mr. Daugherty's conduct -- he alleges that he would not have paid the judgment and that he would have sought to invalidate the escrow agreement at trial. And I think both of those are -- they're also, again, conclusory allegations that he's made without sufficient -- he has not made allegations in his complaint in this action sufficient to withstand, I believe, a motion to dismiss, and certainly not to show a likelihood of success on the merits for the status quo motion.

But what he's really said and what he explained in the briefing that he meant by that is that he would have sought offset. The problem that Mr. Daugherty has there is he -- offset is an affirmative defense.

THE COURT: I mean, we're all about to get into that very deeply, so ...

MR. KATZ: Okay, Your Honor. Thank you, I appreciate that.

But the likelihood of success on the merits on the promissory estoppel claim, I think, is very low. He's got similar issues on the unjust enrichment claim because of the representations and because of the equivalent value that HERA received in exchange for the assets.

On the fraudulent transfer claim, we don't believe that there was a transfer and there's been evidence of a transfer. And Counsel may respond to that and say, "Well, that's because Highland hasn't shown where the assets are." I'm anticipating that to be their response on that.

But I think Your Honor identified the point that that's not why you get a status quo motion. If they think there's evidence that they need, you know, there's a motion to compel. But for purposes of their motion, they have not produced any -- have not cited to any evidence, have not even made the allegation that -- other than a conclusory allegation -- that they have a likelihood to succeed on the merits.

And then finally, Your Honor, I think they have the same -- the last element, that with the harm to him, the harm to Mr. Daugherty would outweigh the harm to Highland. They simply have a conclusory allegation in their motion without providing any support for that, Your Honor.

And again, I just -- I'm happy to talk about that issue further, but I think on a motion of this seriousness with the heightened standard, that they need to show that conclusory allegations are not sufficient.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. CHRISTENSEN: Just briefly, Your Honor.

I suppose it's an interesting philosophy of language, a question of what counts as something being conclusory. But we have certainly done more than offer a conclusion. We have laid out a timeline of actual intent to delay or defraud with respect to the fraudulent transfer claim.

And just the items that are attached to our motion at Exhibit N, O, P, and Q, are a series of e-mails and events that I think anybody bringing a fraudulent transfer claim might characterize any one of them as a smoking gun. That is more than a conclusion. Our conclusion that this transfer was done with actual intent to defraud is based on very particular, very detailed, minute-by-minute documents. So it is certainly not conclusory. It's sort of conclusory to call that conclusory.

And it's important, also, to remember that when Vice Chancellor Glasscock suggested that potentially the fraudulent transfer claim could be fit for summary judgment disposition, he also said things like "Maybe there's a perfectly reasonable explanation for this." I think discovery has shown that there is not a perfectly reasonable explanation for this. And he did not have access to those documents, nor did we at the time that he made that statement.

As far as seeking this relief rather than simply monetary damages, that has been in our complaint since the beginning.

THE COURT: What is the -- can you address the point that the Texas award is monetary and not for the specific assets that are mentioned now in your briefing?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: Sure. I can.

I'll address that by saying, quoting again HERA's closing argument in the Texas trial. "... [I]f Pat Daugherty happens to prevail in his lawsuit against Lane, Patrick and HERA you heard Jim Dondero testify, he gets his interest, which is currently escrowed in the third-party escrow account, all of it."

We have made a claim for promissory estoppel that statements like that with codefendants show clear evidence of a promissory estoppel claim. That kind of statement shows how the statement was meant to be perceived, it shows how people did perceive it.

And I want to go to the jury question because we actually have -- unlike many cases where the idea of an objective standard, what would a reasonable person do, is sort of an academic question. But in this case we have a jury, which is sort of the quintessential reasonable person, writing back to the judge, "If we assign a dollar value to 'Fair Market Value of Daugherty's HERA units' in Question 18" -- that's the question that awarded him $2.6 million -- "is this in exchange for his HERA units currently in escrow, or in addition to them?" The judge instructed back, "Do not discuss or consider the effect your answers will have."

And then the final judgment made clear that it was not in exchange for those assets in escrow, that it was in addition to them. And there was appellate litigation about that issue, and it was settled that it was not a replacement for those units. But my point really is: We have very clear evidence that the Texas judgment and the people making the Texas judgment believed that those assets were being held in escrow for Pat Daugherty, which is exactly what the defendants tried to tell the jury to believe in their closing arguments.

So the fact that the Texas judgment was purely monetary is, A, not entirely true; and, B, it's not -- does not defeat the promises that they made throughout that trial, nor the fact that they transferred the assets once the judgment came through.

Let's see. On the promissory estoppel claim, it's just not what they said at trial, that Pat Daugherty had an interest in this LLC but, by the way, there's nothing in it. So if you award him anything, it's going to be completely valueless.

I want to respond just briefly to the point that these assets can be valued. And they can be. This court is very experienced in appraisals. But the easiest and most efficient way to deal with this, the value, is to give the assets themselves rather than require, effectively, a -- more than one appraisal inside of this case, because there are assets held by a private equity fund, and those assets include private companies. So we would have to have a sort of quasi-appraisal action contained inside of this, instead of doing what is much easier for the parties and the Court and just addressing those assets in an equitable manner and providing an equitable remedy.

The affidavit does say that they are solvent. I believe the affidavit was also given by the same person that the -- it was either the arbitration panel in Credit Strategies Fund or the Bankruptcy Court in Acis said that Isaac Levinson's statements were not credible and that his statements contradicted documentary evidence in a clear way.

In addition, they don't say by how much they are solvent. It could be the case, based on the face of that affidavit, that they are solvent by a million dollars. We simply don't know. And again, the question of solvency as it relates to irreparable harm in most of these cases is in a sort of antiseptic environment where it really is just a matter of: Does this party have sufficient assets?

And again, that's not the only question in this case. The question in this case is: If the Court does nothing, what is the risk that Highland will do exactly what it has done to these assets vis-a-vis this litigant before?

That's all I have, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

My intention is to hear the status quo order and the motion to dismiss and then take a break and see if I can get something together to share my thoughts. So let's move on to the motion to dismiss, unless folks want to take a short break.

MR. KATZ: I'm prepared to proceed, unless Counsel wants a break.

MR. UEBLER: I'm prepared to go forward.

THE COURT: All right. You may proceed.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

So I won't belabor the procedural background, because I know Your Honor is familiar with it, other than to say that after Judge Glasscock had dismissed a large number of Mr. Daugherty's claims, there was -- a promissory estoppel claim was then added. And we filed the motion to dismiss as to that claim, and that's the motion that we're here for today.

To prevail on a promissory estoppel claim, Mr. Daugherty has to allege a conceivable set of circumstances that would allow a showing that there was a promise that was made, that it was reasonable, that the expectation of the promisor was to induce the action of forbearance on the part of the promisee, that the promisee reasonably relied on the promise and took action to his detriment, and such promise is binding because injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise.

And I do want to -- I will be efficient, but I want to address each of these elements, Your Honor. And the -- I want to start with the reasonable reliance. As I mentioned a moment ago in connection with the status quo order, that Mr. Daugherty is really claiming that he would have sought offset had Mr. Dondero -- actually, I apologize, I want to take a quick step back.

Although Counsel's pointed to a closing argument of HERA, that I believe he attributed to Highland's counsel, I just want to be clear for the record that the statement that Counsel just read from the closing argument was for HERA, not for Highland, and there was separate counsel.

THE COURT: Hasn't there separately been an assertion of a common interest?

MR. KATZ: There was, Your Honor. But I just believe Counsel -- I'm sure it was inadvertent -- said "Highland." And I just want to be clear for the record that that statement was on behalf of HERA at closing argument.

But, more importantly, in the complaint they only allege two statements: a statement by Jim Dondero at trial and a statement by Mr. Klos in a declaration made several months after the final judgment. And so when Mr. Daugherty claims that his reasonable reliance was not seeking offset at the trial, the second statement can't be a basis of that; and the issue that Mr. Daugherty has, that there can't be a reasonably conceivable set of circumstances to show reasonable reliance for a couple of reasons.

One, the date that Mr. Daugherty filed his counterclaims with his claims, he had -- the LLC agreement with Highland's offset provision against the value of HERA was in that document. In fact, that was the basis of one of Mr. Daugherty's claims, that there was going to be -- there was the risk of this improper offset. He was challenging those provisions.

But yet he never pled offset as a defense. And it is a required affirmative defense under Texas law. And it is clear that when the final judgment was entered, that's res judicata, that issue was barred.

So Mr. Daugherty is saying that now had Jim Dondero not testified as he did on the stand, that he would have filed the declaratory judgment action to offset the judgment that Highland obtained against him from the judgment he obtained against HERA cannot serve as the basis for a promissory estoppel claim in this action because he would be barred as a matter of law.

THE COURT: Is that a little too technical? I mean, is the point a little more abstract than that, which is that had Dondero not testified as he did and assured everyone in the courtroom that the escrow was there for Daugherty's satisfaction down the road, that there are plenty of different options he could have taken? I mean, any sort of resistance or leverage or anything like that in regards to paying his own judgment, whether or not a technical offset was procedurally available to him, seems to be kind of reducing this a little bit too far down into the technicalities.

MR. KATZ: Well, I don't believe so, for two reasons. But the most important one being there's no reasonably conceivable set of circumstances where he could have taken action. And I'll address that momentarily.

But to the point, that was his response. That's what's in his pleading, both in his complaint and in response to the motion to dismiss. That's what he said he would have done. And that wasn't available to him.

And it wasn't just filing a declaratory judgment action for offset that he would have been barred from doing. He had two years to plead offset as a defense or to plead facts in the Texas action that arguably could have given rise to some reliance claim.

THE COURT: It seems odd to claim that there was no reliance because he didn't do something before the act in question happened.

MR. KATZ: Well, Your Honor, in fact, quite the opposite. As Mr. Daugherty said in his reply brief to the status quo motion -- and this is on page 2 and 3 of Daugherty's reply brief -- "In fact, during the trial and before Daugherty won his judgment, Defendants stressed that Daugherty was an owner of HERA units." Then he puts in a footnote, "At the same time, Defendants took the position that Daugherty held no economic interest in HERA. Accordingly, Daugherty did not take the purported admissions at face value and litigated for a judgment that he retained his HERA units."

And the significance of that, Your Honor -- it's the same significance as what I was trying to say a moment ago and I probably did not say it very clearly -- is from the moment he filed this claim, he was aware that, as he says here, that his value -- the value of his shares in HERA were valueless, as Highland was saying they were. Because that was one of his claims in the lawsuit. And he did not do anything to try to protect that vis-a-vis a judgment that Highland might get against him at any time during the trial.

So to think that, "Oh, well, he was about to do it" after two years, knowing everything that he knew, the LLC agreement allowing the offset, Highland taking the position that his units were valueless even though he was suing for it, that somehow he was going to try to offset his claim against HERA against Highland's claim against him, and he just didn't do it because Jim made the statement he did on the stand is not a reasonably credible position. It's not something that could have a -- or there could be a reasonably conceivable set of circumstances to show a reasonable and detrimental reliance.

And I think -- and, Your Honor, if you also look at the whole circumstances around Mr. Dondero's statement on the stand, was not -- in fact, the question -- it was by HERA's counsel that was questioning him at the time. And the question was: The assets that are being escrowed, or the money that's being escrowed right now, what happens to them? And I think it's significant for a couple of reasons.

One, right now they're talking about the day that the question was asked. They're not talking about a day in the future. And I think it's also significant that that was --

THE COURT: Maybe that was the question, but the answer was, "In the future they will go to him."

MR. KATZ: That's -- Your Honor, respectfully, that's not the way I read it. But I think the point is -- two points, Your Honor. One, that was a question by HERA's counsel; that was not a question by Daugherty's counsel.

If this was so important that Daugherty was going to forego seeking to invalidate the escrow agreement or trying to do trial amendment and get a new claim in, there was no action by his counsel to follow up and say: Let's be clear. Let's not talk about right now, let's talk about in the future. And again -- or ask about what about the resignation provisions, what about the termination provisions.

There's a whole host of conditional circumstances that show that Mr. Daugherty, purportedly relying on that statement to not try to bring a declaratory judgment action for offset or to seek to invalidate the escrow agreement would have been reasonable reliance. Again -- because, in fact, up until that point, Mr. Daugherty not only waited two years, he waited past the amended pleading deadlines. In the face of what he says, I'm being told by Highland that my assets are valueless. You know, and to the extent they say that I'm still owning HERA units, I never believed that there was anything there. But yet he didn't do anything about it before Mr. Dondero made the statement to HERA's counsel.

So, again, all of those, all of that goes to whether he could have -- show any circumstance where he could have reasonably relied.

Similarly, I think if you look -- and I bring in these things to show Your Honor what is not in the complaint or not in the response to the motion to dismiss. After the judgment, he claims that he was entitled to this offset, but yet he paid his full judgment. He could have just paid the difference in the judgment.

THE COURT: That's the point, is that he paid the whole judgment; right? Kind of chipperly wrote the check and thought it was all going to work out in the end.

MR. KATZ: Right. Well, without -- but with the whole circumstances and you look at his allegations, if his allegations are to be believed, it's not reasonable to believe that somebody who was going to do what he did but for Jim Dondero's statement would have, again, waited for two years, not filed -- not done -- taken the legal actions that he's now claiming he would have taken.

He did seek to amend his pleadings right before trial. These were not in there. That was, again, before these statements. Again, it's not credible to believe that he reasonably relied. And he hasn't alleged anything.

Again -- and so that was why I said initially to Your Honor's question, there are two points. One, when you look at the totality of what he didn't allege and what he didn't do, that there can be no set of circumstances where he reasonably relied, but then when you look at what he says he would have done, which is the offset. And he would have been legally barred from doing that because he waived it. Also because -- and the law is cited in our motion, that because Highland and HERA are separate entities, there wouldn't have been an offset between those judgments anyway.

So the two things he says that he would have done was seek to invalidate the escrow; which, again, he was aware of that escrow agreement before trial. He sought to amend his pleadings before trial but did not address that escrow agreement at all.

He has shown that he believes that his -- before Mr. Dondero made that statement, he didn't -- he thought his HERA units had been rendered valueless and that's how he was litigating the case. But he didn't try to "invalidate" the escrow agreement. He also doesn't explain or provide any allegation of what that means, to invalidate the escrow settlement.

He doesn't provide any legal theory or allegation of evidence to support a legal theory that would show that had he sought to invalidate the escrow agreement that the court would have allowed that amendment and it would have changed the outcome.

The next element I want to talk about was that a promise was made. And, again, he's identified two promises: one by David Klos, one by Jim Dondero. There's -- the one by Mr. Klos, again, was done several months after trial. The one by Mr. Dondero is obviously during trial. But both of those statements, when you look at them, are not unequivocal statements of -- there was no set of circumstances where Mr. Daugherty will not be paid this money on a final, nonappealable judgment. And -- which is what --

THE COURT: Why is that not exactly what Mr. Dondero said?

MR. KATZ: Well, Your Honor, Mr. Dondero was being asked a question about the language in the escrow agreement, that specific provision. And he was being asked based on circumstances right now. And perhaps if I give you an analogy. If I hire an employee and I'm paying the employee $50,000 a year and they're an at-will employee, and somebody asks me, "Well, how much does that employee make?" I'm not likely going to say, "Well, annually $50,000 a year, but I can terminate them at any time." Or "$50,000 a year, but less withholding," or other caveats.

And the question that was asked to Mr. Dondero is the -- right now the assets that are -- and I apologize, I don't -- I can grab the quotation. I don't have it right in front of me. But the key part was that it was predicated on right now, what happens right now if there's a final judgment.

So -- and, again, this is Mr. Dondero who's an individual defendant who is not being questioned as a representative of Highland. And what they want to do is take that statement and say this is an unequivocal statement that was binding Highland. And it just doesn't rise to that level under the legal standard.

And, you know -- but, moreover -- again, because what -- Mr. Dondero was reading the escrow agreement on the stand as a layman, but that's really more significantly the point, is that if the alleged promises are subject to termination by a contract -- I know this is in our pleading, the TrueBlue HRS Holding case -- promissory estoppel does not apply where a fully integrated and enforceable contract governs the promise at issue.

And that's the issue, is the contract is the contract; it means what it means. And the -- unless there -- I don't believe, Your Honor, that they even alleged that there is some promise, unequivocal promise, that Mr. Dondero or Mr. Klos made that was not subsumed by the escrow agreement. And that's really the basis of their claim here.

They also have to show that the claim is necessary to avoid injustice. And obviously, they have brought a fraudulent transfer claim and an unjust enrichment claim arising out of the same course of conduct, that they claim these representations are related to those claims. And I think the case law is fairly clear on this, that this is exactly the type of situation where a promissory estoppel claim is not necessary to avoid injustice.

THE COURT: But is the conclusion to be taken from your argument that nothing can ever be pled in the alternative to a promissory estoppel claim?

MR. KATZ: No, not at all. But I believe that you would have to have a set of circumstances where there wasn't a fully integrated enforceable contract, and that the underlying promises weren't about the interpretation of that contract.

And then, finally, Your Honor, I'm going to use the word "conclusory" again, that they -- well, actually not even conclusory, Your Honor. They didn't even plead that Highland intended to induce reliance or that Highland should have reasonably expected to induce reliance by Mr. Daugherty.

And I don't think that's necessarily an accident. I think that's because the statements that they're relying on were not statements that were made on behalf of Highland. They're individual statements. And I think that it would be fairly tortured to say otherwise.

So, Your Honor, again, for each of those reasons, we don't think that they have pled any reasonably conceivable set of circumstances that could support the promissory estoppel claim.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. UEBLER: Good afternoon again, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good afternoon.

MR. UEBLER: I'll start with the promise that was made. And before I do, I think I heard Mr. Katz talking about the standard to prevail on a claim. And I understand we're a little bit late in the game of this lawsuit. But this is a 12(b)(6) motion and the standard is reasonably conceivable.

So I just want to reset where we are on this motion and talk about the promise that was made, briefly. So what was the promise? The promise was Jim Dondero testifying at trial, under oath, that Mr. Daugherty's assets would be held in escrow and released to him through HERA if he won in Texas. I mean, it was as simple as that.

You may have been left with the impression from Mr. Katz's presentation that the line of questioning was about the terms of the escrow agreement. I can save all of us and just refer to the pages of the testimony, or I'd be glad to read the preceding three or four questions to set that up. But it was not interpreting the escrow agreement. And Mr. Katz didn't have the testimony on hand, but I do. And the question was:

"Question: Okay, so -- so if Mr. Daugherty somehow prevails in his lawsuit against Patrick Boyce and Lane Britian and HERA, what happens to Mr. Daugherty's interest that's being escrowed right now with a third-party escrow agent?

"Answer: They go to him.

"Question: I'm sorry?

"Answer: They go to him via to HERA and then to him."

Is that promise consistent with the escrow agreement? Yes. Is that promise separate and apart from the escrow agreement? Yes. Mr. Dondero wasn't there interpreting a contract. He was there making a promise to Daugherty and to the jury.

And just as we allege in paragraph 131 of our complaint, it was the reasonable expectation of Highland, when that promise was made, that it was going to be relied on.

THE COURT: Tell me more how the statement was separate and apart from the contract.

MR. UEBLER: The statement is separate and apart from the contract because I think -- Mr. Katz would be the first one to tell you that Mr. Daugherty was not a party to the escrow agreement. Mr. Daugherty, on the face of it, has no rights under that escrow agreement.

So this idea that Highland proposes that because there's a contract out there that also addresses the subject matter of the promise, the promisee is, therefore, precluded from relying on that promise, it just -- it doesn't hold water. They don't -- they didn't cite any cases.

We said it's not the law of Delaware and never should be. Highland shouldn't be allowed to contract with Abrams & Bayliss and then use that contract to say that a promise made to Daugherty that Daugherty seeks to enforce, that is -- you know, follows the terms of that contract but doesn't expressly give any rights to Daugherty, that's just -- that's not an argument that the Court should accept, in our view. So that's why I say it's separate from the contract.

And that also gets into the alternative claim argument, too. Are we entitled to bring promissory estoppel and a fraudulent transfer claim and an unjust enrichment claim? I think the Chrysler case in the Supreme Court settled that question a long time ago. And I think Rule 8 of this court does, too.

So, of course, there's overlap in what was promised and what's in the escrow. Although, I will point out, the escrow -- Mr. Katz said something like -- he referred to a host of conditional circumstances in the escrow agreement. And I think his point was paragraph 5 and paragraph 10 that they had relied on when Abrams & Bayliss resigned. Well, you won't find any of that in the promise that was made by Jim Dondero under oath to Pat Daugherty and the jury. So whatever conditional circumstances may be in that contract, they're not in that promise.

And the notion that Jim Dondero was testifying in his individual capacity, I think we debunked that in Exhibit A to our answering brief -- which was Highland's own witness list -- that provided an entire paragraph of what Mr. Dondero would be testifying about, including testimony in support of Highland's and Cornerstone's claims against Daugherty and the damages suffered and the third-party defendants' defenses to claims asserted against them.

So Jim Dondero is Highland. He is HERA. He's HERA ERA management. He controls them all. Mr. Katz pointed out that the closing argument by HERA's lawyer in Texas was just HERA's lawyer. Well, Jim Dondero controls HERA, just as he controls Highland. So I view that as a distinction without a difference.

But what that closing argument did was reaffirm the promise -- I thought I had it here. So what was said on closing argument by HERA's counsel, just after Jim Dondero made the promise, was "... if Pat Daugherty happens to prevail in his lawsuit against Lane, Patrick and HERA you heard Jim Dondero testify he gets his interest, which is currently escrowed in the third-party escrow account, all of it."

Then we had the other promise, which was that September -- September of 2014, the Klos affidavit. It restated the promise. This gets to the reasonableness of the reliance of Daugherty's promise -- the promise to Daugherty. He kept hearing this.

And the idea that Daugherty should have somehow foreseen in either the six weeks between when Highland sprung the escrow agreement on him before trial or when Dondero testified or when Klos submitted his affidavit -- by the way, as the senior finance of Highland Capital -- that Daugherty should have foreseen two years from now when he went to pay the judgment that Highland was going to break that promise.

So the idea that Daugherty should have done something between December 2013 and December of 2016, I think entirely misses the point of our claim. The reliance that we allege -- and it's paragraph 133 of our complaint -- is "In further reliance on the promises of Highland Capital and its agents, on December 14, 2016, nine days after Highland Capital secretly obtained the Escrow funds, Daugherty wired approximately $3.2 million in cash to Highland Capital in satisfaction of its award of attorneys' fees in the Texas Action."

That was the reliance. What could have been done, other than a cash payment, Daugherty could have just engaged in self-help. He could have paid the difference between the 2.6 and the 2.8 of the judgments. He could have not paid anything at all. He at least should have had the chance to go to court like the petitioner did in the Bonham Bank case that we cite from Texas to explain to a judge why, under these circumstances, even though there are three different litigants involved, these claims should be offset. But he didn't even get that chance because he relied on Highland's promises and he wired the full amount. They took away that chance from him.

We don't have to prove today whether he would have won on that setoff claim in Texas or anywhere else. We just have to prove that it's reasonably conceivable that he was deprived of that chance because he reasonably relied, to his detriment, on a promise that was made under oath and repeated.

In their opening brief, the defendants stated that "Injustice can (and should) be avoided through collection efforts in the Texas Action, which Daugherty has not even attempted to pursue, making this claim premature."

I just wanted to point out, this was in Exhibit B to Highland's own opening brief. They attached Mr. Daugherty's interrogatory responses. And if you look at Interrogatory 36 on page 25, Mr. Daugherty stated that "... apart from filing this action to collect his Texas judgment, he filed for a writ of execution in Texas on July 7, 2017, which was unsuccessful because Highland Capital claimed HERA had no assets. The return of service was dated September 26, 2017."

I think that's totally irrelevant to the questions before the Court, but I wanted to point out that Mr. Daugherty did, in fact, attempt some collection efforts in Texas and those were unsuccessful.

I'd also like to point out that in addition to being able to plead alternative claims, this is one of those cases where injustice can only be avoided through the enforcement of this promise, notwithstanding the other claims out there. The injustice to be avoided is allowing Highland Capital to walk away with both judgments from the Texas action. They got Daugherty's 3.2 million, and they got his HERA assets. And that's the injustice to be avoided.

When you and Mr. Katz were discussing this element, he referred to a fully integrated contract. Again, he would be the first to tell you, I'm sure, that Daugherty has no rights under that fully integrated contract. So the fact that there is a similar contract out there is not relevant to the analysis.

That's all I have, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. UEBLER: Thank you.

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, can I just address a couple points?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. KATZ: For clarity purposes, Counsel -- this is the second time they've read the statement from HERA's counsel during the closing argument. That was not part of the statements that were alleged to be part of the detrimental reliance in either the complaint or in the response to the motion to dismiss.

And I think that's significant, again, because Counsel is certainly correct that what they say is that Daugherty would not have paid the judgment against him by Highland. But their explanation of what that means is that he would have sought offset or sought to invalidate the escrow agreement, both of which could only have been done, been sought, during trial. I suspect that's why they are not relying on the statement that was made at closing argument where it would have been too late for them to make those allegations.

Highland had a judgment, a fully perfected final judgment, collectible judgment that Mr. Daugherty paid. And from the motion to dismiss perspective, claiming that he would have filed either or both of two things that were barred by res judicata does not provide the basis to avoid -- where there's a reasonably conceivable set of circumstances that those allegations could support to avoid a motion to dismiss.

And, again, we're really just talking about Jim Dondero's statement because, as Counsel recognized, the Klos statement was made, I believe, roughly five months after the -- four or five months after the final judgment was entered.

And then, finally, lastly, I just want to touch on the escrow agreement. Of course we recognize Mr. Daugherty is not a party to that agreement. But Mr. Daugherty's case is that he is asserting rights under that escrow agreement. He is certainly saying that there was a transfer under that agreement and that that agreement required the assets, the money being held pursuant to that escrow agreement, to go to HERA, which then Mr. Daugherty as the shareholder of HERA would have had rights to.

And, you know, we disagree with some of the underlying factual basis. We don't agree that there was a transfer. But I think counsel for Mr. Daugherty would certainly not say that there's not a fully enforceable promise in that escrow agreement that they are seeking relief under.

And that's -- and just as importantly, Mr. Dondero's statement was exclusively an interpretation of that promise. And that's why -- and I think that's exactly what the TrueBlue case is referring to. And there's a fully integrated contract that has the promise that legally and factually determines what the rights under that contract are.

And Mr. Dondero's interpretation of that contract -- even if it's the exact same as the contract or even if it's different than the contract -- doesn't change that the claim is pursuant to the contract and not for promissory estoppel.

THE COURT: What is your understanding of Mr. Daugherty's ability to sue to enforce the escrow agreement in a way that benefits him?

MR. KATZ: Well, he is a shareholder of HERA. And as a shareholder of HERA -- I mean, I'd have to think through all the res judicata, collateral estoppel, statute of limitations issues that all have come out about all the issues that have been litigated.

THE COURT: I just mean from the terms of the contract.

MR. KATZ: I don't believe that

Mr. Daugherty is a third-party beneficiary of the contract, if that's Your Honor's question. He's certainly not a direct party to the contract, but he is a shareholder of HERA. And their allegations are that Highland was contractually obligated to send money to HERA under that agreement.

I think there are potentially technical legal issues under that. That's, of course, not the claim that Mr. Daugherty has brought. And -- but if Mr. Daugherty had any rights, it would be through HERA.

THE COURT: So is it your understanding that the point of the doctrine that you're relying on, that there can't be both a contract and a claim for promissory estoppel, is that those rights substantially overlap?

MR. KATZ: I would suspect that's probably the policy reason behind those decisions.

THE COURT: So if Mr. Daugherty doesn't have contractual rights under the escrow agreement, why does that knock out his promissory estoppel claim?

MR. KATZ: Because it's the same -- because whatever rights he has under the contract, whether he has rights or not, are no different than any rights he would have vis-a-vis Mr. Dondero's interpretation of what that contract said, what that contractual language says.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. KATZ: I think that the policy is is not to create quasi-contractual claims when there is a contract, regardless of who's the party to the contract.

And, actually, I think it's even -- there's no wiggle room around this situation because it's not -- Mr. Dondero was -- I mean, I think the quote was, "They go to Mr. Daugherty through HERA" is the quote. He wasn't saying something -- there's not been an allegation, for example, that Mr. Dondero's statement or Mr. Klos' statement created a separate contract between Mr. Dondero or Mr. Daugherty.

I mean -- and that's not what -- I mean, there hasn't been an allegation that that's what they were saying -- that Mr. Dondero was saying that or Mr. Klos was saying that. The allegation is they were saying that's what the contract, the escrow agreement, means. And that's why you can't have a separate claim, because the contract means what it is and the contract determines the rights.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. UEBLER: May I, briefly?

THE COURT: Briefly.

MR. UEBLER: Just to be clear, Your Honor, we very much rely on the Klos statement as a separate promise on behalf of Highland in the affidavit. We think it also supports the reasonableness of the reliance on Mr. Dondero's promise on behalf of Highland. But we view the Klos affidavit as part of the promise generally.

With respect to the closing argument by HERA, we didn't use it sooner because we just -- actually, I have to give credit where credit is due -- my colleague, Mr. Christensen just found it. We didn't try the Texas case, so we did find it in the record.

And fortunately for us, Highland agrees on pages 13 and 14 of their own motion to dismiss that the Court can "[consider] additional materials from related litigation that were not attached to the complaint if the plaintiff relied on those materials in casting his complaint, as Daugherty has done with regard to the Texas Action."

The last paragraph on page 14 goes on to say, "To the extent the Court finds that the Texas Action materials are not already subject to consideration based on Daugherty's extensive reliance on them, Defendants respectfully request that the Court take judicial notice of the documents under Delaware Rule of Evidence 202(d)(2)."

So we submit that the Court certainly can consider the trial transcript from the Texas action as further support for the reasonableness of Mr. Daugherty's reliance.

And my final point with respect to the escrow agreement and the notion -- I think that what Mr. Katz said is that Daugherty, in his view, has no direct rights under that agreement. The only real direct relevance of the escrow agreement with respect to the promissory estoppel claim is that it's even more evidence of the reasonableness of Mr. Daugherty's reliance on the promise because it's consistent with that promise.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Anything to -- Mr. Katz, I'll give you the last word.

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor.

Just to address Counsel's last point about just finding the statement. You know, again, I think that the issue is what did Mr. Daugherty actually rely on. Their claim is that when he wired $3.2 million -- not what statements Counsel has found in the record recently that could be retroactively applied that way.

And Counsel's -- again, the complaint that is in front of Your Honor that has the allegations rely on the two statements and is very clear that -- it is explained in their briefing -- that the remedies -- that the detrimental reliance was forbearance from taking action in the Texas lawsuit.

So anything that occurred anytime after they could raise issues in a Texas lawsuit could not have been a basis for detrimental reliance.

THE COURT: Thank you.

I'm going to take a recess. It will be at least 20 minutes. So stretch your legs, do whatever. It'll probably be longer than that. But -- thanks for your patience, but it's faster this way in the short term.

So we are in recess.

(Recess taken from 3:35 p.m. until 4:18 p.m.)

THE COURT: Thank you for your patience.

I'm going to start with the motion for a status quo order. It is denied. We have some time constraints this afternoon, so I will cut to the chase. Daugherty has not established a threat of imminent irreparable harm as he must. It is clear that Daugherty is pursuing this relief now based on what happened in the Redeemer case. This complaint was filed in July 2017, and he did not seek the relief that he's now seeking until after the papers on the status quo order dispute were filed in the Redeemer case. And Daugherty cites Highland's submissions in that case in his brief.

I disagree with Daugherty's reading of the Redeemer papers as indicating that Highland is in "severe financial distress" and is "unable to satisfy" the arbitration judgment at issue there. And the facts are very different as between the two cases. Before going to arbitration, there were issues involving control over assets that led to Highland making representations to the Court in the Redeemer case. And in the more recent request for a status quo order related to confirming an arbitration judgment, there was no separate claim that this court needed to adjudicate, like Daugherty's fraudulent transfer claim here.

And, finally, the Redeemer parties ultimately stipulated to a status quo order. So I don't think that anything that this court did in entering the agreed-upon status quo order is helpful in deciding whether to issue one in this case.

Daugherty says that Highland has a pattern of avoiding judgments, but has given me no reason to think that Highland is going to do something between now and a post-trial opinion that would make it incapable of satisfying a judgment, nor is there anything in the Redeemer case that leads me to believe that.

Quite frankly, if Highland is as good at avoiding judgments as Daugherty claims, Highland would have already moved the assets. Daugherty, in his reply, touches on that point and raises concerns about whether the assets have already been transferred. He used a metaphor about the straw breaking the camel's back. I'm going to use a different ungulate. He's provided no reason to believe the horse is not already out of the barn or that the horse is going to imminently flee the barn.

So I fully appreciate that Daugherty says that this is what happened to him in Texas, and I've indicated before that I agree with Vice Chancellor Glasscock's sentiment that what happened here fails more than the smell test. But that doesn't mean that there is a sufficient imminent threat that it's going to happen here with Highland.

I also distinguish this case from Vice Chancellor Glasscock's entry of a status quo order in the Trussway matter, which admittedly was, in part, based on Highland's "prior history." In that ruling, Vice Chancellor Glasscock noted the unique appraisal remedy that was at issue there, and distinguished that property right -- which is meant to substitute for a stockholder's ability to insist on unanimity in a merger -- from recovery in a tort or contract case. Daugherty is seeking the more common sort of recovery here, so I do not find Trussway instructive.

So, in sum, because Daugherty's motion for a status quo order is based on a recent development that does not support a conclusion that Daugherty faces imminent irreparable harm, the motion for a status quo order is denied.

Mr. Christensen, do you have any questions about that?

MR. CHRISTENSEN: No, I do not.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything from DLA?

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Moving on to the motion to dismiss. Highland's motion to dismiss Count IX of the amended complaint is denied. Count IX is a claim for a promissory estoppel. And to state a claim for promissory estoppel, a plaintiff must plead four elements.

The first is that a promise was made. The second is that it was the reasonable expectation of the promisor to induce action or forbearance on the part of the promisee. The third is the promisee reasonably relied on the promise and took action to his detriment. The fourth is that the promise is binding because injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise. That's all from the Chrysler case out of the Supreme Court in 2003.

On Highland's motion to dismiss, I applied a reasonable conceivability standard of Rule 12(b)(6). Under that standard, I must accept all well-pleaded factual allegations as true, accept even vague allegations in the complaint as well-pleaded if they provide the defendant notice, draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff, and deny the motion unless the plaintiff could not recover under any reasonably conceivable set of circumstances susceptible of proof. That familiar standard is from Century Mortgage Company v. Morgan Stanley.

Applying this standard, plaintiff has adequately pled the four elements. First, Highland made promises through representations it and its agents made in the Texas action. Highland, through testimony, explained that Daugherty would receive the escrowed assets upon a judgment being finalized.

Daugherty cites testimony from James Dondero, Highland's cofounder and president. On direct examination, Dondero was asked what would happen to Daugherty's interest that was being held in escrow, and Dondero stated that it would go to Daugherty via HERA if he won. This testimony is cited in paragraphs 43 and 129 of the complaint.

Highland tries to distance itself from Dondero, but it cannot do so at this stage. Highland says Dondero was testifying in a personal capacity. But the witness list Highland filed in the Texas action shows that is not the case. That is Exhibit A to Daugherty's answering brief. Highland had no response to this in its reply brief, beyond reiterating its original argument that Dondero was not speaking on Highland's behalf.

Based on the allegations of the complaint, including Dondero's role, it is reasonably conceivable he was speaking on behalf of Highland.

Other support for the alleged promise comes from an affidavit attached as Exhibit I to the complaint from David Klos. Klos submitted the affidavit and stated he had "... personal knowledge of the facts stated in this affidavit as the Senior Manager of Finance for Highland Capital ..." and because he oversaw accounting relating to HERA. Klos reiterated in his affidavit what the escrow agreement says, and Dondero testified to, which is that after a final nonappealable judgment, A&B, as the escrow agent, would transfer the deposit assets to HERA.

Highland also tries to distance itself from Klos. And it cannot do so, as the document presented to the Texas court states Klos was providing the affidavit in his capacity as Highland's Senior Manager of Finance. At this stage, that is sufficient.

Together, these allegations are sufficient to establish that Highland made a promise that the assets would be held in escrow and released to Daugherty, via HERA, if Daugherty won in Texas.

Second, the reasonable expectation of Highland as the promisor was to induce action or forbearance on the part of Daugherty as promisee.

In briefing, Highland says the statements were not directed to Daugherty, "... but rather [to] the jury, the judge, legal counsel, the public, and so forth." That's a quote from page 20 of Highland's reply. It simply makes no sense to say that the statements were directed to everyone else involved in the legal proceeding -- indeed, in the world by virtue of including "the public" -- but not Daugherty, who had the greatest interest in that proceeding. It is reasonably conceivable the reasonable expectation of someone discussing the escrow agreement, as Highland did, would have been to induce action or forbearance by their adversary in the litigation.

Third, it is reasonably conceivable that Daugherty reasonably relied on the promise and took action to his detriment.

Daugherty could have pursued other strategies if the escrow was not in place. Daugherty paid a judgment in the same case to Highland, which he alleges was in the amount of $3.2 million. If Daugherty knew what would happen with the escrow, he could have fought tooth and nail for an offset of the judgment amounts.

Highland focuses on the availability of a triangular offset in this situation, asserting that even if HERA owed Daugherty money, Daugherty was legally unable to offset the judgment he owed Highland by what he was owed from HERA. I think that misses the point, which is that Daugherty forewent even trying to obtain the offset, and bringing the issue to the attention of the Texas court.

He could have argued for other provisions in the final judgment, but he didn't. He paid his judgment and expected HERA and Highland would do the same as set forth in the escrow agreement.

Other members of this court have adopted a "no-chumps policy," meaning that good guys should not feel like chumps for following the rules. Daugherty played the game straight, and alleges Highland and HERA didn't. It is at least reasonably conceivable that Daugherty pursued the strategy he did because of the promises Highland made during the course of the litigation.

And that reliance was reasonable. Highland says Daugherty should have expected the worst because the language of the escrow agreement allowed the escrow agent to resign at any time, and so it was never a sure thing that the assets would be available to Daugherty.

In its reply, Highland says there was never any promise "... that the Escrow Agreement would never be terminated or that the Deposit Assets would never be transferred back to Highland ...." That reflects a dim view of the world, the way adversaries should evaluate the representations and promises made during litigation, and how the people making those promises should conduct themselves. Daugherty has adequately pled it was reasonable for him to rely on the statements he's identified.

Fourth and finally, it is reasonably conceivable that the promise is binding because injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise.

Daugherty has made the point that Highland walked away from the Texas litigation with the benefit of both judgments. It received the assets supposedly held in escrow to satisfy the judgment for Daugherty, and it received payment from Daugherty to satisfy the judgment against him.

Black's Law Dictionary defines "injustice" as "an unjust state of affairs; unfairness." As myself and Vice Chancellor Glasscock have indicated, Daugherty's allegations raise serious concerns over the fairness of how things played out in Texas. It may be that the only way to avoid injustice is to enforce the promises.

It is not fatal to Daugherty that he has pled alternative theories of relief. Our Rule 8 allows it, and our Supreme Court has blessed doing so for promissory estoppel in the Chrysler v. Chaplake Holdings case. At the pleadings stage, those alternative theories of relief can go forward.

Highland also claims promissory estoppel is not needed to prevent injustice because the alleged promises are incorporated within the escrow agreement, an enforceable contract. But Daugherty is not a party or a third-party beneficiary, and so cannot sue under the contract's terms. For those reasons, the motion to dismiss is denied.

Mr. Katz, any questions?

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything from you, Mr. Uebler?

MR. UEBLER: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'd like to, then, talk about how we're going to get the summary judgment briefing done in time for trial and in time for me to have a minute to think about it.

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, we conferred -- my colleague conferred with Mr. Uebler this morning. I think we've worked out a schedule.

THE COURT: How long does that schedule leave me to think about it?

MR. UEBLER: Let me take a stab at this, Your Honor, and see if it makes any sense to you. So it's my understanding that the defendants are going to cross-move, or Highland -- it's a claim against Highland. Highland will cross-move for summary judgment, and we will receive an answering brief/opening brief by June 14th. We'll reply by June 28th. And then looks like July 17th will be the final brief.

And I'm sure I speak for all the parties when I say we have no intention of imposing a burden on the Court to resolve that motion prior to trial. I think -- at least my view, and Mr. Katz and Mr. Reed can chime in -- we don't necessarily need to resolve the summary judgment/indemnification claim before trial because there's really not that much, if any, issue of fact to try regarding indemnification.

I would propose that we resolve on the papers, when the Court's able to do so, the issue of entitlement. And then, to the extent there's an issue of allocation or reasonableness, we can get together and propose something similar to Vice Chancellor Laster's Fitracks opinion. That was an advancement case, but I would envision something similar here.

So we're working in parallel and not burdening anybody prior to trial on those issues.

THE COURT: Anything to add?

MR. KATZ: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. That works for me, then, especially with the logical conclusion that this can just kind of float in parallel to the real merits issues to be handled at trial.

Anything else that we need to discuss today while we're all together?

MR. KATZ: Not from our side.

THE COURT: We pretty much handled every aspect of the case today. Thank you, all, for your presentations, they were helpful. And we'll be in touch.

We're adjourned.

(Court adjourned at 4:33 p.m.)

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR DISPUTE RESOLUTION
International Arbitration Tribunal

REDEEMER COMMITTEE OF THE
HIGHLAND CRUSADER FUND,

Claimant,

v. Case No. 01-16-0002-6927

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,

Respondent.

PARTIAL FINAL AWARD

WE, THE UNDERSIGNED ARBITRATORS, having been designated in accordance with Section 9.03 of the Joint Plan of Distribution, and the Scheme of Arrangement, both entered into between the above-named parties and adopted in July 2011, and having been duly sworn, and having duly heard the proofs and allegations of the parties, do hereby, AWARD, as follows:

I. Introduction

A. The Parties

1. Claimant is a Committee of Redeemers in the Highland Crusader Fund (the "Committee"). Pursuant to the Joint Plan of Distribution of the Crusader Funds ("the Plan") and the Scheme of Arrangement between Highland Crusader Fund and its Scheme Creditors ("the Scheme")1, HC300, the Committee was elected from among the investors in the Crusader Fund to oversee the management of the Crusader Fund by Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Highland Capital). The Plan and the Scheme are the governing documents which contain the arbitration agreements giving rise to this arbitration. The Committee is represented by Terri Mascherin, Andrew Vail, and Shaun Van Horn of Jenner & Block LLP.

2. Respondent, or Highland, is an investment manager and, until July 2016, served as such for the Highland Crusader Funds ("Crusader Funds" or the "Funds") that were formed between 2000 and 2002. The Funds consisted of one "Onshore Fund" and two "Offshore Funds," and the capital that was raised through these entities was pooled into a "Master

[1] The Plan was implemented with respect to Highland Crusader Offshore Funds by a "Scheme of Arrangement" ("Scheme") sanctioned by the Supreme Court of Bermuda. The Scheme incorporates the Plan and, unless otherwise noted, the Plan and Scheme contain effectively identical provisions. Unless the context requires otherwise, we will refer primarily to the Plan.

Fund." The capital was invested primarily in "undervalued senior secured loans and other securities of financially troubled firms" among other asset types. HC-17, at HC-117.0010[2]. Highland is represented by Gary Cruciani, Travis DeArmand, Michael Fritz of McKool Smith, LLP.

B. The Arbitrators

1. The three arbitrators, whose appointment was formalized by the International Center for Dispute Resolution ("ICDR"), a division of the American Arbitration Association ("AAA"), were David M. Brodsky, Chair, John S. Martin, Jr., and Michael D. Young.

II. Background of the Dispute

A. The 2008 Financial Crisis

1. From 2000 until 2007, the Crusader Funds had double-digit annual returns, but in September and October 2008, as the financial markets in the United States began to fail, Highland Capital was flooded with redemption requests from Crusader Fund investors, as the Crusader Funds' assets lost significant value.

2. On October 15, 2008, Highland Capital placed the Crusader Funds in wind-down, "compulsorily redeeming" Crusader Fund's limited partnership interests. Highland Capital also declared that it would liquidate the remaining assets and distribute the proceeds to investors. However, disputes over the appropriate distribution of the assets arose between those investors who had voluntarily redeemed their interests earlier in 2008 but had not yet been paid their redemption amount ("Prior Redeemers") and those who were compulsorily redeemed in October 2008 ("Compulsory Redeemers") (collectively, the "Redeemers").

B. The Plan and Scheme

1. At about the same time, an investor raised allegations of misconduct by Highland Capital and filed a wind-up petition in the Supreme Court of Bermuda. In 2011, after several years of negotiations among the Prior Redeemers, Compulsory Redeemers, and Highland, the Plan and Scheme were adopted and became effective in August 2011. The adoption of the Scheme and Plan was to "enable the orderly management, sale, and distribution of the assets" by Highland and the right of the Redeemers Committee to oversee Highland's services. HC-300 at 300.017.

[2] There are three sets of exhibits that will be referred to herein, Joint Exhibits (referred to as JX- —), Redeemer Committee Exhibits (RC- —), and Highland Capital Exhibits (HC- __).

2. Central to the Scheme and Plan was the role of the Redeemer Committee, which was created so as to allow the investors in the Funds to have a greater level of influence over the affairs of Highland Capital than an ordinary creditors' committee would have in the liquidation of the Fund; that increased "level of influence" was particularly manifest in the Committee's ability to approve or disapprove of actions that Highland was contemplating taking, right of first refusal on other activities Highland wished to engage in, and the Committee's ability to terminate the services of Highland on 30 days' notice "with or without Cause." HC-300 at 300.016. Thus, the relationship between the Redeemer Committee and Highland, although grounded in contract, was designed to become one of mutual cooperation and confidence.

3. Pursuant to §2.04 of the Plan, a ten-person committee of Crusader Fund investors, composed of five representatives of the Prior Redeemers and five representatives of the Compulsory Redeemers, was created. HC-300, § 2.04. As part of the Plan and Scheme, Highland Capital continued to serve as the investment manager for the Crusader Funds. As part of its duties as investment manager, Highland Capital was to liquidate fund assets and distribute the proceeds to the Crusader Fund investors pursuant to an agreed 43-month distribution schedule. In addition, as an incentive to Highland in its liquidation of assets, the Scheme and Plan provided that the Deferred Fees would be paid to Highland if it completed the full liquidation.

4. It is not disputed that, between October 2011 and January 2013, Highland Capital distributed in excess of $1.2 billion to the Crusader Fund investors. It is also not disputed that the Crusader Funds were not completely liquidated when Highland paid itself the Deferred Fees in January and April 2016 and the Funds remain unliquidated as of the time of these hearings.

C. The Arbitration Agreement

1. Sections 2.09 and 9.03 set forth the terms and conditions by which these disputes are to be resolved in arbitration. Section 2.09 provides, in relevant part, that "in the event of a dispute between the Crusader Funds or the Redeemer Committee and HCMLP, ... the applicable representatives shall confer in god faith in an attempt to resolve the dispute...If the dispute cannot be resolved by mediation it will be referred to arbitration in accordance with Section 9.03."

2. Section 9.03 provides, in relevant part, that "Any dispute referred to in Section 2.09...shall be subject to and decided by arbitration administered by the American Arbitration Association in accordance with its Commercial Arbitration Rules, and judgment upon the award rendered by the arbitrator(s) may be entered in any court having jurisdiction thereof pursuant to applicable law. Arbitration shall be conducted in New York, New York."

D. Termination of Highland Capital and Ensuing Litigation

1. For reasons set forth below, disputes began to arise between the Redeemer Committee and Highland Capital, culminating in the termination of Highland Capital as investment manager by letter and notice dated July 5, 2016, for cause and without cause, with termination being effective on August 4, 2016, RC-318. Highland Capital was replaced as investment manager by Alvarez & Marsal CRT Management, LLC ("A&M"). JX-31.

2. On July 5, 2016, the Committee filed a Notice of Claim before the AAA, commencing an arbitration against Highland, RC-319, and also commenced litigation in Delaware Chancery Court, inter alia, to obtain a status quo order in aid of the arbitration. On July 8, 2016, a Vice Chancellor entered an oral status quo order in aid of this arbitration, pending the adjudication of the Committee's request for interim relief by an AAA arbitrator on an emergency basis pursuant to AAA Rule 38. On August 2, 2016, an Emergency Interim Order was entered by an Emergency Arbitrator appointed by the ICDR, which order replicated the oral status quo order entered in Delaware Chancery Court.

3. On July 21, 2016, Highland filed its Answering Statement, denying the claims and asserting affirmative defenses.

E. The Arbitration

1. This Tribunal was established as of October 31, 2016. The parties consented to the appointment of the Tribunal.

2. On October 14, 2016, Claimant filed an Amended Notice of Claim, seeking specific performance, injunctive relief, declaratory relief, money damages, and disgorgement arising out of the allegedly willful misconduct and violations of fiduciary and contractual duties by Highland Capital as investment manager of the Highland Crusader Fund. Claimant sought four species of relief: (a) an award requiring Highland Capital to provide to the Committee all information about the Fund and its assets as required by Section 2.05 of the Plan and Section 4.6 of the Scheme; (b) an award of money damages, including disgorgement, for Highland Capital's allegedly willful misconduct and breaches of its fiduciary and contractual duties, and for any unjust enrichment; (c) an injunction requiring Highland to return the so-called Deferred Fees and Distribution Fees to the Crusader Fund; and (d) declarations that the Consenting Compulsory Redeemers are entitled to payment of the Deferred Fee Account, and that Highland is not entitled to advancement of expenses and legal fees.

3. On December 14, 2016, Respondent filed a motion for partial summary adjudication, seeking dismissal of those claims seeking monetary damages, seeking relief as both breaches of contract and of fiduciary duties, and seeking relief barred by the applicable Statute of Limitations; by Order of March 1, 2017, we denied such motions without prejudice to their being renewed upon the development of a fuller record.

4. On February 16, 2017, Claimant filed a motion for partial summary adjudication, seeking an order compelling Highland to comply with its alleged contractual obligation under the Plan and Scheme to provide the Committee with the Crusader Fund's books, records and other information from 2011 to 2016. By Order, dated April 21, 2017, we entered a Partial Final Award, granting the relief sought by Claimant, and ordering Highland, inter alia, to produce non-privileged documents, as described in the Order.

5. On April 11, 2017, Respondent moved for Summary Adjudication of its counterclaim for advancement to defend against the claims brought by the Claimant in the Arbitration and in the parallel Delaware action, Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., C.A. No. 12533-VCG (Del. Ch.) (the "Delaware Action"). Respondent sought a mandatory injunction requiring the Fund to escrow and segregate Crusader Fund assets to cover its indemnification and advancement rights. By Order and Partial Final Award in favor of Claimant, dated July 20, 2017, we denied Highland's motions for advancement in this Arbitration and in the parallel Delaware Action and for the mandatory injunction, on the ground that the "inter-party indemnification exception" applies.

6. On December 8, 2017, Highland moved to amend its Counterclaims against the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund and for leave to file a third party demand for arbitration against Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management, LLC ("A&M CRF"), Alvarez & Marsal North America, LLC ("A&M NA"), and House Hanover, LLC ("House Hanover"). On January 11, 2018, following a pre-hearing conference call, Respondent filed a revised proposed amended Counterclaim against the Committee alone, raising counterclaims of breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the its performance and enforcement of the Plan, breach of its fiduciary duty, and aiding and abetting the breach of fiduciary duty by A&M CRF, A&M NA and House Hanover.

7. By Order dated January 25, 2018, we granted the motion to amend Highland's counterclaims that raised direct claims of breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract, and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing arising out of the so-called Deferred Fees allegedly owed to Highland, and denied the balance of Highland's request for leave to file Counterclaims and Third Party Claims.

8. On February 1, 2018, Respondent filed an Amended Answer and Counterclaims, seeking an order that the Committee account to Highland as an investor therein for all payments, gains, profits, and advantages obtained as a result of the Committee's alleged wrongful actions; that the Committee pay money damages, disgorge, and make restitution to Highland for damages arising from the Committee's alleged breaches of contract, breaches of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and breaches of fiduciary duty, including by awarding Highland the Deferred Fees allegedly improperly withheld, as well as an award of Highland's fees and expenses, including reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in this action; and such other relief as the Panel deems fair and equitable.

9. On February 15, 2018, Claimant moved to strike portions of the Counterclaims on the grounds that certain of the new pleadings went beyond the limitations set by the Panel in the January 25 Order by including allegations that relate directly to claims the Panel had ordered not be included in the revised Counterclaim. By Order dated April 1, 2018, we granted the motion of the Claimant to strike portions of the Counterclaim and directed Respondent to submit a revised Counterclaim to Claimant and the Panel.

10. By Order dated March 19, 2018, we directed that "any party wishing to make a motion shall write a letter to the Panel, with copy to opposing counsel, seeking permission to make such motion..."

11. By letter dated March 28, 2018, Highland requested permission to file a motion for partial summary adjudication with respect to the Committee's breach of fiduciary duty claims that accrued before July 5, 2013, which Highland contends are barred by the statute of limitations. By Order dated April 5, 2018, relying upon AAA Commercial Arbitration Rule 33, we denied Highland's application to make a motion for partial summary adjudication, without prejudice to their doing so at the close of the Committee's main case at the hearing, if such factual and legal issues were briefed in the Pre-Hearing Briefs.

12. On April 5, 2018, Respondent filed its revised Amended Counterclaims, seeking relief, as earlier, for alleged breaches of contract, of fiduciary duty, and of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

13. On July 12, 2018, Highland moved to strike what it characterized as a new claim by the Committee. The Committee opposed the motion. By Order dated July 22, 2018, the motion to strike was denied.

14. On August 19, 2018, after a series of discovery motions were decided, the Parties entered into a Joint Proposed Pre-Hearing Consent Order, which was So Ordered by the Panel.

F. Hearing Dates and Witnesses

1. An evidentiary hearing was held in New York, N. Y. on September 12-14, 17-18, 20-21, and 24-25, 2018.

2. Claimant presented the oral testimony of Eric Felton, Burke Montgomery, David Morehead, and Brian Zambie, all Members of the Redeemer Committee; Steven Varner, Alvarez & Marsal ("A&M"); Robert Collins, PriceWaterhouseCoopers; and two experts, Scott Meadow, Analysis Group; and Basil Imburgia, FTI Consulting.

3. Respondent presented the oral testimony of Isaac Leventon, Esq., Highland internal counsel; Brant Behr, Redeemer Committee Member; Matt Jameson, formerly employed by Highland Capital; Scott Ellington, General Counsel, Highland Capital; the deposition testimony of Thomas Sargent, the Compliance Officer of Highland; and two experts, James Finkel, Duff and Phelps, and Karl Snow, Bates and White.

G. Post-Hearing

1. On October 24, 2018, Claimant filed its Post-Hearing Memorandum on its Claims and Respondent filed its Post-Hearing Memorandum on its Counterclaim.

2. On November 17, 2018, Claimant filed its Reply to Respondent's Post-Hearing Memorandum and Respondent filed its Reply to Claimant's Post-Hearing Memorandum.

3. On November 30, 2018, the Panel heard closing arguments from counsel to the Parties.

4. On December 10, 2018, the Parties filed Supplemental Post-Trial Memoranda, dealing with questions asked by the Panel during closing arguments.

5. On December 12, 2018, the record was declared closed.

6. On January 5, 2019, at the request of the Panel, the Parties consented to the adjournment of the timing of the award from January 11, 2019 to February 28, 2019. On February 25, at the request of the Panel, the Parties consented to the extension of the deadline to March 7, 2019.

H. Issues to be Determined

1. Claimant has pleaded four claims of breaches of fiduciary duty and of breaches of contract, arising out of similar fact patterns, as follows:

a) The taking of the Deferred Fees;
b) The payment of Distribution Fees;
c) The purchase of Plan claims without Redeemer Committee approval; and
d) The transfer of Barclays' Fund interests without Redeemer Committee approval.

2. Separately, Claimant has pleaded claims of breach of fiduciary duty, as follows:

a) Engaging in related party transactions without Redeemer Committee approval
b) Refusing to settle claims brought by Credit Suisse;
c) Refusing to resolve the claims brought by UBS, which included a Temporary Restraining Order ("TRO"); and
d) Failing to make a good faith effort to sell the Cornerstone asset.

3. In addition, Claimant seeks a declaratory judgment that there should be an immediate distribution of the Deferred Fee Account to the Consenting Compulsory Redeemers.

4. Respondent has pleaded one counterclaim against the Redeemer Committee, alleging that the Committee breached its contractual and fiduciary duties by delaying liquidation of the Fund's assets after July 2016, and depriving Respondent of its right to receive the remaining funds in the Deferred Fees account payable upon complete liquidation of the Fund.

5. Both Claimant and Respondent have also made claims for the recovery of their attorneys' fees and costs.

I. Applicable Law

1. At the outset, we address which law applies to which claims. It is not in dispute that Claimant's breach of contract claims are governed by the law of New York State. However, Claimant contends that the law of New York State also applies to the breach of fiduciary duty claims, as the breaches are claimed to arise from Highland's relationship with the Fund and its investors under the Plan, which provides for New York law. Respondent argues that any fiduciary duties owed by Highland arise under its services as investment manager of the Crusader Fund, and, thus, are governed by the law governing the Fund's Governing Documents, the state of Delaware.

2. Although there are few, if any, significant differences between New York and Delaware regarding fiduciary duties of entities in the position of Highland vis-a-vis its investors and the Committee, we find that the governing law on the breach of fiduciary duty claims is most appropriately that of New York, the state whose law governs regarding the Plan and rights of the parties under the Plan.

III. Discussion of The Issues

A. We recognize and appreciate the exemplary efforts by counsel for each Party. The results set forth herein are not a reflection of any difference in the quality of those presentations, but of our review of the evidentiary record and of the relevant law.

B. Taking of Deferred Fees

1. When the Plan and Scheme were adopted, a prominent feature was the creation of a Deferred Fee Account which was designed to provide an incentive to Highland to liquidate expeditiously the Crusader Fund of its assets. Deferred Fees were annual performance fees payable to Highland but deferred until, as, and when there would be a "complete liquidation" of the Crusader Funds' assets," Scheme §1.5.2, Plan §2.02, HC-300.

2. The evidence is uncontested that, as of the close of the hearing record in this matter, the Crusader Funds have not been completely liquidated. It is also uncontested that, on January 21 and April 6, 2016, Highland distributed to itself a total of $32,313,000 in Deferred Fees. JX-25 at 14; JX-26 at 13. Highland's stated rationale, or "position," for making the payment without there first having been complete liquidation was set forth in the financial statements of the Funds for the year-end 2015, issued on April 22, 2016: the UBS TRO "prevented the full liquidation" and that Highland "would have received the Deferred Fees...but-for the impact of the restraining order still in place." Thus, Highland "believe[d] its right to receive the [Deferred Fees] crystalized as of the date the [TRO] was lifted," or January 21, 2016, JX-025.0010.

3. The core of Highland's position was that, in January 2016, it sought, received, and relied on the advice of its outside counsel Akin Gump that the UBS TRO created an impossibility for it to have earned the Deferred Fees, thus allowing the self-payment. However, based upon the evidence heard, we do not find that Highland relied upon any such advice in executing its plan to take the Deferred Fees.

4. We find that in January 2016, Highland's CEO James Dondero raised the possibility of taking the Deferred Fees before complete liquidation with Thomas Surgent, a Deputy General Counsel and Chief Compliance Officer at Highland, who then discussed the idea with Highland's General Counsel, Scott Ellington. Surgent Dep. 133:4-19. Mr. Ellington testified that, in January 2016, he and others spoke on several occasions with lawyers from Akin Gump regarding the premature taking of the Deferred Fees, and that he received the advice that "the deferred fees could be taken under the circumstances," that it was a "calculated risk," and that, if successfully challenged, Highland would owe only "nominal interest." Tr. 10 167:14-168:25; 167:14-168:25.

5. However, Mr. Ellington's testimony is not supported by the hourly billing records of Akin Gump, which do not show any time being billed in January 2016 for anything having to do with this or any other Highland-related issue. RC-523; Tr. 11 136:9-14. Furthermore, Highland's Assistant General Counsel, Isaac Leventon, testified that neither he, nor, he was certain, anyone else at Highland, consulted with outside counsel in January 2016 regarding taking the Deferred Fees. Tr. 7 236:11-24. When Highland executed on its "position" by paying itself the Deferred Fees in January and again in early April, Highland did not disclose the self-payment to its independent auditor or the Redeemer Committee.

6. It was not until April 11, 2016, almost a week after it took the second tranche of Deferred Fees that Highland belatedly informed its independent auditor, PriceWaterhouse Coopers (PwC), of what it had done by sending it draft financial statements for the year ending December 31, 2015, in which Highland disclosed, without explanation, a "change ... related to how [they were] ... treating the deferred fee distribution." RC-288. On April 12, a meeting was held between Highland and PwC, at which PwC sought an explanation from Highland for the change in position and asked for a memorandum from Highland's counsel and a "copy of the letter that was sent [to the Redeemers Committee] notifying them of the position," JX-28.

7. On April 12, Highland proceeded to have, apparently for the first time in 2016, discussions with Akin Gump about a justification for its taking the Deferred Fees prior to "complete liquidation." According to Akin Gump's billable time records, on April 12, there was a telephone "call with Thomas Surgent regarding interpretation of distribution plan and charging of fees during period of TRO." Following that call, on April 19, there was another call with Mr. Surgent and Mr. Leventon "regarding audit disclosures with respect to legal doctrine applicable to fee dispute…," following which an Akin Gump attorney started to draft a memo on the "impossibility" issue. After further calls and discussions regarding the drafting of the disclosure to the auditor, a memorandum was finalized and sent to PwC on April 22, 2016, the day that the financials were issued. See RC-523; Tr. 11 136:9-14.)

8. Although Mr. Ellington testified the Akin Gump memo was "entirely generated by Akin Gump," without any participation by anyone from Highland, Tr. 10 189:14-21, there is contrary and indisputable evidence that, in fact, someone at Highland drafted footnotes to the financials that were then provided to Akin Gump and appear in the Akin Gump memo, see Tr. 7 283:19-284:9; compare RC-289 with HC-277. Further, Mr. Leventon exchanged with Akin Gump and commented upon at least four separate drafts of the Akin Gump memo before it was finalized. RC-291; RC-295; -RC300; RC-302; JX-29; Tr. 7 291:4-295:19.

9. We find that Highland made a deliberate and calculated decision to make no disclosure to the Committee of the actual taking of the Deferred Fees until the issuance of the 2015 financial statements on April 22, 2016, but that, in the course of communicating with PwC about its "position," Highland allowed PwC to conclude that it had informed the Redeemer Committee of its position regarding the payment of the Deferred Fees, and did not correct the misimpression. RC-441. It did so to induce PwC to provide the opinion Highland needed to have clean financials.

10. This was not the first time that Highland had sought to use the so-called "impossibility defense" as a basis for suspending its obligations under the Plan. In 2013, Highland had proposed to use the doctrine in an attempt to avoid making distributions pursuant to the Realization Schedule, attached to the Plan and Scheme. Highland's then-outside counsel, Christopher Panos, now a federal bankruptcy judge, was asked to provide an opinion to allow such action but he expressed strong reservations about the use of that doctrine in an affirmative context, RC-153.

11. Thereafter, Highland tried to secure another opinion that would be more supportive of its position and received a PowerPoint presentation from Akin Gump in November 2014, HC-356, that provided some additional arguments but, ultimately, focused on the doctrine being able to be used only as a defense, see, e.g., HC-356 at 16.

12. Finally, when in early 2015, Highland asserted to Committee counsel that, by reason of the UBS TRO, "all applicable distribution dates, distribution thresholds and fees payable" were tolled, by reason of the UBS TRO, JX-22, Committee counsel had strongly rejected such use of the TRO to attempt to justify Highland's failure to meet "either the Realisation Schedule or the distribution threshold for the Deferred Fee Account." RC-219.

13. Notwithstanding two prior and unsuccessful attempts to use the doctrine to evade its obligations, Highland was not deterred and in late 2015 and early 2016, with the assistance of its inside counsel, but not on the advice of Akin Gump,planned for and then executed on the strategy to take the Deferred Fees.

14. Under New York law, the doctrine of impossibility does not create an affirmative right to engage in any conduct; rather, under certain circumstances, it acts as a defense to claims of breach of contract. When an unforeseeable event, such as an injunction, occurs, and the actions of the non-performing contract party have not contributed to the occurrence, and the occurrence renders the performance of a contractual obligation objectively impossible, a party's contractual obligation can be excused. Kel Kim Corp. v. Cent. Mkts., Inc., 70 N.Y.2d 900, 902 (1987) ("While such defenses [as impossibility] have been recognized in the common law, they have been applied narrowly, due in part to judicial recognition that the purpose of contract law is to allocate the risks that might affect performance and that performance should be excused only in extreme circumstances"); JJ. Cassone Bakery, Inc. v. Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc., 168 Misc.2d 272, 278, 638 N.Y.S.2d 898 (N.Y. Sup. 1996), rev'd in part on other grounds, 240 A.D.2d 634, 659 N.Y.S.2d 293 (2d Dept. 1997). Absent such factors, the doctrine of impossibility is not available to excuse a party's performance and cannot be used to justify affirmative conduct.

15. Highland attempts to squeeze itself into the four conditions, but its effort fails. First, Highland argues that it is defending itself against accusations of breach of contract by invoking, defensively, the impossibility defense. But it is Highland's illegitimate use of the impossibility defense to justify an affirmative act — the taking of the Deferred Fees — that is under attack, not its citation of the impossibility defense in 2018 as a defense to its breach of contract in 2016.

16. Highland also argues that the TRO "rendered the complete liquidation of the Fund under the Plan's Realization Schedule objectively impossible." Closing Brief at 61. But Highland confuses the Realization Schedule which deals with timely distributions with the Deferred Fees which come into play only upon complete liquidation of the Fund with no deadline. Plan §2.02; Scheme §1.5.2. In any case, when the UBS TRO was dissolved on January 21, 2016, there was nothing that prevented Highland from completing the liquidation.

17. None of the factors allowing the doctrine of impossibility apply to the taking of the Deferred Fees. Indeed, we find that Highland — and its inside counsel —knew none of the factors were applicable when Highland asserted the defense. First, the UBS TRO was not unforeseeable; in fact, as Mr. Panos had advised his client in 2013, "UBS had already filed suit and was threatening to get an injunction at the time of the approval of the Scheme." Second, Highland's own acts gave rise to the UBS TRO, as it was UBS's accusation of Highland's fraudulent transfer of assets that gave rise to the TRO, as Mr. Panos again had advised Highland. Third, as Mr. Leventon himself testified at the hearings, "the TRO did not do away with Highland's obligation to complete liquidation of the fund." Tr. 7 262:6-10. Finally, the doctrine of impossibility gives rise to no affirmative rights to take action in violation of a contract. Once again, Mr. Panos had given this critical advice to Highland in 2013.

18. We have considered the other elements of Highland's defense to this claim and find them similarly wanting. We find that Highland's paying itself the Deferred Fees in 2016 constituted a breach of both the Scheme and Plan. Given that finding, we need not reach the issue of whether the self-payment also constituted a breach of fiduciary duty by Highland to the Committee.

19. As to remedy, under New York law, damages may be awarded for a breach of contract based upon the damages suffered by the claimant. Here, the damage suffered is the full amount of the Deferred Fees prematurely taken, plus prejudgment interest from the date of the taking. "Prejudgment interest is generally granted 'in order to compensate the injured party for the loss, over a period of time, of the use of the property to which it was entitled.'" Panix Prods., Ltd v. Lewis, 2003 WL 21659370, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. 2003)(citing Lewis v. S.L. & E., Inc. 831 F.2d 37, 40 (2d Cir.1987)). Although Respondent has raised good arguments as to why the interest rate should be nominal at best, we exercise our discretion to award statutory pre-judgment interest at 9% from the date of the taking, so as to measure as accurately as possible the totality of the damage that we perceive the Fund suffered by reason of the Deferred Fees being taken prematurely.

20. Respondent also argues that the Tribunal lacks the authority to order a return of the moneys taken. But measuring the damages suffered by the Fund by referencing the full amount of the Deferred Fees taken is not the same as literally ordering a return of the moneys. It is an appropriate measure of the damages because the Fees were to have stayed within the Fund until they were appropriately earned, and while in the Fund, they were to serve as a protection and cushion against creditors. In addition, very importantly, keeping the Deferred Fees was to have acted as an incentive to Highland to complete liquidation of the portfolio, an event that had not occurred when Highland was terminated and still has not occurred. Taking the Deferred Fees deprived the investors of all of those benefits. The Deferred Fees in the amount of $33,313,000 should be returned in full, and with full statutory interest of 9% from the dates of taking in January and April 2016 through the date of this Partial Final Award.

C. Distribution Fees

1. Under the Plan, Highland was to receive fees in the amount of 125 basis points based on "all amounts actually Distributed to Redeemers during each quarter following the Effective Date . . . provided that assets equal to or in excess of the amount scheduled in the Realisation Schedule have been distributed to Redeemers during such quarter (with amounts distributed to Redeemers in excess of scheduled distributions for prior quarters being carried over.)" (Emphasis added) (Plan §2.01; Scheme §4.4.)

2. Claimant alleges that Highland breached the provisions of the Plan by paying itself distribution fees totaling $14.5 million despite not having "actually" distributed to the Redeemers each quarter the minimum required to have been paid by the Realisation Schedule (Plan Appx. A). The Committee alleges that Highland paid itself distribution fees eight times, but that the only time Highland met or exceeded the goals set by the Realization Schedule was in the quarters ending January 31, 2013, and April 30, 2013. Other than those two quarters, Claimant contends that Highland missed the target in every other time period. Claimant also charged Highland with a breach of fiduciary duty, arising out of similar facts.

3. The Committee alleges that six of the distribution fee payments were improper because Highland improperly calculated the amount paid to the Redeemers in one or more of the following ways: (1) in treating Deferred Fees as Distributions; (2) in withholding tax obligations from payments to Redeemers, but counted them for purposes of qualifying for its fee; (3) in improperly including amounts that it reserved to pay Barclays, amounts used to pay the Barclays settlement, and amounts paid to its affiliate Eames in its calculation of Distributions; and (4) in borrowing on margin and improperly treating such borrowings as "excess cash" under the Plan and, therefore, as Distributions.

4. In addition, Claimant argues that if Highland missed any quarterly hurdle set in the Realisation Schedule, its deficiency would carry over to the next quarter, giving Highland an accordingly higher hurdle, or watermark, to meet in that next quarter. In other words, Claimant urges that the Realisation Schedule was intended to be cumulative.

5. Cumulative Quarterly Hurdles

a) Starting with the last issue first, the language in the Plan in question is as follows: "HCMLP will receive fees in cash ... (b) provided that assets equal to or in excess of the amount scheduled in the Realisation Schedule have been distributed to Redeemers during such quarter (with amounts distributed to Redeemers in excess of scheduled distributions for prior quarters being carried over)." HC-300 at 74 (emphasis added). Plan §2.01.

b) Claimant argues that, although the foregoing language is not explicit regarding both the positive and negative cumulative nature of the Realisation Schedule, there is evidence sufficient to establish that requirement from the text itself and from the testimony of those who negotiated the clause in the Plan, citing the testimony of Mr. Montgomery ("The Realisation Schedule was a cumulative concept. 100 million during one period, 100 million to the next, 200 million during the next. . . . it was designed to be cumulative. It was a stack.") Tr. 3 307:5-19. The Committee also points out that Highland kept internal accounting schedules that treated the Schedule as cumulative, including RC-364 at pp. 10, 23, 36, 49, 62, 75, 88, 101, 114, 127, 140; see also Tr. 4 196:17-197:19; Tr. 9 256:14-259.

c) Finally, the Committee urges that there would be "perverse incentives" if Highland were allowed to treat the Schedule as cumulative if it got ahead of the distribution schedule but not if it fell behind, because if Highland knew it could not make a quarterly target, it would have the incentive to skip that quarter and wait until the next quarter where it would meet the Realisation Schedule for only that quarter. This would have the undesirable effect of delaying liquidation but not adversely affecting Highland's receipt of incentive fees.

d) Highland strongly urges that the clause in question is unambiguous in requiring only a positive carry-forward, with no hint that a failure to meet a quarterly hurdle imposed an obligation to reach a high water mark that would meet both the prior hurdle and the present quarterly hurdle. In addition, Highland argues that, as Mr. Montgomery conceded on cross-examination, the Plan could have contained a cumulative shortfall provision, but that the inclusion of such language was never discussed with Highland, Tr. 3 at 308:7-13, and such could have been incorporated into the Plan had that been the Parties' intent.

e) Highland also criticizes the Committee's "perverse incentive" argument, arguing, first, that Highland was highly incentivized to liquidate as quickly as possible so it could receive Distribution Fees during the pendency of the 36-month Realisation Schedule (§2.02) and obtain the $10 million Deferred Fee by distributing $1.7 billion within 43 months of the Plan's Effective Date (§6.02); and, secondly, "if Highland fell too far behind," it would lose its incentive to continue expeditious liquidation of the Fund's assets. Respondent's Post-Hearing Brief at 57. See Tr. Day 12 at 169:3-18 (Snow).

f) In interpreting the section of the Plan, it is significant that the language regarding a positive carry-forward appears in a parenthetical phrase, not in the main operative text. Without considering the parenthetical, we read the main operative text as setting a test that Highland has to meet — each quarter, assets "equal to or in excess of the amount scheduled in the Realisation Schedule" must be distributed to Redeemers, or else Highland will not "receive fees in cash" that quarter. Thus, each separate quarter, Highland has to make a required distribution or will not be paid fees. But if each quarter there is a test that Highland has to meet, it would defeat the purpose of the quarterly test for Highland to be able to garner fees by just meeting the goal for one particular quarter without regard to how it had performed the prior quarter. Without a reward or a penality each quarter dependent upon whether it met (or exceeded) the goal, Highland could undermine the objective of the clause. The supplemental parenthetical phrase simply makes explicit one benefit to Highland of overachieving such quarterly goal. We conclude that §2.01 requires both a positive and negative cumulative process.

g) To read it otherwise would create a perverse incentive of encouraging Highland to skip quarters. The contrary is not true: by having both a positive and negative cumulative obligation, Highland loses no incentive to continue to liquidate, perhaps at a faster pace than it in fact adopted, if it were to fall behind.

h) Though we reach our conclusion without need to rely on extrinsic evidence, we note that our interpretation is supported by Mr. Montgomery's testimony regarding Highland's request to include a parenthetical to make clear that it would not lose the benefit of an over-distribution and could carry it forward. See JA Apparel Corp. v. Abboud, 568 F.3d 390, 397 (2d Cir. 2009).

D. Deferred Fees as Distributions

1. With respect to Highland's treating Deferred Fees as Distributions, the Committee urges that Deferred Fees being reserved in an account for possible later distribution were not amounts "actually Distributed" or the kind of Distributions made to Redeemers as part of the return to them of their investment.

2. Highland defends on the basis that the Committee's position that Deferred Fees should not be included in calculating Distribution Fees is inconsistent with the parties' course of performance. From the outset, Highland argues that it included Deferred Fees in its calculation of Distribution Fees and gave written notice of its inclusion to the Committee on at least four occasions. HC-552; HC-591; HC-592; HC-593. However, Highland is not making the argument that the Plan was amended by what it says was its known conduct.

3. Highland also argues that its successor, A&M, also included Deferred Fees in its calculation of Distribution Fees based upon the substantively identical language in the A&M investment management agreement, HC-56 at 6, and received a Distribution Fee based on that calculation in October 2016.

4. We find that whether Highland's conduct was disclosed to the Committee or whatever A&M may have done are both irrelevant to the issue in this case, because, as we analyze the evidence adduced, the only relevant issue is whether including Deferred Fees in the calculation of Distribution Fees is authorized by the language of the Plan, and we find that it is not.

5. The Plan sets forth a program of fees capable of being paid to Highland: if Highland met certain quarterly goals of distributions made to Redeemers, as set forth in the Realisation Schedule, it was entitled to receipt of certain Distribution Fees; if it distributed at least $1.7 billion to the Redeemers prior to the 43d month following the Effective Date, it was entitled to receive payment of the fees in the Deferred Fee Account in accordance with Section 2.02 of the Plan.

6. The Plan distinguished what Highland had to do to qualify to receive each category of Fees. With respect to Deferred Fees, the Plan provides that "Highland shall not be deemed to be a Redeemer in respect of the deferred fees." We read that sentence as making clear that Highland's setting aside of Deferred Fees into a account that it might eventually be able to draw upon should not be construed as a form of distribution such that, if it were a Redeemer, it could be construed as an "actual" distribution. Because Highland is not "deemed to be a Redeemer," its payment to a fund is not equivalent to a Distribution to an investor.

7. We find that this language is not ambiguous and does not allow for the practice used by Highland to beef up the amount of Distribution Fees it received.

E. Withholding Taxes as Distributions

1. The evidence at the hearing was that, as required in the Plan, HC-300 at 80, Highland took into account the amount of taxes that should be withheld and paid those amounts to the appropriate taxing authorities; however, Highland also included those withheld amounts in the calculation of amounts "actually" distributed to Redeemers. The Committee contends that such withheld amounts were not "actually Distributed to Redeemers," and points out that, in fact, only a subset of Redeemers — the Offshore Fund investors — were subject to tax withholding, RC-62; Tr. 9 275:5-23, while some investors were nonprofits that did not pay taxes at all, Tr. 12 167:5-24. The Committee also points out that, when first informed in 2012 that Highland had counted tax withholdings toward the May 1, 2012 Distribution, the Committee objected, demanding successfully that Highland make up that shortfall. RC-68; Tr. 3 301:6-12; Tr. 9 278:4-279:16.

2. Highland makes two points in its defense: first, tax withholdings made on behalf of an employee are considered "compensation," so tax withholdings for Crusader investors should also be treated in a "common-sense manner" as "distributions" to those investors; and second, Highland disclosed its methodology in at least one monthly report in November 2013, HC-591 at 14 (Nov. 2013 Summary Report), to which the Committee never objected.

3. We need not consider either of these defenses because we find the language of the Plan supports the treatment by Highland of these amounts. As stated above, "Distributions" is defined as "Amounts to be paid to Redeemers under the Plan, including amounts to be paid to Redeemers under the Scheme..." §1.01. The operative language regarding withholding for taxes is as follows: "In connection with ... all Distributions to be made hereunder, the Crusader Funds shall, to the extent applicable, comply with all tax withholding and reporting requirements imposed by any ... taxing authority, and all Distributions hereunder shall be subject to any such withholding ... requirements. The Crusader Funds are hereby authorized to take any and all actions that may be necessary or appropriate to comply with any such requirements."

4. Read together, we find that "the amounts paid to Redeemers" were "subject to ... withholding requirements" and thus, were appropriately included within the calculation of amounts distributed to Redeemers, even if, in fact, it was an indirect payment. We find for Highland on this branch of the Committee's claim.

F. Payments to Barclays and Eames as Distributions

1. In 2006 and 2007, Barclays and a Highland affiliate entered into two securities transactions — a prepaid forward transaction and an accreting strike option transaction. In connection with those two transactions, Barclays became an investor in the Highland Funds. JX-5. In late 2008, Barclays submitted redemptions for its full interests in the Highland Funds, which Highland did not honor. Litigation between Barclays and Highland entities ensued. When the Plan and Scheme were adopted, Barclays did not consent and became what it is referred to as a Non-Consenting Redeemer. HC-300, at HC-300.0075.

2. Thereafter, when Fund assets were disposed of and amounts distributed to Redeemers, no amounts were actually paid to Barclays; instead, amounts equivalent to those that Barclays would have received if it was a Consenting Redeemer were paid into the Redeemer Trust Account. That Account was set up for the purpose of segregating the deposited funds so they could be "used to pay all costs of HCM-Related Parties and the Redeemer Committee to defend, respond to, settle and satisfy any Claims by Crusader Fund Redeemers excluding Plan Claims ("Redeemer Claims") and ... to defend, respond to, settle and satisfy any such Redeemer Claims in advance of any amounts otherwise properly available for such purposes out of the assets of the Crusader Funds." Plan 6.01.

3. Notwithstanding such amounts remained in a designated account at a major financial institution, Highland treated such reserves as "actual" Distributions and paid itself fees based on the amounts reserved. The Committee argues that amounts reserved in the Redeemer Trust Account were not "actually Distributed" and that fees taken by Highland for such deposits were taken in breach of the Plan.

4. We find that Highland's treatment of the reserves as Distributions violated the terms of the Plan.

5. In July 2012, Highland, Barclays, and other entities entered into a settlement agreement, resolving all of the claims between and among them. JX-5. As part of the settlement, Barclays received both the cash reserved since August 2011 and several additional cash distributions expected between July and December 2012, essentially the exact distribution amounts that it was entitled to as a Consenting Redeemer. Tr. Day 9 at 146:12-19 (Palmer); HC-275; HC Demo 10 at 4. Pursuant to the settlement, Barclays became a Consenting Redeemer, see JX-5 at 12 (§ 11.3). Highland treated such portion of the settlement payments as "Distributions" and paid itself the fees associated with that amount of Distributions. The Committee contends that any payments to Barclays were in settlement of various claims, in exchange for which there was a "relinquishment and/or abandonment" of all of Barclays' rights and interests in the Highland Funds, JX-5 at 3, and, thus, such payments were not Distributions.

6. Finally, as part of the settlement, the two limited partner interests that Barclays had in the Funds were transferred to a newly-formed and wholly-owned affiliate of Highland, Eames; amounts equivalent to what Barclays would have received as an investor after the settlement were paid to Eames, totaling $35.1 million, and Highland treated such amounts as Distributions and paid itself the appropriate fees. The Committee urges that the transfer of LP interests was in violation of Section 2.05(f) which gives that the Committee "the authority to approve or disapprove the assignment or transfer of interests in the Feeder Funds or Plan Claims," HC-300, and that the transfer was explicitly disapproved, RC-79 ("The Crusader Redeemer Committee does not believe that Highland has the right to take assignment of Barclays' interest in the Crusader Fund. The Committee believes its approval is required for any such assignment under the Plan/Scheme, and the Committee is not willing to approve that assignment."). Furthermore, the Barclays Settlement Agreement provided that the settlement was subject to Highland's receiving all necessary approvals under the Crusader Plan of Liquidation, which the Committee contends Highland did not receive. HC-330, §12.3.2, at HC-330.0014.

7. Highland argues, first, that the Committee's right to approve or disapprove of the transfer of interests under Section 2.05(f) is not applicable because under Section 2.05(g)[3], the Barclays settlement did not give Barclays more than it would have received as a Consenting Compulsory Redeemer; that, in any case, 2.05(f) is subject to the "reasonableness" test under Section 2.07[4]; and, finally, that it was entitled to keep the LP interests because the LP interests were in the Redeemer Trust account, citing to HC-275. We find that Highland breached the Plan and Scheme by transferring the LP interests to a wholly-controlled affiliate after the Committee had specifically disapproved of the transfer. Its rejection was reasonable in that it was acting in the best interests of the other investors to have a smaller investment base that would have a greater portion of the asset distributions. The accounting ledger maintained by Highland, which created much confusion at the hearing, was not evidence that the LP interests were in the Redeemer Trust account; we agree with the Committee that the spreadsheet was an accounting convenience for Highland.

8. We also find that Highland breached the Plan by taking fees in connection with amounts reserved in the Redeemer Trust Account; by no stretch of the imagination could one reasonably conclude — or argue — that an amount reserved in an account that was available to settle and pay costs in connection with all forms of Redeemer Claims could be considered as amounts "actually Distributed" to Redeemers. In any case, with respect to the amounts reserved, no Redeemer received any Distribution in the quarters when Highland claimed fees.

[3] "The Redeemer Committee will have, subject to the execution and delivery of customary and reasonable confidentiality agreements:... (g) the authority to approve or disapprove any settlement by the Crusader Funds with Barclays that would be in excess of what Barclays would receive as a Consenting Compulsory Redeemer..."

[4] "The approval of the Redeemer Committee with respect to any matter submitted for approval under Sections 2.05 or 2.06 shall not be unreasonably withheld."

9. We also find that Highland breached the Plan by taking fees in connection with amounts reserved in the Redeemer Trust Account; by no stretch of the imagination could one reasonably conclude — or argue — that an amount reserved in an account that was available to settle and pay costs in connection with all forms of Redeemer Claims could be considered as amounts "actually Distributed" to Redeemers. In any case, with respect to the amounts reserved, no Redeemer received any Distribution in the quarters when Highland claimed fees.

10. Finally, we find that when Barclays received the amounts, as part of the Settlement Agreement, that had been set aside in 2012 as if Barclays was then a Consenting Redeemer, it did not receive such amounts as Distributions "actually" paid to a Redeemer but rather as part of the Settlement amount. Although Barclays was "deemed" to have become a "Consenting Redeemer," it had that status only for the moment in time sufficient to transfer its LP interests to Eames. As the Settlement Agreement noted, "certain payments will be made by the Highland Entities to Barclays … in consideration of the settlement of the Claims hereunder and the assignment, relinquishment and/or abandonment by Barclays of all rights and interests it had in the Fund Interests…" HC-330 at HC-330.0003. Highland breached the Plan by treating the amounts paid to Barclays as if they had been received as a Consenting Compulsory Redeemer as Distributions.

11. We conclude that it was improper for Highland to include in the calculation of the amounts distributed to the Redeemers:

a) The Distribution Fee attributable to the amounts reserved in the Redeemer Trust Account;

b) The Distribution Fee attributable to the amounts paid in settlement of the Barclays claims; and

c) The Distribution Fee attributable to the value of the LP interests and amounts transferred to Eames.

G. Margin Borrowings as Distributions

1. In January and April 2012, Highland caused the Fund to borrow $60 million from its Jefferies brokerage account to distribute to Redeemers. The Committee contends that it did so because Highland had not liquidated enough assets to meet the Realisation Schedule. After learning about the loans in September 2012, the Committee protested and directed Mr. Dondero at the September 2012 meeting to take no further margin loans without its consent. Tr. 2 353:2-22; RC-85; JX-8. The Committee contends that Highland's taking such margin loans to reach the Realisation Schedule and then paying itself Distribution Fees based on having reached the quarterly goal with the assistance of the margin borrowing breached the Plan because the margin borrowing did not constitute Excess Cash resulting from the liquidation of assets from which Distributions must come. Plan §§1.01, 3.01; Scheme §§2.4.1, 2.4.2.

2. Highland maintains that, as it was authorized under the Plan, to engage in margin borrowing, and that amounts were actually distributed to the Redeemers, such payments to the Redeemers were appropriately treated as Distributions qualifying it to receive Distribution Fees.

3. We find that such margin borrowings, which were authorized under the Plan, did not qualify as the type of Distribution that would entitle Highland to receive a Distribution Fee. The plain language of the Plan requires that any Distribution Fee be paid to Highland only upon the appropriate amount of Excess Cash having been accumulated from the sale of "assets equal to or in excess of the amount scheduled in the Realisation Schedule…" The "assets" referred to are the "assets, respectively, of the Onshore Fund, Offshore Fund I and Offshore Fund II…" §2.01. No such assets were sold and therefore no Excess Cash was accumulated to be distributed to the Redeemers.

4. The Committees expert, Mr. Imburgia, determined that the result of Highland's including the above improper items in the calculation of Distributions to Redeemers in calculating its entitlement to Distribution Fees, resulted in Highland paying itself Distribution Fees to which it was not entitled by an overpayment of $14,452,275 in Distribution Fees. The Committee is entitled to judgment in that amount plus interest at the rate of 9% from the date of each improper fee. RX 408, Schedule 2.1

H. Purchase of Plan Claims[5]

1. From December 2013 through January 2016, Highland purchased twenty-seven Plan Claims from Crusader investors for itself, without the approval of the Committee [Tr. 5 50:5-8.] The Committee contends that such purchases breached the Plan, because if it had known that the Plan Claims were available for sale, it would have exercised its ROFR. Tr. 3 163:11-24; Tr. 4 389:3-390:23. The Committee urges that the UBS TRO, said by Highland to block any purchases by the Fund during its pendency, does not in fact bar such purchases; in any event, the Committee points out that it is conceded that the Fund had assets other than the allegedly restrained assets with which to make purchases outside of the restrained assets. The Committee seeks damages equivalent to the value of the Claims at the time they were sold, any profits or benefits realized by Highland, and pre-judgment interest at 9%, for a total of $8,897,899 plus interest.

2. Highland raises a number of defenses. First, it argues that, during the period that the TRO was in effect, the Committee agreed with the advice given by the Fund's (and Highland's) counsel in the UBS case, Lackey Hershman, that the TRO, at minimum, prevented the Fund from spending cash to buy-out other investors before UBS's claims were resolved. See Tr. Day 7 at 319:17-332:3. Thus, Highland contends that the Committee cannot prove it would have purchased the Claims had they been offered to it.

[5] Plan §1.01: "Plan Claim. The claim of a Redeemer to payment of, or based upon, the Redemption Amount relating to the redemption of its shares or withdrawal of its capital account balance, as the case may be, in the Crusader Funds as detailed in Section 4.01."

3. But the record doesn't support that interpretation. First, refuting the idea that the Committee agreed with the advice being relayed to them is the exchange of correspondence between counsel for the Committee counsel and Highland set forth in RC-360, in which Committee counsel rejected the advice said to have been received from outside counsel, and stated how the Plan Claims should be dealt with if Highland were to persist in asserting that the TRO so blocked the Committee's exercise of its ROFR: "the Committee does not agree with Highland's interpretation of the UBS TRO because the expenditure of money to redeem interests is not a "Distribution" and, in any event, if Highland feels strongly that it cannot use the Funds' assets in this way, any acquisition of the interests by Highland or an affiliate is subject to the Committee's exercising its rights under Section 5.04 when the TRO is lifted or when the interests can, in Highland's opinion, be acquired by the Fund consistent with the UBS TRO. Otherwise, the Committee did not approve of the transfer of the Scheme Claims." RC-360 at 87-88.

4. Furthermore, before the TRO, when presented with the opportunity to purchase Plan Claims, the Committee exercised its right of first refusal (ROFR) on five occasions, see RC-358. During the pendency of the TRO, the Committee was informed about only five of twenty-eight Plan Claims purchases and disapproved each of the purchases by Highland, but the disapprovals were ignored. The Committee informed Highland that it disagreed about the scope of the TRO but that if Highland, as Fund Manager believed the TRO prevented the Fund from purchasing the Plan Claims, then it would be consistent with the Committee's ROFR for the right to be exercised when the TRO was lifted. HC-580.

5. We find that the Committee would have exercised its ROFR if it had been given full information and had not Highland been preventing the exercise of the ROFR by invoking the TRO and misrepresenting to buyers that it had the ROFR.

6. As a second defense, Highland contends that during the period that the UBS TRO was in effect, it relied on advice of counsel that the TRO prevented the Crusader Fund from acquiring any Plan Claims, thus opening the door for Highland to purchase the Plan Claims that would otherwise have been subject to the Committee's ROFR under §§2.05(f)[6] and 5.04[7] of the Plan.

7. Mr. Leventon testified that the TRO was obtained by UBS in response to UBS's allegation that Crusader Funds had participated in a fraudulent transfer of assets from a UBS debtor; the TRO restricted transfer of assets but because those assets had been acquired about four years previously and disposed of in the ordinary course of business, "the UBS TRO was essentially designed to 'collateralize' UBS against the March 25, 2009 asset transfer. And if they couldn't be collateralized with those exact assets and the exact actual cash ... or cash equivalent, then it had to be collateralized with something else. And that something else was the assets of the fund." Day 7 at 328:12-20. That testimony would suggest that from the moment that the TRO went into effect, the Fund was under constraints not to purchase any Plan Claims or other assets.

8. But this explanation is not convincing. Regarding the advice received from Lackey Hershman, Mr. Leventon testified that the majority of the advice received was orally and over time, and that the advice was "an evolving interpretation" that "crystallized...in the first quarter of 2014." Id. at 330:9-17. The advice consisted of "a bunch of verbal conversations, but a lot of that advice is embodied in that memo [HC259] that Lackey wrote to the Crusader Fund. Because we wanted the Committee to understand our quandary." Day 7 at 319:17-332:3 (Emphasis added).

[6] Plan §2.07(f): "The Redeemer Committee shall have ... the authority to approve or disapprove the assignment or transfer of interests in the Feeder Funds or Plan Claims; provided that such proposed assignment or transfer shall be deemed to be rejected if not affirmatively approved in writing within 30 days of submission to the Redeemer Committee..."

[7] Plan § 5.04: "No assignment or transfer of a Plan Claim after the Effective Date may be purchased by [Highland] or its affiliates without such Plan Claim first being offered to, and rejected by, the Crusader Funds."

9. The Lackey Hershman memo, dated July 23, 2014, HC-259, deals only with the practical consequences of seeking an amendment to the UBS TRO while an appeal was pending, and does not provide any advice regarding the scope or interpretation of the UBS TRO.[8] Notably, there is no other document from Lackey Hershman presented at the hearing, even including emails, that supports Mr. Leventon's explanation.

10. Perhaps in recognition of the thin basis for its claim that it relied on the advice of counsel, Highland requests that the Panel draw no inferences from the "relatively few written communications on this issue," because there was, Highland contends, "unrebutted testimony" of the "contemporaneous advice of counsel." Highland points to a letter from an internal counsel at Highland to the Committee that cites advice from outside counsel regarding the effect of the TRO on the Committee's ability to purchase Plan Claims, RC-360 ("outside counsel to HCMLP has advised that the temporary restraining order which has been imposed by the Court in UBS Securities LLC et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P. prohibits the Crusader Funds from purchasing the Scheme Claims using assets of the Crusader Funds").

11. The statement by internal counsel is the type of hearsay that was received in evidence only because this was an arbitration but to which, under the circumstances, we accord little substantive weight. We find more persuasive the absence of any writing, even an e-mail, directly from the law firm regarding the scope of the TRO and restrictions against the Fund using its assets to purchase Plan Claims or similar items.

12. Further, we find that, even before the TRO went into effect, and thus well before any advice from counsel would have been received, Highland was laying the groundwork for purchasing the Plan Claims for itself and bypassing the Committee's ROFR.

[8] On questioning by members of the Panel, Mr. Leventon referred to the Lackey Hershman memo in broad terms:

> "As set forth in the Lackey memorandum, which we all have, Lackey reported that UBS said that, Crusader and Highland Credit Strategies could neither distribute cash to anybody, nor sell assets, nor make any payments outside of the normal course of business...ARBITRATOR BRODSKY: Is the Lackey Hershman memo you're referring to the one that is HC-259, dated July 23, 2014? THE WITNESS: I believe that's correct. ARBITRATOR BRODSKY: I don't see any reference to conversations relayed to you by counsel about what UBS said. I see a sentence on page RC-3208 at the top, it says, "UBS counsel stated that they're not willing to enter into such a stipulation unless Crusader provided detailed discovery of its cash and asset holdings," et cetera, et cetera. Is that what you were referring to? THE WITNESS: Yes. They were not willing to modify the TRO in order to permit the sale of assets unless Credit Strategies, Crusader and other defendants handed over detailed financial information that they would not otherwise be entitled to in discovery. And we were advised that that was a prohibitive risk."

Day 8 170:10-17, 173:4-174:7.

13. On May 29, 2013, Highland caused the Board of the Master Fund, which it controlled, to adopt a resolution, as follows: "Whereas, ... (2) certain investors from time-to-time desire to sell their interests as redeemed, unpaid shareholders, in the Company ... (any such shares, 'Offered Shares'); (3) one or more principal accounts (the "Related Accounts') in which James Dondero ... and/or Highland ... have material, direct and indirect, financial and ownership interests, have enters a bid to purchase certain of Offered Shares; (4) the bid of the Related Account(s) is equal to or greater than the highest bid; ...Now Therefore Resolved That (1) the undersigned Directors hereby consent to the Proposed Transaction and any future transfers of Offered Shares to the Related Account(s)..." RC-276 at 5; Tr. 7 63:25-68:14.

14. This pre-approval of transfers of interests in the Fund to Mr. Dondero, Highland, or its affiliates does not reference the Committee's ROFR, but it enabled Highland, falsely, to claim that it had a ROFR. Using that Resolution, Mr. Leventon informed multiple investors interested in possible transfers of their interests, that Highland had a ROFR to purchase any Plan Claims, never mentioning the Committee's prior and superior ROFR. RC276[9]; RC280; RC434. This conduct alone constituted a breach of the Plan, because it deprived the Committee from having any insight into the transactions as to which the Plan gave them rights to purchase the underlying interests.

15. Furthermore, by the time Highland received the Lackey Hershman memo in July 23, 2014, Highland had purchased fourteen Plan Claims, nine of which were not disclosed to the Committee. Thereafter, Highland purchased another thirteen Plan Claims without any disclosure to the Committee. Mr. Leventon testified that the only reason for Highland not to consult the Committee about the 27 purchases in 2013, 2014, and 2015 was its interpretation of the TRO. Day 7, 172:2-10.

16. Additional actions by Highland further demonstrate that the reliance on the TRO was a facade, designed to enable Highland to attempt to purchase a majority interest in the Fund without the Committee's knowledge. In May 2014 and again in January 2016, Highland hired a broker to solicit all Fund investors, except those who were on the Committee, to buy their interests at half or approximately half of the NAV that Highland had itself set. RC417; Tr. 7 95:8-20, 96:8-23; RC425.

[9] "By way of Written Resolution, the Board of Directors of [the Fund] determined that if the Investment Manager or an affiliate offers to purchase the shares in the Fund, then that bid shall be accepted if it is the highest bid. See Written Resolution of the Directors of the Fund dated May 29, 2013. The Board may, in its absolute discretion, approve transfers. ... Accordingly, the Investment Manager, as authorized by the applicable documents, hereby bids 60.25 cents of NAV for purchase of 100% of Crown Alpha's capital balance as of the November 2015 NAV date"

17. The broker, Wake2O, used talking points drafted by Highland that misrepresented on whose behalf Wake2O was acting, represented, without apparent foundation, that the offering price of 50% or 55% of NAV was "[t]he current best market bid" and that price would go down in the future, and, finally, that the TRO prevented the Fund from making distributions and that the Fund held many illiquid assets. RC420; Tr. 7 101:4-11 ("Q: And so one of the things that Highland wanted Wake to convey to investors was, hey, you might want to sell your interest in Crusader because right now there's this TRO and you're not going to be able to get any distributions, right? A.· · That's probably a fair paraphrasing.").

18. Throughout Wake2O's engagements, it was under pressure from Highland's CEO to pursue investors so that Highland could obtain a greater share of the Fund. See, e.g., RC-250 ("[K]eep pushing as much and many as quickly as possible....")(August 2015); and RC-426 ("Our CEO is keen on starting the process as soon as possible. Please let us know if we can start Monday.") (January 2016); Tr. 7 135:6-137:18.

19. It was also in this period that Highland undertook a renewed effort to keep the Redeemers Committee in the dark about their purchasing activities. Mr. Leventon was significantly involved in providing direction, as well as drafting talking points, to Wake2O to "reach out to all non-committee members," (emphasis added); Tr. 7 146:16-149:7. Highland offered Wake2O an incentive fee to acquire interests representing $200 million of NAV, but made clear to Wake2O that they should try to achieve that goal without contacting members of the Redeemer Committee. Tr. 7 157:13-161:2. The amount of $200 million was not an accidental target; it was just $4 million of NAV more than what the Redeemer Committee held, Tr. 7 155:15-23. Wake2O's efforts resulted in the acquisition by Highland of a significant number of Plan Claims, amounting to just shy of $200 million, RC418; RC360; RC419; RC422; RC423; RC424.

20. Finally, Highland continued misrepresenting to investors that it had a ROFR and never mentioned in its communications that the Committee was the entity actually possessing that right. Mr. Leventon was the principal instrument through which this misrepresentation and omission were communicated, Tr. 55:19-25 ("Q.·Mr. Leventon, have you ever sent an e-mail to an investor telling the investor that Highland Capital has a right of first refusal in the event the investor wants to sell its interest in the fund? A. With respect to the Crusader Fund, I don't recall having done so."); but see RC-276; RC-280; RC434; Tr. 7 74:22-76:23.)[10]

21. Based upon the testimony at the hearing, we have serious doubts about the scope of the advice given, if any. In addition, as now conceded, there were adequate untainted funds under the control of the Crusader Funds to have enabled the Committee to exercise its ROFR as to the Plain Claims, had they been informed in a timely way, as mandated by the Plan. 10/24/18 Highland Ltr. to Panel at 2; RC-408 at 37.

22. Further, from our examination of the language[11] in the TRO, we conclude that the restrained assets were narrowly circumscribed, and the broad position taken by Highland was not well-grounded. The TRO restrained the Crusader Fund only from transferring or disposing of property received, or its cash equivalent, in March 2009 "from Highland Financial Partners, L.P. in connection with the Termination, Settlement and Release Agreement, dated March 20, 2009." JX13; RC134. The TRO did not preclude the Fund's sale of unrestricted assets or use of a significant amount of cash in the Fund. JX13.

23. We also find that Highland's reliance on the UBS TRO was pretextual to support Highland's true goal of benefiting itself over the interests of the Fund and the Committee. We find that Highland breached the Plan and Scheme by its actions and injured the Committee by its breach. We also found that Highland breached its fiduciary duty to the Committee by so acting.

[10] It appears that Mr. Leventon was also involved in a misrepresentation to the Committee about the purchase of a Plan Claim after the TRO had expired. In June 2016, he requested the Committee's approval for the purchase of a Plan Claim by an entity he described as a third party that was not affiliated with Highland. But in the course of soliciting the sale of the Plan Claim, Mr. Leventon represented that Highland was exercising a ROFR on behalf of itself or its affiliates. Tr. 7 87:6-89:11; RC-434. In fact, we find that the third party, Charitable DAF Fund, L.P. ("DAF"), was an affiliate of Highland. RC-435; Tr. 7 82:1384:21. Based on what Mr. Leventon stated, the Committee approved the transfer. RC-316.

[11] "ORDERED, that pending the hearing on this motion, Defendants Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P., and Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P., are temporarily restrained from transferring or otherwise disposing of property received (or if property has already been transferred or disposed to, the cash equivalent) in March 2009 from Highland Financial Partner,s L.P. in connection with the Termination, Settlement and Release Agreement, dated March 20, 2009."

24. In the calculation of damages owed to the Redeemer Committee by Highland, we have assumed that any Plan or Scheme Claims purchased by Highland would have been purchased at the same discounted price as Highland did. However, the damages methodology used by the Committee's expert witness on damages makes the assumption that the fair market value of each of the Plan Claims was the NAV that Highland had established in each of the relevant months. We do not adopt this methodology because of the uncertainty as to whether a discount should be applied to the NAV in calculating the appropriate fair market value.

25. Rather, we adopt the alternative approach suggested by the Committee, which is rescission. We order Highland to transfer the 28 Plan or Scheme Claims to the Redeemer Committee, to pay to the Committee whatever financial benefits Highland received from the 28 transactions, less what Highland paid for the Plan Claims, plus interest at the rate of 9%, from the date of each purchase. We will leave the hearing open until the parties have worked out the exact financial details to comply with this order.

I. Related Party Transactions

1. The Committee contends that Highland breached its fiduciary duties by engaging in multiple related-party transactions without seeking or gaining the approval of the Committee The Plan provision in questions requires the Committee's approval of "all transactions between the Crusader Funds and any other HCM-Related Party, while it serves as investment manager of the Crusader Funds, including any 'cross trade' between the Crusader Funds and any other account managed or advised by HCMLP," Plan §2.06; Scheme §4.7.1 (emphasis added).

2. First, we must resolve the interpretation question left open by the Order of March 1, 2017, denying Respondent's motion for partial summary adjudication regarding these claims. We found that the language cited above was ambiguous because while Respondent argued that "Crusader Funds" is defined as meaning only four entities, the Master Fund, Onshore Fund, Offshore Fund I and Offshore Fund II, Id., § 1.01, and does not include Crusader Fund "portfolio companies" and other affiliated "entities," Claimant argued that if Crusader Fund meant only those four entities, there would be no meaning to the "including 'cross trades' language of §2.06, because none of the four entities directly owns assets and thus could not engage in cross trades with each other or with any other account managed by Highland. Thus, the language 'including "cross trades" must refer to entities broader than just the defined entities within Crusader Funds, or else that portion of §2.06(a) prohibiting cross trades would be read out of the Plan. Accordingly, we denied without prejudice the motion to dismiss the breach of contract and fiduciary duty claims based on the so-called affiliate transactions until after the record has been more fully developed.

3. At the hearing, testimony was taken from two Redeemer Committee members, Messrs. Montgomery and Behr, regarding the drafting of the section in question. Mr. Montgomery testified that he negotiated the terms of the Plan with Michael Colvin, who was then Highland's General Counsel, telling him that the Committee "needed a related-party transaction prohibition, and he agreed to that. And the understanding was that it included everything on the Highland side and everything on the Crusader side… we thought there was agreement that it was including everything on the Highland side and everything on the Crusader side…" Tr. 2, 234:2-6, 235:2-5. Although in response to a question from a member of the Panel, Mr. Montgomery could not recall the specific language he and Mr. Colvin used to convey this understanding, and on cross-examination, he could not provide a reason for how the specific clause was drafted on this point, we credit Mr. Montgomery's testimony on this point.

4. Although of limited evidentiary significance, Mr. Behr's testimony that before the adoption of the Plan and Scheme he had had discussions with someone at Highland, whom he recalled was Mr. Colvin, about concerns regarding Highland expensing board fees paid to its portfolio companies, Tr. 9 76:17-25, 77:2, supported Mr. Montgomery's testimony, cited above, that the subject of prohibiting certain related party transactions was part of the negotiations over the Plan. His recollection was supported in part by his contemporaneous notes of having raised that subject in the negotiations. HC508 at 142.

5. In addition, the Committee makes the point that the occasional course of conduct between the parties before the relationship between the parties became a matter of some dispute reflected the belief that the Plan and Scheme required that Highland seek the Committee's approval before engaging in transactions that involved entities other than the four specific Crusader Fund entities in the definition. See, e.g., Tr. 4 213:6-9.12 Under the established law relating to contract interpretation, "How the parties perform a contract necessarily is manifested after execution of the contract, but their performance is highly probative of their state of mind at the time the contract was signed." Gulf Ins. Co. v. Transatlantic Reinsurance Co., 886 N.Y.S.2d 133, 143 (First Dept. 2009); "[T]he parties' course of performance under the contract is considered to be the 'most persuasive evidence of the agreed intention of the parties.' … 'Generally speaking, the practical interpretation of a contract by the parties to it for any considerable period of time before it comes to be the subject of controversy is deemed of great, if not controlling, influence.'" Federal Ins. Co. v. Americas Ins. Co., 691 N.Y.S.2d 508, 512 (First Dept. 1999).

6. Based on the foregoing evidence, we resolve the ambiguity in favor of a broad definition of the term "Crusader Funds" to include not only the four specific entities named in §2.06 but also the Crusader Fund "portfolio companies" and other affiliated "entities. The Committee contends that Highland engaged in two types of transactions that required but did not receive its consent: (1) transactions between Highland affiliates and Fund portfolio companies, and (2) transactions directly between Highland affiliates and the Fund entities.

J. Related Party Transactions with Portfolio Companies.

1. The Committee contends that Highland breached §2.06 by causing Fund portfolio companies to pay board fees, advisory fees and D&O insurance premiums.

2. Highland responds that transactions between Highland affiliates and Fund portfolio companies were expressly disclosed to the Fund's investors, see HC-230 at 34-36, and that the investors specifically agreed such transactions were permissible, see HC-118 at 7. Accordingly, Highland urges that there can be no fiduciary duty breaches.

3. Furthermore, Highland urges that the claims arose in 2011 or 2012, and in any case were disclosed to Highland counsel by April 6, 2013, JX-12, and, thus, would be barred by the three-year statute of limitations. Highland characterizes the proof regarding such claims as failing to establish more than the occurrence of "isolated or sporadic acts."

[12] We note that one of Highland's outside counsel also occasionally used the term "Crusader Funds" or "Crusader" when describing transactions between portfolio companies and Highland affiliates, RC83 at 2-3; see JX12; JX10.

4. The Committee claims that the statute of limitations should be tolled under the "continuing violation doctrine," which applies where "separate violations of the same type, or character, are repeated over time," and not where the claims are "based on a single decision that results in lasting negative effects." Moses v. Revlon, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106431, *18 (S.D.N.Y. 2016). Under prevailing New York law, "The continuing violations doctrine 'will toll the limitations period to the date of the commission of the last wrongful act where there is a series of continuing wrongs.' Shelton v. Elite Model Mgt., 11 Misc.3d 345, 361 (Sup Ct, New York County 2005); 78/79 York Assoc. v. Rand, 175 Misc.2d 960, 966 (Civ Ct, New York County 1998) … However, 'it will only be predicated on continuing unlawful acts and not on the continuing effects of earlier unlawful conduct.' Selkirk v. State of New York, 249 A.D.2d 818, 819 (3d Dept 1998)." Pankin v. Perlongo, 2012 WL 7868667, at *2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Cnty. 2012).

5. The evidence brought forth by the Committee failed to show that the payments made by Highland for insurance premiums or for advisory fees were parts of a series of continuing wrongs. Rather, there appear to have been a series of discrete payments made in no regular or consistent pattern and in no similar amounts.13 Under the circumstances, we find in favor of Highland on these claims. We do not reach the issue of whether disclosure to investors would bar a claim for breach of fiduciary duty.

K. Related Party Transactions with Highland Affiliates

1. The Committee contends that in 2013 and 2014, without seeking its permission as required under §2.06, Highland sold shares in four CLO assets held by the Master Fund, known as Eastland CLO, Ltd., Grayson CLO, Ltd., Greenbriar CLO, Ltd., and Stratford CLO, Ltd. (the "CLOs"), in what it characterizes as "pre-approved" transactions to Highland affiliates, without seeking the Committee's approval, as required by §2.06(a), which, as noted above, prohibits "any 'cross-trades' between the Crusader Funds and any other account managed or advised by HCMLP."

2. The proof at the hearing showed that, with no disclosure to the Committee, Highland sold CLOs to brokers it used for other securities transactions who, within a very short time of purchasing the CLOs, sold some or all of the CLOs to Highland affiliates.14 The Committee urges that such sales were breaches of fiduciary duty as well as breaches of the Plan.

[13] Insurance premiums were paid on behalf of four entities (American Home Patient, Inc., Cornerstone Healthcare, Nex-Tech Aerospace, and Trussway Holdings) in 2011 and 2012; no payment to any of the entities was the same as to any other entity. RC355, Schedule 6.1. As to the portfolio company advisory fees, various fees were paid over varying years between 2011 and 2016 by six different portfolio entities to Barrier or NexBank as advisors; with the exception of two years for one of the entities, each payment of an advisory fee was of a different amount.

[14] As set forth in the Expert Report of Basil Imburgia, RC408, Highland engaged in the following transactions:

- It sold 32,500 shares of Grayson CLO at a settlement amounts of $560 and $570 per share, of which $25,500 were sold to NexPoint, with a reported value of $570 per share, Table 19;
- It sold 32,250 shares of Eastland CLO at settlement amounts of $611.40 and $613.90, of which 25,250 were sold to NexPoint, with a reported value of $730 and $670, Table 20;

3. Highland contends that the sales in question were not cross trades but were rather "market-bearing transactions" between Highland and an independent financial institution, which then sold to a Highland affiliate. But this contention is belied by the fact that the transactions bore all of the hallmarks of pre-arranged trades, designed to avoid obtaining the consent of the Committee. See JX-30 at 3 ("Trading assets between two affiliated accounts through a broker may be considered a Cross Trade…"). Indeed, Mr. Dondero, the Chief Executive Officer, is heard on a tape made by then-Chief Portfolio Manager Joshua Terry, suggesting "run[ning a CLO trade] through some broker," RC-263A. By using a middleman between itself and its affiliate, Highland sought to avoid the description of a "cross trade," but the reality is that the transactions were effectively cross trades and we will treat them as such.

4. That said, however, the substance of the transaction, arguably, benefitted the Committee, because assets of the Fund were liquidated, which was a principal goal of the Plan and Scheme. Yet the problem with these transactions is that Highland had a perfectly clear path to effectuate these trades without any question being raised as to their bona fides – it could have sought the consent of the Committee under §2.06, which consent could not be unreasonably withheld under §2.07, HC-300. We find that Highland's failure to do so constitutes a breach of the Plan.

5. We are left with the question of whether Highland's roundabout trading method caused any damage to the Fund. It appears Highland sold the CLOs to a broker for one value and then the broker turned around and sold the CLOs to the Highland affiliate for a higher value. Thus, the Fund received less than it was entitled to receive had the transaction been done without the middleman, and the damage to the Fund is the difference in the two values. While the Committee's expert Basil Imburgia did not use that methodology to calculate the damages associated with these trades, the information on the price paid to the funds and the price paid to the broker is set forth in the expert report of Highland's expert, Mr. Snow, HC-526 at 41. The Committee contends that the difference is approximately $450,000. The Committee is entitled to judgment for the amount of the difference with interest from the date of the sale from the funds, Since none of the experts did the appropriate calculation, as with other items, we leave it for the parties to confer and agree upon the total amount of damages including 9% interest and we will leave the record open to resolve that amount.

- It sold 31,000 shares of Greenbriar at settlement amounts of $713.60 and $665.00, of which all of the shares were sold to NexPoint at reported values of $730.00 and $670.00, Table 21; and
- It sold 31,500 shares of Stratford at settlement amounts of $661.70 and $660.00, of which 25,500 were sold to NexPoint at reported values of $724.49 and $665.00, Schedule 22.

L. Failure to Settle Credit Suisse Trades/Litigation

1. The Committee contends that Highland committed willful misconduct, thereby breaching its fiduciary duty to the Fund and its investors, both by failing to settle two trades Highland made on behalf of the Fund in September 2008 with Credit Suisse (relating to the purchase from Credit Suisse of syndicated loans in the amount of $23.5/9 for properties known as Goldfield and Westgate) and by failing to settle the litigation initiated by Credit Suisse in July 2013 regarding the same trades. The Committee asserts that, despite clear legal authority requiring that Highland settle the trades and the subsequent litigation, Highland refused to do so because it sought to use its refusal to settle the trades and litigation as leverage against Credit Suisse with respect to other claims not involving the Fund that Highland had against Credit Suisse. Thus, the Committee contends Highland put its own interests ahead of the interests of the Fund. Consequently, the Committee further alleges, that by its delaying the settlement of the trades and then of the litigation, Highland caused the Fund to incur seven-plus years of statutory interest that could have been avoided but which the Fund had to pay in January 2016 when the trades and the litigation were ultimately settled.

2. Highland poses multiple defenses to the Committee contentions. First, Highland argues that the Committee's claim first accrued in 2008 when it allegedly failed to settle the trades and therefore was released by Section 7.01 of the Plan,[15] releasing Highland from all claims, known or unknown, "from the beginning of the world to the Effective Date" of the Plan in August 2011. Second, Highland contends that even if this claim was resurrected after the effective date of the Plan and Scheme, said claim would have arisen in 2011 and was thus barred by the three years statute of limitations for breach of fiduciary duty claims. Third, Highland argues that it did not breach its fiduciary duty as it was only exercising its legitimate business judgment in not settling the trades or the litigation and that the Committee has otherwise failed to show that Highland committed willful misconduct in this regard. Finally, Highland asserts that if the Tribunal finds that it breached its fiduciary duty, any damages that might be owing should be at a reduced amount from what the Committee claims.

[15] Section 7.01 provides, as follows: "Section7.01. Upon the Effective Date, each of the Consenting Redeemers, for themselves and on behalf of any of their respective officers, directors, shareholders, partners, members, employees, affiliates, investors, agents and representatives and any other person or entity entitled to assert a Claim (defined below) by, through, under, or on behalf of any Consenting Redeemer, hereby releases each of the HCM-Related Parties and each of the other Consenting Redeemers, from any and all accounts, actions, agreements, causes of action, claims, contracts, covenants, controversies, damages, debts, demands, executions, expenses, judgments, liabilities, obligations, omissions, promises, representations, and fights to payment, and all other liabilities of every kind, nature and description whatsoever, liquidated and unliquidated, fixed and contingent, matured and unmatured, disputed and undisputed, legal and equitable, state and federal, secured and unsecured, accrued and unaccmed, known and unknown, choate and inchoate (each, a "Claim"), which each Consenting Redeemer has, may have or ever had against any or all of the HCM-Related Parties and the other Consenting Redeemers from the beginning of the world to the Effective Date related to each of the Crusader Funds, including without limitation its administration and wind-down; provided, however, that such release shall not operate to release any claims arising from this Plan or based on larceny within the meaning of Section 155.05 of the New York Penal Code ("Larceny Claims"), provided that such exception shall not apply to Larceny Claims within the scope of knowledge of the releasing party as of the Effective Date. The benefit of the release in this Section 7.01, as it related to the HCM-Related Parties, is held in trust by the Crusader Funds for the HCM-Related Parties, and the Crusader Funds hereby assign the benefit of the release in this Section 7.01 in their favor."

3. With respect to the issue of the release, the Tribunal concludes that Section 7.01 releases any claims that the Committee might have with respect to the failure by Highland to settle the Credit Suisse trades through the Effective Date of the Plan, but the Committee has not released any claims that arose after the Effective Date of the Plan. The Tribunal need not decide whether the continuous post-August 2011 failure to settle the trades automatically gives rise to new post-Effective Date claims; once Credit Suisse commenced litigation in July 2013 and the Committee renewed its demand that Highland settle the trades and the litigation, and once Highland again failed to do so, a new claim arose, at least as of that point in time. This new claim would not be released under Section 7.01 since it arose after the Effective Date of the Plan. Accordingly, Tribunal views Highland's continuous failure to settle the trades and litigation after July 2013 (until January 2016, and subject to the temporary withdrawal by the Committee of its demand that Highland settle the trades and litigation in September of 2013, as discussed below) as the potentially actionable conduct that the Tribunal will analyze below.

4. As to the statute of limitations issue, the Tribunal agrees with Highland that a three years statute of limitations applies to breach of fiduciary duty claims and therefore any conduct outside the three years limitations period is not actionable. The Committee filed in this Arbitration its breach of fiduciary claim with respect to the unsettled Credit Suisse trades and litigation on July 5, 2016. Consequently, given the application of the statute of limitations, any claim for relief for any period prior to July 5, 2013 is barred by the statute of limitations and the Tribunal will not consider conduct prior to this date to be actionable nor will it consider any claim for damages for the period prior to July 5, 2013.

5. The Tribunal finds that Highland committed willful misconduct, thereby breaching its fiduciary duty to the Fund and its investors, by failing to settle the two subject trades with Credit Suisse. The Tribunal finds that, whatever strategy Highland intended or whatever judgment calls it made, or purported to make, with respect to the settlement of these trades, it was under a clear legal obligation to settle the trades but failed to do so.

6. Highland's then General Counsel admitted to at least a general awareness of the legal obligation under the LSTA regime to settle trades promptly (and to litigate later if there is a dispute regarding same). Tr. 10 288:2-12, 290:13-22, 291:15-20; and there is other evidence to the same effect. See, e.g., JX-12 at RC00100770-771. Despite this clear legal obligation, and despite Committee requests that it do so, Highland refused to settle the trades in order to provide itself with leverage vis-a-vis Credit Suisse on another dispute. Even if, as argued by Highland, its prevailing on this other dispute would advantage the Fund, once the Committee demanded that Highland settle the trades, as it first did during the limitations period on August 7, 2013, Highland should have done so given both the acknowledged weakness in its defenses and that its purported goal in not doing so at least primarily advantaged itself and not the Fund (even if the Fund might have gained some marginal potential advantage if Highland prevailed in the other dispute). In light of the preceding, Highland's refusal to settle the trades constitutes willful misconduct, thereby breaching its fiduciary duty to the Fund and its investors.

7. The Tribunal finds that the actionable willful misconduct by Highland for which damages will be due occurred during the period September 8, 2014 through January 14, 2016. The reason for the end date is clear and undisputed: on that date, Highland caused the Fund to pay for the trades and the interest due. As for the start date, the earliest possible start date, in light of the above analysis, is August 7, 2013 which is when the Committee first demanded during the limitations period that the trades be settled. But, in September 2013, counsel for the parties interacted and the Committee withdrew its demand that Highland settle the trades. HC-476a. The Committee argues that it was not apprised by Highland of relevant information at the time, and therefore the Fund should not be bound by its agent's withdrawal of the demand, but the Tribunal concludes that, notwithstanding Highland's failure to provide this information, the Committee's counsel independently analyzed the relevant issues and the Committee is responsible for the decisions flowing from that analysis. On or around September 8, 2014, after the trial court entered summary judgment in favor of Credit Suisse in the litigation, the Committee reinstated its demand that Highland settle the trades; since Highland did not do so until January 14, 2016, it is, under our analysis above, responsible for damages accruing during the period from September 8, 2014 through January 14, 2016.

8. The Tribunal adopts the damages theory advanced by the Committee: the pre-judgment interest that the Fund had to pay during September 8, 2014 through January 14, 2016, minus the gain it achieved during the same period by virtue of having the use of the subject $23.5 million. However, neither party presented a damages analysis consistent with the preceding parameter. Accordingly, the Tribunal directs that the Parties jointly confer to calculate an amount of damages that takes into account the following parameters: (i) the damages period is between September 8, 2014 and January 14 , 2016; (ii) the 9% statutory interest (ordered by the New York State Supreme Court in September 2014) is to be applied on a simple basis to the total principal amount due ($23.5 million); (iii) the amount of the "off-set" is to be calculated using the factor utilized by Claimant's expert – the Treasury Yield Rates for the damages periods specified in (i); and (iv) 9% statutory, pre-judgment interest is to be applied on a simple basis to the result of the calculations in (i) – (iii) from January 14, 2016 to the date of this Partial Final Award.

M. The Delay in Settling the UBS Litigation

1. As noted above, Highland, Crusader and Credit Strategies were parties to an action commenced by UBS which alleged that certain securities had been fraudulently transferred by Highland to the funds. As a result, the funds were enjoined from transferring the subject assets during the course of the litigation.

2. In May 2015, UBS, Highland, Crusader and Credit Strategies reached an agreement in principle to settle the litigation. Under the terms of that agreement Crusader was to pay UBS $25 million and Highland was to pay $35.75 million. A separate agreement between the Committee and Highland provided that, no sooner than December 30, 2016, Highland could recapture $33.75 million through incentive fees that could be generated through the liquidation of Crusader assets. RC-227.

3. The settlement agreement was to be finalized on May 30, 2015, but Highland refused to go through with the settlement because Credit Strategies would not release claims against Highland. Tr. 3 21:10-22:3; Tr. 3 24:16-25:6; Tr. 10 316:20-317:23. Ultimately the Committee negotiated a its own settlement, pursuant to which Crusader paid UBS $25 million on July 1, 2015, and an additional amount of $30 million on December 29, 2015.

4. The Committee argues that, had Highland not blown up the original settlement, it would not have had to pay the $30 million to UBS on December 29, 2015, and it would have retained those funds at least until December 30, 2016, when that amount might have been transferred to Highland if it had earned that amount in incentive fees. The Committee, therefore, seeks as damages 9% interest on the $30 million from December 29, 2015 to December 30, 2016, which its expert calculated to be $2,041,664.

5. Highland denies that it has any liability and asserts that is protected by the business judgment rule. It also argues that 9% interest is not appropriate. Further, Highland urges that the Committee's expert did not otherwise account for the fact that Highland might have earned $33.75 million in incentive compensation and, therefore, there was a net benefit to the fund.

6. There is no basis for Highland's claim that its conduct is protected by the business judgment rule. In deciding whether or not to settle the UBS litigation, Highland was acting as a fiduciary with respect to Crusader and had a fiduciary duty not to place its own interests above that of Crusader. As the New York Court of Appeals stated in Birnbaum v. Birnbaum, 73 N.Y. 461, 466 (1989):"It is elemental that a fiduciary owes a duty of undivided and undiluted loyalty to those whose interest the fiduciary is to protect . . . . This is a sensitive and ' inflexible' rule of fidelity, barring not only blatant self-dealing, but also requiring avoidance of situations in which a fiduciary's personal interest possibly conflicts with the interest of those owed a fiduciary duty. (Citations omitted.)"

7. Thus, Highland was not free to place its own interests above that of Crusader and had an obligation to settle UBS's claims against Crusader regardless of its concerns about possible claims against it by Credit Strategies.

8. There can be no question that Highland's action in refusing to settle with UBS resulted in Crusader being deprived the use of $30 million in cash between July 1, 2015 and December 30, 2016, the first day on which Highland would have been entitled to receive any of the incentive fees. Here, as with the Deferred Fees, it is appropriate to award interest on that amount at the rate of 9% to compensate Crusader for that loss.

9. The problem with Highland's claim that it might have earned an incentive fees of $33.75 million is that Highland offered no evidence that would suggest that its incentives fees would ever have reached even the $30 million amount that the Committee is willing to concede might have been reached. Since the original settlement agreement was negotiated at a time when there was no plan in place to terminate Highland as the fund manager, the incentive fee structure was based on events that would ultimately occur in periods after the Committee terminated Highland. Since neither party made any effort at the hearing to calculate incentive fees, it seems apparent that such a calculation was not possible. In these circumstances, the Committee's assumption that Highland would have earned $30 million in incentive fees by December 29, 2016 is generous and there is no basis for a finding that Highland would have earned more than that in incentive fees.

10. We award Claimant as damages 9% interest on the $30 million from December 29, 2015 to December 30, 2016, which its expert calculated to be $2,041,664.

N. Cornerstone

1. Highland Cornerstone Healthcare Group ("Cornerstone") is a company that owns Long Term Acute Care (LTAC) hospitals in which the Fund owns a minority equity interest. At the time of the adoption of the Plan and Scheme, Highland owned or controlled 100% of the shares of Cornerstone. Two groups of funds, Crusader Funds and Highland Credit Strategies Fund ("Credit Strat"), owned more than 50% of the shares of Cornerstone. Between 2011 and 2013, Highland was secretly engaged in the process of valuing and, eventually, selling the interest held by Credit Strat in Cornerstone. In September 2013, after a process in which the Credit Strat Redeemer Committee was kept completely in the dark as to the sales process that was underway, and which was later found to be unfair to the investors in Credit Strat, see RC-306, Highland arranged for the purchase of Credit Strat's interest by Cornerstone itself at the price of $2,956.03 per share, see JX-16. This price was below the most recent mark set by Highland, and below the value of between $3,424 and $4,434 per share that Highland's investment bankers, Houlihan Lokey, found to be fair for the purchase of the minority interest, see HC-431.

2. Following the purchase of the Credit Strat interest, the Crusader Funds owned 41.8% of Cornerstone, see RC-138 at 7. The Crusader Funds learned of the sale and made known their interest to Highland in having their interest in Cornerstone sold. But when Highland offered to buy their interest for the same price of $2,956.03 per share as the Credit Strat interest, the Committee engaged Ernst & Young ("E&Y") as its advisor to analyze the offer and prepare a response. E&Y prepared two analyses of the value of the Cornerstone asset. The first, HC-577, found that, as of the fall of 2013, "Cornerstone's offer to purchase Crusader's share for $43.8 mm is below Crusader's current carrying value and at the low end of the range of values developed in this Report" and that "based on information provided and reviewed to date it would appear that the lower end of the range is more reasonable to expect that (sic) the higher end of the range," Id. at 5.

3. The Committee then requested that E&Y prepare a supplemental report, and, in January 2014, E&Y rendered a second report, finding that Cornerstone underperformed expectations for 2013 and that the changes occurring in the healthcare field were creating uncertainty in the industry in which Cornerstone operated. HC-577 at 19. E&Y reduced its range to $44 million to $63 million, by imposing a discount from its prior range as of year-end 2013 by 10% to 25%. In discussions with counsel to the Committee, E&Y suggested countering with a purchase price in the range of $50 million to $54 million "for negotiation purposes." Id.

4. Thereafter, on March 28, 2014, after the Committee had considered its options, it made a counter-offer within the range suggested by E&Y at $52,342,188, or $3,529 per share, plus a 50% recapture provision in the event of a sale within three years. JX-18. The counter-offer was at the 2013 year-end market value, as calculated by Highland. Id. Highland never responded to this counter-offer despite repeated overtures to Highland by the Committee, and despite the desire of the Claimant Redeemer Committee and the mandate of the Scheme and Plan to liquidate all of the assets of the Crusader Fund, the interest in Cornerstone held by the Crusader Funds has not been sold.

5. Claimant contends that the failure of Highland, during the period it was the investment manager of the Funds, to make any good faith effort to sell the Funds' shares in Cornerstone, constituted a breach of fiduciary duty.

6. As part of its claim of breach of fiduciary duty, the Committee urges that Highland is collaterally estopped from denying the findings of the arbitration tribunal in the arbitration brought by the Redeemer Committee of Credit Strat arbitration tribunal regarding, inter alia, the Cornerstone transaction. RC-306 (4/6/16 Credit Strategies Fund Final Award).

7. In particular, as it bears on this dispute, the Committee contends that Highland is estopped from denying the following findings: (1) Highland controlled Cornerstone; (2) the per share price at which Highland sold Credit Strat's interest was unfair; and (3) a price of $3,929 per share was a fair price, based upon the Houlihan Lokey valuation.

8. Highland contends that the Credit Strat Tribunal's findings do not bind Highland in this proceeding, because the two arbitration proceedings deal with "fundamentally different" issues, such that collateral estoppel does not apply.

9. First, Highland urges that the Credit Strat Tribunal was dealing with the ramifications of a consummated sale, where it found that Highland controlled both Cornerstone's offer and Credit Strat's acceptance. HC-220 at 8, 30, whereas in this proceeding, the evidence is that Cornerstone made an offer to the Committee, but Highland had no role in the Crusader Fund's evaluation of or counter to that offer and no sale occurred.

10. Secondly, Highland points out that in Credit Strat, the retention of Houlihan Lokey and the entire process that Houlihan Lokey engaged in was a secret that the Credit Strat Committee was unaware of, whereas, in this proceeding, the Houlihan report as well as other financial information was made available to the Crusader Committee, HC-577 at 577.0002, Tr. Day 5 at 114:12-117:18 (Zambie).

11. The doctrine of collateral estoppel requires that an issue being litigated in the second case be the same as was fully litigated by the same party in the first action. Fuchsberg & Fuchsberg v. Galizia, 300 F.3d 105, 109 (2d Cir. 2002) ("[C]ollateral estoppel prevents a party from relitigating an issue decided against that party in a prior adjudication. It may be invoked to preclude a party from raising an issue (1) identical to an issue already decided (2) in a previous proceeding in which that party had a full and fair opportunity to litigate.") (internal quotations and citations omitted).

12. Although there are differences in the way in which the sale process took place, we do not find that such differences obscure the fact that some issues are substantially identical in both proceedings.

13. The principal finding that we think is binding on Highland in this proceeding is that the price of $3,929 per share, based upon Houlihan Lokey's valuation, was a fair price. Claimant also argues that Respondent is bound by the finding that the offering price Highland made for the Credit Strat position, which was the same price as offered to the Redeemers Committee here, was unfair. But we think that finding would fly in the face of Claimant's own adviser, E&Y, who found that such a price was at the low end of a fair range. Accordingly, we do not think it appropriate to adopt such a finding as binding in this proceeding.

14. Highland also contends that, with respect to the possible sale of the Cornerstone interest, it was not in a fiduciary relationship with the Committee, which was relying on EY for negotiating assistance, not on Highland, as Highland was sitting opposite to the Committee in the negotiation. Tr. Day 5 at 116:10-117:18 (Zambie).

15. While the Committee was not relying on Highland for financial advice or guidance with respect to Cornerstone in the period between the Fall of 2013, when an offer of $2,956.03 per share was made, and the early Spring of 2014, when the counter-proposal were made, the Committee did rely on Highland, in its role as investment manager, both before and after those dates, to liquidate the Fund as rapidly as possible.

16. But by Highland's choosing to have the Crusader Funds, along with several other entities controlled by Highland, invest in Cornerstone, Highland voluntarily placed itself in a conflict position: it owed fiduciary obligations to the Crusader Funds to maximize the liquidation process, while being the control person of Cornerstone whose own interests were to have any purchase price be as low as possible. As investment manager, Highland was obligated to be fully responsible to the Committee, but could not do so as long as it also continued to play an active role as controlling party of Cornerstone with respect to the Committee's desire to sell.

17. The hearing record is that, other than making the offer in September 2013, Highland took no steps to market or sell the Fund's interest in Cornerstone. Tr. 1 347:16-349:2; 364:12-22. At meetings held with representatives of the Committee, the Committee asked about plans to sell assets and Highland never discussed, or appeared to have a plan by which it proposed to sell the Cornerstone asset. Tr. 1 349:4-22; 365:13-17; Tr. 4 55:14-20; RC-317 at 2("Mr. Jameson noted that for the remainder of the portfolio, formal strategies for disposition are not in place."). When Committee representatives met periodically with Jim Dondero, the CEO, he made it clear that he ran the sales operation completely and did not wish to be questioned or have the portfolio managers questioned as to the timing of any particular sale.

18. We find that Highland had a fiduciary duty not to place its own interests above that of Crusader, Birnbaum v. Birnbaum, 73 N.Y. at 466 (1989), but rather to subordinate its own economic interests behind its fiduciary obligation to the Crusader Funds. Guth v. Loft, 5 A.2d 503, 510 (Del. 1939) ("The rule that requires an undivided and unselfish loyalty to the corporation demands that there shall be no conflict between duty and self-interest."); Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., 457 A.2d 701, 710 (Del.1983) ("There is no dilution of [fiduciary] obligation where one holds dual or multiple directorships."); see also Carsanaro v. Bloodhound Technologies, Inc., 65 A.3d 618 (Del. 2013). Highland's failure to subordinate its own interests to those of the Committee led directly to its failure to engage in a fair negotiating process with the Committee. By failing to do so, Highland breached its fiduciary duty to the Fund. Caruso v. Metex Corp., 1992 WL 237299, at *16 (E.D.N.Y. July 30, 1992), People ex rel. Spitzer v. Grasso, 50 A.D.3d 535, 546 (1st Dep't 2008). That breach of fiduciary duty was a continuing offense through the period of time that Highland was the investment manager of the Crusader Fund, as Highland never itself took, or authorized Cornerstone to take, any action in response to the counter-offer that was made in February 2014.

19. Highland argues that the Committee must overcome the business judgment rule that "the defendant [fiduciaries] have acted on an informed basis and in the honest belief they acted in the best interest of the [client]," citing CVC Claims Litig. LLC v. Citicorp Venture Capital Ltd., No. 03 CIV. 7936 (DAB), 2007 WL 2915181, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 4, 2007), in turn citing Aronson v. Lewis, 473 A.2d 805, 812 (Del.1984)("While each director must meet this obligation, a decision made by the board of directors will be presumed, under the business judgment rule, to have been made 'on an informed basis, in good faith, and in the honest belief that the action taken was in the best interest of the company,' unless the plaintiff shows that the presumption does not apply.").

20. But here, we find that Highland's decisions regarding the purchase of the Cornerstone shares from the Crusader Funds — from the offer to purchase, the ignoring of the counteroffer, and the failure to engage in or authorize a negotiation process — were made with the willful intent to benefit itself and not the Crusader Funds investors. See JX-19; Tr. 1 379:17-380:8. The Business Judgment Rule does not protect Highland or its officers from scrutiny for alleged breaches of fiduciary duty under these circumstances.

21. The question then is what is the appropriate price at which the sale should take place. "[I]n determining whether a fiduciary has acted prudently, a court may examine a fiduciary's conduct throughout the entire period during which the investment at issue was held. The court may then determine, within that period, the 'reasonable time' within which divesture of the imprudently held investment should have occurred. What constitutes a reasonable time will vary from case to case and is not fixed or arbitrary. The test remains 'the diligence and prudence of prudent and intelligent [persons] in the management of their own affairs' (id., at 511 [citations omitted])." Matter of Estate of Janes, 90 N.Y.2d 4, 54 (1997); Public Service Co. of Colorado v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 577 F.Supp. 92, 107 (S.D.N.Y.1983) (Lumbard, CJ, sitting by designation)("where there is no sale, it is impossible to fix exactly the moment by which the loan should have been sold or the amount that could have been obtained; "[p]robably the only rule is that the court will use its common sense and determine what under all the circumstances it is fair to say that the trustee ought to have received if he had done his duty in selling the property within a reasonable time," (quoting Scott on Trusts)).

22. To satisfy its obligation under the Plan to liquidate the Fund's assets as rapidly and as fairly as possible, Highland did not have "to cause Cornerstone to purchase the Fund's Cornerstone shares for a specific price and at the specific time demanded by the Committee…," Highland Post-Hearing Brief at 11, but it did have a duty to place the Funds' interest above its own and to obtain the best price possible for the Funds' Cornerstone interest. Thus, when it decided it wished to make an offer to purchase the Funds' Cornerstone shares, it was obligated to do so at the fair market value and not to attempt to take advantage of the fact that it had placed the funds in a position where it was the only available buyer.

23. Highland argues that it makes no sense to assess damages based upon a hypothetical sale of the Cornerstone asset, because, first, since the shares have never been sold, there is no realized loss; and, second, "other than Cornerstone's $43.8 million offer, there is no evidence of any other willing buyer for Cornerstone's assets at any price."

24. We reject the first argument because it ignores what we have found to be the breach of fiduciary duty —the obligation to pursue and consummate a sale at a fair and reasonable price. The Fund was damaged by reason of Highland's failure to fulfill that obligation.

25. As to the second argument, Highland defeats its own argument by pointing out that, in the real world, there is only Cornerstone available as a buyer. But, because of Highland's own financial objectives, there has been no indication since April 2014 when it failed to authorize a counteroffer that Highland was interested in directing Cornerstone, which it controlled, to make an offer to purchase the shares at anything other than a bargain basement and unfair price.

26. Using our equitable powers, we believe that a fair price can be derived by using the fair market value of the shares of $3,929 per share, based upon Houlihan's valuation prepared on July 15, 2013, adjusted downward by 10-25% by the year-end discount caused by several factors cited by E&Y. The average of that discount results in a fair market valuation of $3,241.43, which amount is what we find should have been offered to pay for the Cornerstone shares.

27. We order that Highland pay to the Committee $3,241.43 per share, or $48,070,407, and order that the Committee simultaneously cause the Crusader Fund to surrender its interest in Cornerstone to Highland.

28. With respect to an award of pre-judgment interest, "[a]lthough an action for breach of fiduciary duty is generally considered of an equitable nature, '[e]ven on [such] a claim with equitable underpinnings ... prejudgment interest [is] mandatory where the only relief sought was compensatory damages.' Lewis v. S.L. & E., Inc. 831 F.2d 37, 39 (2d Cir.1987) (citing Spector v. Mermelstein, 485 F.2d 474, 481 (2d Cir.1973))(emphasis added).

29. Regarding the rate of pre-judgment interest to be applied, Claimant argues for the application of New York's statutory rate of interest of 9% as most appropriate. Under CPLR §5001(a), "in an action of an equitable nature, interest and the rate and date from which it shall be computed shall be in the court's discretion." See 212 Inv. Corp. v. Kaplan, 16 Misc. 3d 1125(A), at *9 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Cnty. 2007); Panix Prods., Ltd v. Lewis, id; Summa Corp. v. Trans World Airlines, 540 A.2d 403, 409 (Del. 1988).

30. Under CPLR §5004, New York applies pre-judgment interest at 9%, simple annual interest. Under the circumstances here, where the breach of fiduciary duty deprived the investors of the Crusader Funds of a significant distribution and partial return of their equity, we exercise our "broad discretion, subject to principles of fairness, in fixing the rate to be applied," Summa Corp. v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., id., and we award interest at the statutory rate of 9%, simple annual interest, pursuant to New York law, from April 15, 2014, through the date of this Partial Final Award. We pick this date as it is the date by which we believe Highland and/or Cornerstone (as controlled by Highland) should have responded to the Committee offer.

IV. The Return of the Deferred Fees

A. Under §§2.02 and 6.02 of the Plan, if Highland distributed $1.7 billion within 43 months of the Plan's Effective Date, Highland could obtain $10 million in Deferred Fees that had been placed in the special account at the outset to incentivize Highland's rapid liquidation. There is no question that Highland did not meet that goal by the 43rd month and, thus, in Count Three of its Amended Demand, the Committee seeks the immediate return to the Fund of those proceeds by a declaration that the Fund should distribute the right to receive payment in respect of the funds in the Deferred Fee Account to the Consenting Compulsory Redeemers.

B. Highland objects on the ground that the UBS TRO eliminated the 47-month schedule applicable to the Deferred Fee Account, invoking the Impossibility Doctrine, discussed in detail above, and argues that, upon the eventual complete liquidation of the Fund, it will be entitled to the $10 million in the Deferred Fee Account.

C. For reasons set forth earlier, we reject the argument that, under the Impossibility Doctrine, Highland was relieved of the requirement that it achieve complete liquidation of the Fund within 43 months, and, thus, is entitled to the $10 million in Deferred Fees upon complete liquidation. Highland had the opportunity to achieve the complete liquidation despite the duration of the UBS TRO, but chose, for its own reasons, not to do so. The Impossibility Doctrine does not provide a basis for granting Highland affirmative relief.

D. We order the return to the Crusader Fund the $10 million in the Deferred Fee Account.

V. Counterclaims

A. Respondent has brought two principal counterclaims: first, it seeks to recover the remainder of Deferred Fees to which it says it is entitled now because Claimant should have completed the complete liquidation of the Fund's assets by December 31, 2017, at the latest; and, second, it seeks damages against the Committee for breach of the Plan and of its fiduciary duties to Highland by failing to oversee A&M's liquidation of Fund assets and for approving, without adequate, if any, scrutiny, A&M's fees, said to be exorbitant.

B. As to the breach of fiduciary duty claim, the fiduciary duty relation is said to arise from Highland's status as an investor in the Crusader Funds. Highland's Post-Hearing Brief at at 3-5. However, we have previously stricken those portions of Highland's Amended Counterclaim that alleged it was suing as an investor. Panel Order, April 1, 2018, at 4. Furthermore, even assuming that, as an investor, Highland had standing to bring a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, as stated below, we find that no breach of duty has been proved with respect to any of the allegations in Respondent's Amended Counterclaim.

C. Specifically, we have examined the record thoroughly and, aside from the testimony of Highland's expert, James Finkel, and its former portfolio manager, Mr. Jameson, there is insufficient evidence of a purposeful and wrongful delay in liquidation or a failure by the Committee to oversee and scrutinize A&M's performance, nor any activity of A&M that the Committee aided and abetted that was proved wrongful.

D. Mr. Finkel had a distinguished thirty-plus year career in capital markets, investment banking, and investment advisory work, including as a liquidator of the assets of alternative investment funds. But his opinion that Highland or any reasonable manager or liquidator would have completed liquidation by the end of 2017, at the latest, was not based on anything more than his unverified judgment, and not on a close examination of the facts in this record. For example, he conceded that, in reaching his opinions, he didn't consider the amount of information A&M provided to investors, didn't review A&M's time records or evaluate the quality of the work performed by A&M, and didn't consider the consequences of the lack of cooperation of Highland with A&M, among other critical deficiencies. Tr.10 367:10-372:3. Similarly, his opinion that, because of what he regarded as a flawed compensation structure, A&M's primary focus was on the time it spent on projects, rather than on results achieved, was based on one assumption that time-based work is, inevitably, less likely to be focused, an assumption that we reject as a sound basis of criticism of A&M's contribution. We find that Mr. Finkel' s opinions were not soundly based and we reject them.

E. Mr. Jameson worked for Highland for almost seven years as co-head of Private Equity, responsible for sourcing and executing private equity investments and monetizing existing portfolio companies. He testified that he was aware of the UBS TRO and had been advised that he could not sell assets during its pendency. He was aware that Cornerstone did not comply with requests by A&M for information but did not think he had the power to direct Cornerstone to do so Tr 10 28:18-30:3. He also testified that, had Highland remained as its investment manager, it would have sold the Cornerstone asset by December 31, 2017, and that Highland Capital's purchase of Cornerstone from the Crusader Fund at a negotiated price around the mark set by Highland would have been logical. Tr. 10 30:4-35:23. He also testified, in response to questioning by the Tribunal, that little, if anything, would have changed in Highland's ability to negotiate a sale with the Committee when it was replaced by A&M as its investment manager, Tr. 10 119:8-121:23. On balance, despite Mr. Jameson's on-the-ground role as portfolio manager, his testimony did not support the allegations of Highland in its counterclaims; if anything, his intimate understanding of the Cornerstone asset and how Highland controlled the process by which Cornerstone was or wasn't being marketed supported the Committee's contentions that Highland could have negotiated a fair disposition of the Cornerstone asset had it chosen to do so.

F. As to an alleged delay in the liquidation of the Fund's assets, the weight of the credible evidence is that Highland, not A&M, was responsible for any delay in liquidating the balance of the assets in the Crusader Fund after Highland was discharged and A&M was retained.

1. We note that we have previously found that Highland, after refusing to respond to numerous requests by the Committee for books and records, should make a thorough search of its books and records and produce all non-privileged documents in its possession, custody, or control on certain relevant topics. Thus, we rejected several arguments put up by Highland to prevent the Committee and A&M from gaining access to critical books and records. Order and Partial Award, April 21, 2017.

2. But, even when ordered to do so, Highland again refused to produce documents on at least two other occasions, requiring additional motions addressed to this Tribunal, Order, June 20, 2017; Order, October 21, 2017.

3. In addition, there was unrebutted testimony that Highland produced "hundreds of thousands" of documents in single-page PDF format, requiring the better part of three or more months of A&M's time to correlate and organize. Tr. 6 25:4-19.

4. By contrast, other than Mr. Finkel's testimony, there was little or no evidence of A&M's procrastinating or proceeding with deliberate slowness or that the Committee failed in its oversight of A&M.

5. We have considered all of the other factual and legal arguments made by Highland in support of its counterclaims and conclude that Highland is not entitled to recover the remaining Deferred Fees being held in the Fund's cash account and that the Committee did not breach Sections 2.02 of the Plan and 1.5.2 of the Scheme, the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, or its fiduciary duties to Highland and other investors. We dismiss Highland's counterclaims in their entirety.

VI. Attorneys' Fees and Other Costs

A. Both parties have requested attorneys' fees relating to all claims asserted in the Amended Demand, Highland's Answer, Highland's Amended Counterclaims, and Claimant's Answer to the Counterclaims. Am. Dem. at 53-54; Highland Answer, October 16, 2016, at 21-22; Highland Am. Counterclaim, April 15, 2018; Committee Answer to Counterclaims. Under AAA Commercial Arbitration Rules, Rule 47(d)(ii), those mutual demands for attorneys' fees submitted the issue to arbitration and gave this Panel the authority to award attorneys' fees, in its discretion. AAA Rule 47(d)(ii). "[M]utual demands for counsel fees in an arbitration proceeding constitute, in effect, an agreement to submit the issue to arbitration, with the resultant award being valid and enforceable." R.F. Lafferty & Co., Inc. v. Winter, 161 A.D.3d 535, 536 (1st Dep't 2018) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

B. The Committee urges that an award of attorneys' fees to it is justified by Highland's having "acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons," InterChem 59 Asia 2000 Pte. Ltd. v. Oceana Petrochem. AG, 373 F. Supp. 2d 340, 355 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (citation omitted), and that the record shows numerous examples of Highland acting in bad faith.

C. Highland acknowledges the Tribunal's discretion to order an award of attorneys' fees but opposes an imposition of attorneys' fees here. First, Highland argues that denying the Committee's request for attorneys' fees would be consistent with Section 9.02 of the Plan which provides that "each of the Crusader Funds retains obligations it has to pay . . . legal fees." HC-300 at 86. But this section of the Plan does not deal with the issue of fee-shifting being ordered by an arbitral tribunal. Nor, given Rule 47(d)(ii), would an order of this Tribunal shifting the responsibility of fees from one party to another be contrary to the so-called American rule, as both parties have sought this relief which is authorized under the prevailing rules of this Tribunal.

D. Second, Highland urges that the only basis upon which the Committee is seeking an award is that Highland allegedly engaged in bad faith and vexatious conduct, citing only InterChem Asia 2000 Pte. Ltd. v. Oceana Petrochem. AG, 373 F. Supp. 2d 340, 355 (S.D.N.Y. 2005). Highland points out that the Court in InterChem Asia justified an arbitrator's imposition of an award of attorneys' fees because of one party's "bad faith" conduct during the arbitration, principally concerning discovery issues. Here, the Committee cites seven examples of alleged bad faith, but only one dealt with such conduct during the arbitration, "failing to provide the Committee with the books and records of the Fund, resulting in an extensive discovery process, producing records as single-paged TIFs, and resulting in a Panel ruling against them," citing the Tribunal's Panel Opinion and Final Partial Award, dated April 17, 2017.

E. We are exercising our discretion to grant Claimant's request for attorneys' fees and costs and to deny Respondent's request for the same relief. We do not base our award on any concern of bad faith or oppressive conduct by Highland's able trial counsel, who acted professionally throughout these proceedings. However, with respect to each of the claims on which we have determined that the Committee is entitled to prevail, we have noted above the many occasions where, during the time it was investment manager and thereafter, Highland engaged in conduct that breached the Plan, breached fiduciary duties, involved secrecy, misrepresentations, and false statements by the most senior executives, and constituted willful misconduct. Furthermore, large portions of the defense set forth by Highland's witnesses were unworthy of belief and reflect the fact that Highland knew that it had no legitimate defense to many of the Committee's claims. Accordingly, in our discretion, based on the foregoing, we award Claimant its legal fees and costs for the litigation of this arbitration.

VII. CONCLUSION AND AWARD

A. With respect to the claims below for which we find liability and direct the payment of damages and interest, if the Parties are not able to agree on the amount of damages or interest, we direct them to submit simultaneous briefs to the Panel on the issues within thirty (30) days of the date of this Partial Final Award; there will be no reply briefs unless otherwise directed.

B. We find for Claimant, Redeemers Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, on the breach of contract claims as follows:

1. The taking of the Deferred Fees: We order that, within twenty (20) days of the date of this Partial Final Award, Respondent, Highland Capital Management, pay to the Claimant the Deferred Fees in the amount of $33,313,000, with statutory interest of 9%, calculated on a simple basis, from the dates of taking in January and April 2016 through the date of this Partial Final Award.

2. The payment of Distribution Fees: As found above, with respect to each of the following categories, we find that the Respondent is liable for damages in the amount set forth in the Expert Report of Claimant's damages expert, Basil Imburgia, $14,452,275, plus 9% interest, calculated on a simple basis, from the respective dates such Fees were taken:

a) The Distribution Fees attributable to the payment of Deferred Fees;

b) The Distribution Fee attributable to the amounts reserved in the Redeemer Trust Account;

c) The Distribution Fee attributable to the amounts paid in settlement of the Barclays claims;

d) The Distribution Fee attributable to the value of the LP interests and amounts transferred to Eames;

e) The Distribution Fees attributable to the amount of margin borrowings; and

f) The Distribution Fees attributable to the cumulative nature of the calculation, as discussed above.

C. We find for Claimant, Redeemers Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, on the breach of fiduciary duty claims as follows:

1. Engaging in related party transactions without Redeemer Committee approval:

2. Purchase of Plan claims without Redeemer Committee approval: Within twenty (20) days of the date of this Partial Final Award, we order Respondent, Highland Capital Management, to transfer the 28 Plan or Scheme Claims to the Redeemer Committee, to pay to the Committee whatever financial benefits Highland received from the 28 transactions, less what Highland paid for the Plan Claims, plus interest at the rate of 9%, from the date of each purchase, calculated on a simple basis;

3. Sale of CLO interests - The Committee is entitled to judgment for the amount of the difference between the sale and repurchase prices with interest from the date of the sale from the funds. We direct the Parties promptly to confer and agree upon the total amount of damages including 9% interest, calculated on a simple basis; if the Parties are not able to agree on the amount of damages, we direct the Parties to submit briefs to the Panel on the issues within thirty (30) days of the date of this Partial Final Award;

4. Failure to settle Credit Suisse claims: We find for Claimant, Redeemers Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, on this claim and direct the Parties promptly to confer to calculate an amount of damages that takes into account the parameters set forth in the body of this Award; if the Parties are not able to agree on the amount of damages, we direct the Parties to submit briefs to the Panel on the issues within thirty (30) days of the date of this Partial Final Award;

5. The UBS litigation: We find in favor of Claimant, Redeemers Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, and award damages in the amount of 9% simple interest on $30 million from December 29, 2015 to December 30, 2016, which shall be paid to the Redeemer Committee by Highland Capital Management within twenty (20) days of the date of this Partial Final Award; and

6. The Cornerstone Asset: We find in favor of Claimant and direct Highland Capital Management, within twenty (20) days of the date of this Partial Final Award, to pay the Redeemer Committee the amount of $48,070,407, plus interest at 9%, on simple basis, in return for which the Fund will transfer title to the shares to Highland.

D. We grant Claimant's request for a declaratory judgment, seeking the immediate distribution of the Deferred Fee Account, and order the payment of the $10 million in the Account to the Committee for disbursal to the Consenting Compulsory Redeemers within twenty (20) days of the date of this Partial Final Award.

E. We find against Respondent on its counterclaim and dismiss the counterclaim with prejudice.

F. We grant Claimant's request for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs and deny Respondent's request for an award of attorneys' fees and costs. With respect to the amount of fees and expenses that Claimant seeks, the parties should promptly confer to determine whether they can agree on an amount. If the parties can not agree, Claimant shall file an affidavit or petition setting out its claim with appropriate documentation within fifteen (15) days of the date of this Award, unless counsel agree otherwise. Respondent shall respond within fifteen (15) days thereafter, unless counsel agree otherwise. There will be no reply opportunity absent leave of the Tribunal.

G. We will leave the hearing open until all issues set forth above have been agreed upon by the Parties or decided by the Tribunal.

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR DISPUTE RESOLUTION
International Arbitration Tribunal

REDEEMER COMMITTEE OF THE
HIGHLAND CRUSADER FUND,

Claimant,

v. Case No. 01-16-0002-6927

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,

Respondent.

FINAL AWARD

WE, THE UNDERSIGNED ARBITRATORS, having been designated in accordance with Section 9.03 of the Joint Plan of Distribution, and the Scheme of Arrangement, both entered into between the above-named parties and adopted in July 2011, and having been duly sworn, and having duly heard the proofs and allegations of the parties, do hereby, AWARD, as follows:

A. On March 6, 2019, we issued a Partial Final Award, finding Respondent Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Respondent") liable in a number of respects and awarding damages, interest, attorneys' fees, and costs to Claimant Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund ("Claimant"), as described, in relevant part, below. We "le[ft] the hearing open until all issues set forth ... have been agreed upon by the Parties or decided by the Tribunal."

B. In response to an email from Claimant, dated March 7, 2019, seeking clarification on an apparent omission from the Partial Final Award, we issued a Disposition of Application for Modification of Award dated March 14, 2019 ("Modification of Award").[1]

C. This Final Award incorporates the Partial Final Award and the Modification of Award (together, the "Partial Award"). We re-adopt all prior findings and conclusions of the Partial Award, except as specifically modified hereinafter.

D. We have before us the following:

[1] The Modification of Award referred to Rule R-46 of the AAA Commercial Arbitration Rules, instead of Rule R-50, as the basis for the modification of a clerical error, relying upon the predecessor version of Rule R-50. The substantive text of old Rule R-46 and present Rule R-50 are the same.

a. Respondent's Memorandum, dated March 17, 2019, requesting that (1) the Panel withdraw its Modification of Award entered on March 16, 2019; (2) cease any further attempts to award additional damages, attorneys' fees, or costs that are not expressly set forth in the Partial Award; and (3) reconfirm that the hearing and all evidence is closed and the Panel is not empowered to take any further action beyond the issuance of its Partial Award ("Respondent's March 17 Memorandum").

b. Claimant's Submission Regarding Fees and Costs, dated March 21, 2019, made pursuant to Rules R-28, R-47, R-53, R-54, and R-55, AAA Commercial Arbitration Rules, seeking an award of $11,865,181.28 in attorneys' fees and costs, including Claimant's attorneys' fees, AAA administrative fees, arbitration expenses, fees incurred by A&M, expert fees, and Panel compensation paid by the Respondent Highland on behalf of the Committee in this arbitration ("Claimant's Fee Submission").

c. Claimant's Application, dated March 25, 2019, made pursuant to Rule 50, AAA Commercial Arbitration Rules, to modify the Partial Award, issued by this Panel on March 6, 2019 (Claimant's March 25 Application").

d. Claimant's and Respondent's Joint Submission on Damages dated April 5, 2019, in which the Parties agreed on the mathematical calculation of the amount of damages and interest contained in the Partial Award and Modification of Award, subject to Highland's objections to the inclusion of any damages awards that were not specified in the Partial Award and subject to objections on two specific issues: (1) whether the Eames residual LP interests would be extinguished; and (2) whether prejudgment interest awarded by the Panel will continue to run after March 6, 2019 until the earlier of the date the amount awarded is paid to the Committee for the benefit of the Fund, or the date on which a Final Judgment is issued on the Award ("Joint Submission").

e. Respondent's Memorandum dated April 5, 2019 opposing the motion to modify the Partial Award; and opposing any award for damages, attorneys' fees, or costs ("Respondent's April 5 Memorandum").

f. Claimant's Memorandum dated April 5, 2019 arguing that (1) the Panel should award further damages in connection with the Barclays claim measured by the Fund's loss of the residual value of the Eames LP interests, either by extinguishing the former Barclays LP interests, or alternatively, by awarding an appropriate amount of damages to compensate the Fund for loss of the value of those interests, which the Committee puts at $11,589,474; and (2) the Panel should award prejudgment interest through the date the Award is paid or final judgment is entered ("Claimant's April 5 Memorandum").

g. On April 10, 2019, Respondent sought leave, which we granted on consent, to file an additional Memorandum on two issues raised by Claimant in its April 5

Memorandum, namely, that Claimant adds a new and improper request that interest after March 6, 2019 be compound, and not simple, interest by applying an additional 9% statutory interest to both (a) the damages awarded and (b) the interest accrued through March 6, 2019; and that Claimant has provided a new and improper damages calculation relating to the extinguishment of the Eames LP interests.

h. Having reopened the record on March 6, 2019, for additional submissions, as described above, we deem the record closed as of April 10, 2019.

E. Issues

a. Fees and costs

1. In the Partial Award, we evaluated the competing claims made by Claimant and Respondent regarding an award of fees, which both sides had sought in their pleadings. As we noted in the Partial Award, ¶VI.A, 52, AAA Commercial Arbitration Rule R-47 (d)(ii) authorizes the Arbitrator to award attorneys' fees if, as here, "all parties have requested such an award . . . " "[M]utual demands for counsel fees in an arbitration proceeding constitute, in effect, an agreement to submit the issue to arbitration, with the resultant award being valid and enforceable." R.F. Lafferty & Co., Inc. v. Winter, 161 A.D.3d 535, 536 (1st Dep't 2018) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); In re U.S. Offshore, Inc. and Seabulk Offshore Ltd., 753 F. Supp. 86, 92 (S.D.N.Y. 1990) ("If both parties sought attorney's fees, . . . then both parties agreed pro tanto to submit that issue to arbitration, and the arbitrators had jurisdiction to consider that issue and to award them.")."

2. During closing oral arguments, Respondent did not mention its own request for an award of fees, but "acknowledge[d] the Tribunal's discretion to order an award of attorneys' fees…" Indeed, Respondent made oral and written closing arguments that conceded that it was "not disputing the discretion that the Panel has [to award fees]." Tr. 13 444:2-3 (emphasis added). In its closing slides, Respondent also urged that "The Panel should exercise its discretion in applying the American Rule." Respondent Closing Slides at 261 (emphasis added).

3. Respondent also argued that denying the Claimant's request for attorneys' fees would be consistent with Section 9.02 of the Plan which provides that "each of the Crusader Funds retains obligations it has to pay . . . legal fees." Second, Respondent urged that the only basis upon which Claimant is seeking an award is that Respondent allegedly engaged in bad faith and vexatious conduct.

4. Respondent now chooses to oppose the grant of fees on grounds distinctly different from those set forth above. It belatedly argues an alleged lack of proof and the Panel's being functus officio to award fees.

    1. Respondent argues that the Panel "found that the evidence in the record was insufficient to determine many of the Committee's claims for damages, as well as its claims for costs and fees." Resp. April 5 Mem. 14.

    2. But that is incorrect; we did not find any insufficiency; instead, with no objection, we adopted a well-recognized method of dealing with attorneys' fees and costs by deciding entitlement before amount. See Franco v. Dweck, 87 N.Y.S.3d 5 (2018) ("Contrary to respondents' contention, the final award did not run afoul of the doctrine of functus officio, which precludes an arbitrator from altering in substance a prior award (see Matter of Wolff & Munier [Diesel Constr. Co.], 41 A.D.2d 618, 340 N.Y.S.2d 455 [1st Dept. 1973]). As the partial final award expressly reserved the issue of attorneys' fees, it cannot bar a subsequent award of those fees (see Shimon v. Silberman, 26 Misc.3d 910, 914–915, 891 N.Y.S.2d 891 [Sup. Ct., Kings County 2009])."

5. Accordingly, we reject Respondent's new positions. From at least the time the pre-hearing briefs, witness lists, and list of exhibits were mutually filed, it was clear that whichever side that was going to seek attorneys' fees if it prevailed was reserving on the specific rates and amounts of legal fees, as well as costs and expenses, many of which had not yet been incurred. To do otherwise would be a waste of resources. Not once did Respondent ever raise the question of proof regarding attorneys' fees and costs; by its silence and conduct, Respondent consented to the process regarding proof of attorneys' fees that the Panel was following, see CCA Guide to Best Practices in Commercial Arbitration (3d edition), 246.

6. Second, we explicitly denominated the award of March 6 as a "Partial Final Award," making clear to the Parties that the arbitral proceeding was still ongoing. We also explicitly left the hearing open so that the Parties could meet and confer or make submissions, including providing additional evidence, "until all issues set forth ... have been agreed upon by the Parties or decided by the Tribunal." Under these circumstances, the doctrine of functus officio does not apply. Kennecott Utah Copper Corp. V. Becker, 186 F.3d 1261, 1270-71 & n.4 (10th Cir. 1999) (Functus officio provides that, "once an arbitrator has issued a final award and thus discharged his or her office, that arbitrator lacks any continuing power to revise the award or issue a new one.")(emphasis added).

i. Accordingly, we turn to an examination of the application for attorneys' fees and costs, sought by Claimant:

a. Claimant seeks the following in fees and costs:
i. Jenner & Block Fees - $9,278,248.99
1. In support of its fee application, Claimant has provided detailed time records, billing records, and a declaration of Andrew Vail, a partner of Jenner & Block, that establishes that records were maintained on a contemporaneous basis, that time billed on duplicative, inefficient, or extraneous to the arbitral proceeding was excluded from the application, and that hourly rates, and a fixed-fee discount, where applicable, were discounted by 15%. Vail Declaration ¶¶13-18. The hourly rates are shown to be comparable to rates charged by other similar firms and consistent with prevailing market rates for attorneys of similar high levels of expertise and experience. We note that Respondent does not object to the amount sought, except on the bases previously discussed. We find the request for legal fees to be reasonable, especially given the complex factual and legal setting, and grant Claimant's application.

ii. FTI Expert Fees - $1,274,853.26; and A&M Arbitration Fees - $655,160.00
1. In support of the FTI fees, Claimant submitted a declaration, with supporting exhibits, of Mr. Vail, who affirmed that the fees reflected "services that were necessary for the Committee to prosecute its claims against [Respondent] and to defend against [Respondent's] counterclaims, and … the amounts charged for such services were reasonable given the necessity of those services." Vail Declaration ¶26.

2. In support of the A&M Arbitration Fees, Claimant has provided the declaration of Steven Varner, a Managing Director of A&M, who affirms that A&M maintained billing records on a contemporaneous basis for its services throughout the course of this arbitration, but did not keep detailed descriptions of its billed time for specific matters within that engagement. He further affirmed that he and another managing director compiled a "conservative estimate of the time that A&M personnel spent on matters that were specifically required in connection with HCMLP's failure to timely provide A&M with books and records relating to the Fund." That work totaled approximately $655,160.00, after discounts were applied to their normal billing rates. Varner Declaration ¶¶6, 7, and 10.

3. Claimant is not seeking recovery for over $140,000 in attorneys' fees and costs for A&M's counsel to pursue information from Cornerstone pursuant to Del. Code Ann. tit. 8 § 220. Varner Declaration ¶8.

4. Respondent principally opposes the fees of FTI and A&M on the grounds that "while the AAA Rules permit the award of certain expenses (e.g. administrative costs and Panel compensation), they are much more restrictive when it comes to witness costs for the parties. In fact, Rule 54 expressly divides expenses into two categories: (i) witness expenses—which are to be borne by the party presenting the witness; and (ii) '[a]ll other expenses'—which may be apportioned by the arbitrator(s)."

5. While acknowledging some dispute among the courts as to whether Rule R-54 permits a prevailing party to recover its expert witness fees, Claimant urges that the weight of authority provides that both consulting and testifying witness fees are recoverable under the AAA's rules, citing Dealer Comp.

Servs., Inc. v. Hammonasset Ford Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 2008 WL 5378065, at *2, *4 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 22, 2008) (confirming final arbitration award that included expert witness fees); In re Pos'tive Produc, Inc. v Thermal C/M Services, Inc., 2011 WL 13220365, at *4 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Nov. 18, 2011) (confirming award that included "expert fees and costs"); and Cardno Int'l Pty, Ltd. v. Merino, 2017 WL 6034172 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 30, 2017).

6. Rule 47(a) gives the Tribunal the power to "grant any remedy or relief that the arbitrator deems just and equitable and within the scope of the agreement of the parties…", while Rule 47(c) provides that "In the final award, the arbitrator shall assess the fees, expenses, and compensation provided in Sections R-53, R-54, and R-55. The arbitrator may apportion such fees, expenses, and compensation among the parties in such amounts as the arbitrator determines is appropriate." (Emphasis added.) Parsing these sections in conjunction with R-54 leads us to conclude that we have the power to award the expenses of the arbitration, including expert fees, as we deem just, equitable, and appropriate. White Springs Agric. Chemicals, Inc. v. Glawson Investments Corp., No. 3:07-CV-752-J-25JRK, 2010 WL 11507082, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 13, 2010) (confirming award where tribunal awarded prevailing party its expert fees), aff'd, 660 F.3d 1277 (11th Cir. 2011).

7. Under the complex circumstances presented here, we find that the experts were essential to the prosecution of the Claimant's case and that their services, and consequent fees, were a necessary obligation the Claimant was bound to its members to undertake in its pursuit of the claims against Respondent.

8. We note, specifically with respect to the A&M fees, that a large portion of the fees appear to relate to "time spent organizing the tens of thousands of individual page PDF files that HCMLP provided as books and records instead of complete documents." Varner Declaration ¶7.

9. From our observations at the hearing and our review of the reported rates and fees of FTI and A&M, we conclude that such fees were fair and reasonable and we find that it would be "just and equitable" and "appropriate" relief to award Claimant all of the expert fees it seeks, and we do so.

iii. Respondent does not object to the following categories of fees sought by Claimant:

1. AAA Administrative Costs - $64,750.00;
2. Court Reporter Hr'g Costs - $114,697.77;
3. Court Reporter Dep. Costs - $28,890.04; and
4. AAA Panel Compensation - $448,581.22 (to date).

b. Accordingly, in our discretion, we award Claimant the total sought in fees, costs, and expenses, as detailed and updated in section F. below.

b. Claimant's Motion for Modification of the Partial Final Award

i. On March 25, 2019, Claimant moved, pursuant to AAA Rule 50, to modify the Partial Final Award in several respects.

1. First, with respect to the Partial Final Award regarding the finding of liability of Respondent with respect to the Barclays LP interests, Claimant moved to correct a clerical error that resulted in the omission of a Barclays damages paragraph from the Partial Final Award by modifying that Award to include the paragraph set forth in the Panel's March 14, 2019 Modification of Award.

2. Second, also pursuant to Rule 50, Claimant moved that the Panel modify the award to address other clerical, typographical, and computational errors in the Partial Final Award.

3. AAA Rule 50 provides in relevant part, as follows: "R-50. Modification of Award. Within 20 calendar days after the transmittal of an award, any party, upon notice to the other parties, may request the arbitrator, through the AAA, to correct any clerical, typographical, or computational errors in the award. The arbitrator is not empowered to redetermine the merits of any claim already decided. The other parties shall be given 10 calendar days to respond to the request. The arbitrator shall dispose of the request within 20 calendar days after transmittal by the AAA to the arbitrator of the request and any response thereto."

4. With respect to the Barclays issues, Respondent contends both that Rule 50 does not apply and that the doctrine of functus officio divests the Panel of the power to modify the Partial Final Award, as the Panel would be adding an "additional award" that "represents an entirely new award of $34 million in damages not included in the [Partial Final Award] ... constitut[ing] a material revision of the award."(Respondent's April 5 Memorandum at 5).

5. First, we are not adding an "additional award," as it is clear from the structure of the Partial Final Award that a paragraph was missing from the damages portion; all other findings of liability were accompanied by a section delineating the applicable damages except for the finding of a breach of the Plan and Scheme by reason of the transfer of LP interests to Eames. In other words, we found liability in two respects but omitted a paragraph regarding the remedy for Respondent's breach of the Plan and Scheme that we had found with respect to the transfer, without the required Committee approval, of Barclays' fund interests to itself through entities it controlled as part of the settlement. That omission is a classic example of a clerical error.

6. Second, although the effect of the Modification was to add additional damages to the award against the Respondent, the Panel did not "materially revise" the Partial Final Award since liability had already been found.

7. In addition, as previously discussed, the doctrine of functus officio "provides that, while an arbitrator may correct clerical, typographical, or computational errors in a final award, he has no power to revisit the merits of the award after it has issued..." Int'l Broth. Of Elec. Workers, Local Union 824 v. Verizon Florida, LLC, 803 F.3d 1241, 1250 (11th Cir. 2015). However, we did not issue a final award; it was explicitly labeled a Partial Final Award and was explicitly subject to being supplemented by subsequent presentations of damages analyses by both Parties.

8. Finally, there is ample case law for the proposition that the Panel is not divested of power, even when issuing a final award, from correcting clerical, typographical, or computational errors. See Rain CII Carbon, LLC v. ConocoPhillips Co., 674 F.3d 469, 472-73 (5th Cir. 2012); E. Seaboard Const. Co., Inc. v. Gray Const., Inc., 553 F.3d 1, 5-6 (1st Cir. 2008).

9. Respondent also argues that the Panel is barred from correcting the Partial Final Award by AAA Rule 45, which provides that "The award shall be made ... no later than 30 calendar days from the date of closing the hearing..." Respondent urges that "the parties agreed that the final award would be made on or before March 7, 2019. Accordingly, any award made after that date is untimely and beyond the scope of the Panel's authority." (Resp. April 5 Mem. at 7). But, once again, this argument ignores the explicit nature of the March 6 Partial Final Award, which "le[ft] the hearing open until all issues set forth above have been agreed upon by the Parties or decided by the Tribunal."

10. Respondent also argues that we are "reopening" the record in violation of AAA Rule 40. That rule provides, in relevant part, as follows: "The hearing may be reopened on the arbitrator's initiative, or by the direction of the arbitrator upon application of a party, at any time before the award is made. If reopening the hearing would prevent the making of the award within the specific time agreed to by the parties in the arbitration agreement, the matter may not be reopened unless the parties agree to an extension of time. When no specific date is fixed by agreement of the parties, the arbitrator shall have 30 calendar days from the closing of the reopened hearing within which to make an award..."

11. We acknowledge that a communication from the AAA, dated December 12, 2018, stated that the "no additional evidence is to be submitted and that the hearings are declared closed as of December 12, 2018," but this statement was subsequently withdrawn by the previously-quoted language of the Partial Final Award where we explicitly left the record open "until all issues set forth … have been agreed upon by the Parties or decided by the Tribunal."

12. That language is equivalent to the language that "we will reopen the hearing." Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters Local 959 v. Horizon Lines of Alaska, LLC, 22 F. Supp. 3d 1005, 1007–08 (D. Alaska 2014) ("Where an arbitrator specifically retains jurisdiction to resolve disputes regarding damages, that indicates that the arbitrator did not intend the award to be Final. Put simply, an arbitration award that postpones the determination of a remedy should not constitute a final and binding award"); Golden v. Lim, 2016 WL 520302, at *3, *9 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 10, 2016)(holding that the arbitrator had the authority under the AAA Rules to reopen the hearing to accept further submissions on attorneys' fees).

13. Second, even if the relief sought required a reopening of the record, Rule 40 authorizes the Panel to do so "upon the application of a party," so long as doing so did not violate "the specific time agreed to by the parties in the arbitration agreement" for the making of the award. No such time period is set forth in the arbitration agreement. Finally, we interpret Rule 40 to be speaking to the instance of reopening the hearing after the final award is made, which is, again, not the situation we are in.

ii. We grant Claimant's application under AAA Rule 50[2] and formally correct the clerical error by re-adopting the additional paragraph, previously included in the Panel's March 16 Modification of Award, as follows:

1. "Insert the following paragraph at page 54, immediately after VII.B.2.f: "3. The transfer of Barclays Fund interests: By transferring, without the required Committee approval, Barclays' fund interests to itself through entities it controlled as part of the settlement, Highland breached the Plan and Scheme. We award the Committee damages measured by the benefits Highland received in excess of the amount it would have been entitled to receive from the Redeemer Trust Account because Barclays claim was settled for less than its value. In Table 11, Version 2, Claimant's damages expert, Basil Imburgia, calculated that such an amount totaled $34,661,749. RC-522. As with other amounts awarded, the Parties are to confer to determine the actual amount of damages including the 9% interest to date."

iii. Claimant also moves under Rule 50 to correct four other clerical errors, set forth below, as to which Respondent does not object. The motion is granted; the clerical errors are set forth below and corrected as noted:

1. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of Deferred Fees improperly taken from the Fund by Highland as "$33,313,000" (Partial Final Award at 14, 54) is corrected to read "$32,313,000."

[2] We acknowledge Respondent's interesting linguistic analysis of the differences between ICDR Article 33 and AAA Rule 50, see Respondent April 5 Memorandum at 5-6, but we deny the underlying premise that what we are being asked to do is to make an "additional award as to claims, counterclaims, or setoffs presented but omitted from the award." We had found liability as to two claims involving the Barclays LP interests but omitted the damages component of one of the two liability findings. That does not constitute an award as to a claim argued by Claimant but omitted from the partial final award.

2. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of improper Distribution Fees calculated by Mr. Imburgia as $14,452,275 (Partial Final Award at 24, 54) is corrected to read "$14,457,275."

3. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of "$23.5/9" and "$23.5 million" (Partial Final Award at 36, 40) is corrected to read "$23,938,568."

4. The Partial Final Award reference to the incentive period as ending on "December 30, 2016" (Partial Final Award at 40, 41, 42, 55) is corrected to read "September 30, 2016."

iv. Eames

1. In the March 6 Partial Final Award, as modified herein, we found Respondent liable for having transferred the Barclays LP interests to an entity which it wholly controlled, Eames [LLC].[3] We awarded damages "measured by the benefits Highland received in excess of the amount it would have been entitled to receive from the Redeemer Trust Account because Barclays claim was settled for less than its value." We estimated — but did not find — that amount by referring to a damages calculation by Claimant's damages expert, Basil Imburgia, who "calculated that such an amount totaled $34,661,749. RC-522." "As with other amounts awarded," we directed "the Parties ... to confer to determine the actual amount of damages including the 9% interest to date."

2. The Parties have conferred and disagree as to the appropriate amount of damages for Respondent's breach of the Plan and Scheme. Claimant asserts that the appropriate amount of damages is $29,609,015, which is lower than the amount estimated by its expert and cited in the Partial Final Award, because "the value of the Barclays interests which [Respondent] now controls through Eames is expressly excluded, as it would be extinguished and that value would be spread amongst the remaining Fund investors." Claimant April 5 Memorandum, 5.

3. Thus, Claimant urges that "the Panel should either (1) award $29,609,015 and order the extinguishment of the Barclays LP interests owned and controlled by Highland, or (2) award $29,609,015 plus the current value of those LP interests, which its damages expert estimates to be $11,589,474. Claimant April 5 Mem. at 10; Imburgia April 5 Declaration, ¶15.

[3] We found, and it is not disputed, that Highland controls Eames through an entity, Hockney, Ltd., that Highland wholly owns, and which, along with Eames, was created solely for the purpose of holding the Barclays LP interests for Highland's financial benefit. JX24; Tr. Day 8 83:21-86:13; Tr. Day 9 144:21-25, 220:18-25.)

4. Respondent urges that the "March 16 Modification contains specific language awarding the Committee a specific amount of monetary damages." However, as discussed above, that is not what the Panel did. We directed the Parties to confer on the exact amount to be awarded and to come to the Panel if they could not agree.

5. Respondent further argues that nowhere in the March 6 Partial Final Award or the March 16 Modification did the Panel award Claimant equitable relief concerning the Barclays Claim, and that had the Panel wanted to do so, it knew how to do so.

6. Respondent goes on to argue that Eames is not a party to this arbitration, and, therefore, the Panel lacks the authority to issue an award determining Eames' legal rights and obligations." Even if the Panel determines that the remaining equity interest should have been extinguished at the time of the 2012 settlement, "the fact remains that the equity interest was transferred to—and is still held by—Eames." Respondent April 5 Memorandum, 21-22.

7. Finally, in its April 10 submission, Respondent objects to the Claimant's calculation of interest on any award regarding Barclays or the other claims, to wit, Claimant's April 5 Request adds an improper request that interest after March 6, 2019 be compound, and not simple, interest by applying an additional 9% statutory interest to both (a) the damages awarded and (b) the interest accrued through March 6, 2019.

8. We disagree with Respondent's arguments except as relating to the compounding of interest sought by Claimant, which we discuss more fully below. First, when we found that "Highland breached the Plan and Scheme by transferring the LP interests to a wholly-controlled affiliate after the Committee had specifically disapproved of the transfer," we sought a remedy to deprive Respondent of the benefits that it had received illegitimately, or, in other words, to void the Eames transaction and put the parties back into the position they should have been in. Respondent may not benefit in the future by its breach of the Plan and Scheme, and the illegitimate transaction it engaged in, by forfeiting some, but receiving future, benefits through its absolute control of the entity it created, Eames.

9. Second, although Eames is not a party in this proceeding, that is irrelevant to the relief we grant. The operating party throughout all of the machinations that resulted in the transfer of Barclays' LP interests to an entity it created solely for the purpose of holding such interests was, and remains, Respondent. It is completely within its power to unwind the transfer and re-transfer those interests back to the Fund for the benefit of its investors, as we now order.

10. Regarding the appropriate amount upon which to award interest, for reasons set forth below, we reject Claimant's argument that $29,609,015 is the appropriate amount upon which to award interest, as to do so would be to violated well-settled law in New York regarding pre-judgment interest, CPLR §§5003-5004.

11. We award Claimant monetary damages against Respondent in the amount of $21,768,743, plus 9% simple prejudgment interest from the date of the breach until the earlier of either (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

12. We further order that Respondent take all necessary steps to cause the improperly taken Fund LP interests currently owned and controlled by Respondent through Eames, Ltd to be returned to Claimant within sixty (60) days from the date of transmittal of this Final Award to the Parties.

v. Interest

1. In the March 6 Partial Final Award, we awarded damages and interest through the date of that award, but then, as already referred to, directed the Parties to confer regarding all damages and interest issues. Claimant now urges that we award 9% prejudgment interest on the damage amounts awarded until the earlier of: (1) the date on which the amounts due are paid to the Committee for the benefit of the Fund; or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment on the Final Award.

2. However, as Respondent points out, Claimant is, in effect, arguing for a compounding of interest upon interest. We agree. The effect of Claimant's interest calculations would violate New York law, as an award of 9% interest post-March 6 on an amount that already includes 9% interest from the breach through March 6, would amount to compound interest after March 6, 2019. "[T]he statutory scheme [in New York] for awarding …, where applicable, prejudgment interest, does not provide for compound interest." 520 East 81st Street Associates v. State of New York, 19 AD3d 24 (2005).

3. Respondent also contends that the March 6 Partial Final Award contained specific language awarding interest "through the date of this Partial Final Award"— i.e., March 6, 2019, and that awarding interest through any other date would constitute an untimely modification of the Partial Final Award.

4. We disagree with Respondent that changing the termination date of prejudgment interest would constitute an untimely modification. Although the Partial Final Award did use the date of March 6 as a reference point for calculation of interest, that fact is not determinative of this issue. We also explicitly left open calculations of damages and interest until the Parties had fully conferred on the extremely complex financial calculations that had to be made. Among the calculations was a further calculation of interest. It is not an unlawful modification of the Partial Final Award to make, as we do here, a final award on all damages and interest issues based upon a final record.

5. Furthermore, failing to continue the running of interest through payment or entry of a final judgment could well, under the circumstances presented here, result in Fund investors with no compensation for their documented losses during that time, as well as provide an incentive to Respondent to prolong the confirmation process. We have already had occasion to comment on Respondent's tactics of putting forth witnesses who were "unworthy of belief" and an "[il]legitimate defense to many of the Committee's claims." Partial Award ¶VI(E). We will not adopt a result that would allow Respondent to impose more hardships on the Fund Investors.

6. We award Claimant 9% prejudgment simple interest on all sums awarded from the dates of each breach through the earlier of the date paid or the entry of a final judgment.

F. FINAL AWARD

a. We reaffirm the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and findings of liability as set forth in the March 6 Partial Award, and make the following awards with respect to such findings and conclusions:

i. Claimant's Application to modify the Partial Final Award is granted pursuant to the Disposition of Application for Modification dated March 14, 2019.

ii. Claimant's Motion to Correct Errors is granted, on consent; the clerical errors are set forth below and corrected as noted:

1. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of Deferred Fees improperly taken from the Fund by Highland as "$33,313,000" (Partial Final Award at 14, 54) is corrected to read "$32,313,000."

2. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of improper Distribution Fees calculated by Mr. Imburgia as $14,452,275 (Partial Final Award at 24, 54) is corrected to read "$14,457,275."

3. The Partial Final Award reference to the amount of "$23.5/9" and "$23.5 million" (Partial Final Award at 36, 40) is corrected to read "$23,938,568."

4. The Partial Final Award reference to the incentive period as ending on "December 30, 2016" (Partial Final Award at 40, 41, 42, 55) is corrected to read "September 30, 2016."

5. In all other respects, the Partial Final Award dated March 6, 2019 and the Disposition of Application for Modification dated March 14, 2019 are reaffirmed and incorporated by reference.

iii. For the Deferred Fee Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the Deferred Fees in the amount of $32,313,000 as directed in the Partial Final Award, plus prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple applied to that sum from the dates of the breaches and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

iv. For the Distribution Fee Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $14,457,275, plus prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple applied to that sum from the dates of breach and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

v. For the Taking of Plan Claims, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $3,106,414. The Panel further orders that LP interests identified in RC411 be transferred to Claimant for the benefit of the Crusader Fund or that Claimant cause the Fund to extinguish those claims. The Panel also awards prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple applied to $3,106,414 beginning on March 7, 2019 and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

vi. For the CLO Trades Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $449,375.00. The Panel also awards prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple, from the dates of the breaches and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

vii. For the Credit Suisse Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $2,735,411. The Panel also awards prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple on that sum, from the date of the breach and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

viii. For the UBS Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to the Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $2,041,664. The Panel also awards prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple applied to that sum from the date of breach until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

ix. For the Cornerstone Claim, the Panel awards the following relief: the Panel orders Respondent to pay to Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $48,070,407 for the sale of the Crusader Fund's shares in Cornerstone. The Panel also awards pre-prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple on that sum from the date of breach and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award. When the amount awarded for the Cornerstone claim is paid by Respondent, Claimant shall cause the Crusader Fund to tender its Cornerstone shares to Respondent.

x. For the Barclays Claim, the Panel awards the following relief:

1. The Panel orders Respondent to pay to Claimant, on or before May 21, 2019, the amount of $21,768,743. The Panel also awards prejudgment interest at the New York statutory rate of 9% simple applied to that sum from the date of the breach and continuing until the earlier of: (1) the date the amount awarded is paid to Claimant for the benefit of the Fund, or (2) the date on which a court of competent jurisdiction enters a final judgment upon this Award.

2. Further to the Barclays Claim, the Panel orders that Respondent take all necessary steps to cause the improperly taken Fund LP interests currently owned and controlled by Respondent through Eames, Ltd to be transferred to Claimant for the benefit of the Crusader Fund within sixty (60) days from the date of transmittal of this Final Award to the Parties, or, alternatively, that Claimant cause the Fund to extinguish those interests.

xi. For Claimant's Application for Legal Fees, Costs, and Expenses, we award Claimant $11,351,850.06 in fees, costs, and expenses as per the following:

1. Jenner & Block Fees - $9,278,248.99;
2. FTI Expert Fees - $1,274,853.26;
3. A&M Arbitration Fees - $655,160.00;
4. Court Reporter Hr'g Costs - $114,697.77;
5. Court Reporter Dep. Costs - $28,890.04

xii. The administrative fees and expenses of the International Centre for Dispute Resolution (ICDR) totaling US$94,693.88 and the compensation and expenses of the Tribunal totaling US$887,427.89 shall be borne by Respondent. Therefore, Respondent shall reimburse Claimant the additional sum of US$514,163.97, representing that portion of said fees and expenses in excess of the apportioned costs previously incurred by Claimant.

G. We have carefully considered, although not discussed in their entirety herein, all arguments made by Claimant and Respondent. Any other claims or requests for relief, made by either Party, are denied.

We hereby certify that, for the purposes of Article I of the New York Convention of 1958, on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, this Final Award was made in New York, New York, USA.

DALLAS, TEXAS - AUGUST 8, 2022 - 9:47 A.M.

THE COURT: 21-3020. Mr. Clubok, I saw you out there earlier. Are you appearing for UBS?

MR. CLUBOK: Yes. Good morning, Your Honor. Andrew Clubok; Latham & Watkins; on behalf of UBS. And I'm here also with my colleagues Kathryn George and Shannon McLaughlin.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

All right. For the Debtor, Mr. Morris, are you appearing?

MR. MORRIS: Yes. Good morning, Your Honor. John Morris; Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones. I'm joined by my colleagues Jeffrey Pomerantz and Greg Demo for the reorganized Highland Capital Management, LP. And we have today with us Mr. Seery, who will present some live testimony today.

THE COURT: Okay. Good morning to all.

All right. The Committee was an intervenor, I believe, in this adversary. Is there any appearance by the Committee? Or I should -- well, --

MR. MORRIS: I think that was before the effective date, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That was --

MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

THE COURT: I guess we have no Committee anymore. The Liquidating Trustee. I don't know if the Liquidating Trustee stepped in the shoes of the Committee.

(No response.)

THE COURT: Okay. Anybody I've missed?

MR. SODERLUND: Your Honor, this is -- good morning, Your Honor. This is Eric Soderlund with Ross & Smith. We represent nonparties to this adversary: Scott Ellington, Isaac Leventon, Katie Lucas, J.P. Sevilla, Matt DiOrio, and Stephanie Vitiello. We're just monitoring the hearing, but I did want to make an appearance and let the Court know we're here.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

All right. Well, if there are no other appearances, Mr. Clubok, you may proceed.

MR. CLUBOK: Thank you, Your Honor. Technically, I think --

THE COURT: Oh, actually, let me -- it's Highland's motion to withdraw --

MR. CLUBOK: Yeah.

THE COURT: -- its answer, so I was thinking Plaintiff go first, but actually it makes more sense for Highland to go first. So, go ahead.

MR. CLUBOK: Yes.

MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor. Again, John Morris from Pachulski Stang for Highland.

We're here today on Highland's motion to withdraw its answer and to consent to the judgment that has been requested by UBS.

We thought it was very important, Your Honor, to create an evidentiary record to enable the Court to rule on that motion.

As Your Honor will recall, at the time this adversary proceeding was commenced, Highland had just recently discovered and had shared with UBS certain facts that it had identified with respect to the transfer of certain assets that appeared to belong to entities against which UBS had obtained a judgment.

And at the time the action was commenced, the Reorganized Debtor -- I guess at that time it was really still the Debtor -- did not feel that it had sufficient personal knowledge in order to address the merits of the allegations that were made. And so we specifically told the Court and all parties in interest that we felt we needed a fulsome evidentiary record. And having concluded that, Mr. Seery on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor seeks to terminate this litigation and confess to judgment.

I've got a brief opening statement that I'd like to make, but before I do that, Your Honor, there has been one meaningful development since we last met with the Court that I'm going to defer to Mr. Clubok to report at this time.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Clubok?

MR. CLUBOK: Yes, Your Honor. Sometimes we -- development is a euphemism for something bad, but in this case it's something good. And that is we, on Friday morning, reached a memorandum of understanding with Sentinel that we believe will ultimately result in several papers that we will be -- that will be submitted to the Court I believe through the 9019 process, hopefully in a matter of weeks.

Now, that's going to resolve a large portion of what we're doing here today, but really it sort of highlights the fact that what UBS has always wanted in this proceeding is for the Court to issue a permanent injunction so that all of these assets are frozen, the ones we know about now and probably the ones we keep finding. Every time we turn around, we find a new one. By permanent, we mean until a court orders the disposition through a proceeding or pursuant to a settlement.

So this new news from Friday is good, and it really sets the table for this proceeding so that we can do this once and for all, ideally, where the Court hopefully agrees with what apparently Highland agrees, there should be an injunction, that we've met the standard, assuming we can present the evidence to you. And I would note that public interest is a factor, too, so that's another reason why we just want to make sure we have a full evidentiary record.

We will not then need to repeat this record, we can then use the same record and refer to it for the expected 9019 process, and we can be very efficient.

Also, in light of that and in light of other stipulations we've reached, I just wanted to advise the Court we do think we can have a relatively streamlined process here. For example, I am going to defer my opening statement and just let Mr. Morris make his opening statement and his presentation, and I'll defer until the back half.

We've also agreed to stipulate to I believe all of the exhibits on each other's lists. If Your Honor would like me to specifically read out the numbers, I can do that for housekeeping. If it's more convenient, just very quickly I can identify the exhibits, at least on UBS's list, and then Mr. Morris can add his as well, so we don't have to keep doing that as Mr. Seery testifies.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you for that report. Let's go ahead and get the exhibits on the record before we do anything else.

Mr. Morris, it looks like you had, at Docket No. 176, Exhibits 1 through 10 designated. Is that correct?

MR. MORRIS: That's correct. And with Mr. Seery available to testify, we'd also respectfully move into evidence his declaration, which can be found at Docket No. 170.

THE COURT: All right. So I'm hearing, Mr. Clubok, no objection to that?

MR. CLUBOK: No objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So the declaration at 170, as well as the 10 exhibits at 176, will be admitted.

(Defendant's Exhibits 1 through 10 and the declaration of James Seery are received into evidence.)

THE COURT: And then turning to UBS's exhibit list, UBS at Docket 177 had it looks like 41 or 42 exhibits, including the declaration of Mr. Seery. There's no objection, Mr. Morris, to all of those coming in?

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, briefly, we did file an amended --

THE COURT: Oh.

MR. CLUBOK: -- exhibit list this morning that we have -- that we have provided in advance to Mr. Morris. It's obviously not made its way to you yet. It's Docket No. 179. And we -- if you haven't gotten hard copies yet, you won't need them for the purpose of this hearing, but you'll have them shortly if you don't have them yet. We have extra for the relevant exhibits that we'll put up on the screen each time we refer to them.

THE COURT: All right. So, are they filed on the docket or did you deliver hard copies?

MR. CLUBOK: Yes. I believe both, Your Honor. It's 179. I have Docket 179.

THE COURT: Okay. I'm pulling it up.

MR. CLUBOK: And the hard copies, I guess -- maybe the hard copies haven't yet been delivered, but they're on their way and you should get them by -- by the end of the hearing.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: Or shortly thereafter.

THE COURT: Bear with me.

(Pause.)

THE COURT: Okay. There they are. 179. Okay. It looks like you've added some exhibits, so we're now up through 51 exhibits. Is that correct?

MR. CLUBOK: I believe that's right, Your Honor. I can -- just because there's a couple of gaps, maybe if it would help I can just read the numbers of the ones that we wish to move into -- for the record, so the record's clean, I'll just read off the numbers?

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: So, we -- UBS would like to move into evidence Exhibits 1 through 12, Exhibits 14 through 23, Exhibits 25 through 35, Exhibits 37 through 53. And with the one caveat being, Your Honor, that some of those exhibits are deposition transcripts. For those, we have designated the portions that we'd like to move into evidence through highlighting. And you'll, if you haven't already, you'll be receiving those as well. And so it's the -- for the deposition transcripts of those exhibits I just identified, it's the highlighted or designated portions.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: And all this has been shared with Highland.

THE COURT: Very good. And Mr. Morris, do you confirm you're okay with those coming in?

MR. MORRIS: I do. I just want to make a very brief note that the reason we have no objections to the exhibits today isn't because we don't have views as to the evidentiary rules. We actually exchanged exhibit lists on Thursday before they were filed with the Court. Highland did object to a number of exhibits that were on UBS's proposed exhibit list and they withdrew them. And so that's really the reason why there is no objection today, is because we actually took the time to meet and confer and to go through any evidentiary concerns prior to today.

So, with that background, Highland has no objection.

THE COURT: Okay. So these UBS exhibits named will be admitted.

(UBS Securities, LLC's Exhibits 1 through 12, 14 through 23, 25 through 35, and 37 through 53 are received into evidence.)

THE COURT: All right. Well, are we ready for opening statements? Mr. Morris?

MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may proceed.

MR. MORRIS: Thank you very much.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE DEFENDANT

MR. MORRIS: Good morning, Your Honor. John Morris; Pachulski Stang; for Highland.

We're here today on Highland's motion to withdraw its answer and to confess to judgment. And I want to just cover certain facts that we believe will be reflected in the record and to share with Your Honor certain perspectives that we have.

The facts here I think are largely not in dispute. They concern the August 2017 transfer of assets from certain funds that were under the control of James Dondero to a Cayman Islands putative insurance company that was owned by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington.

The evidence will show that the funds that transferred their assets to Mr. Dondero's -- at Mr. Dondero's direction were defendants in a lawsuit that was brought by UBS in New York and that the transfers were effectuated immediately after the New York court denied the Highland entities' motion for summary judgment.

The evidence will show that the Debtor's independent board was unaware of these transfers until they were uncovered in late January and early February 2021, and that the reason for the transfers was unknown until that time by the independent board precisely because certain former Highland employees actively and intentionally worked to conceal them.

I don't have a PowerPoint presentation today, Your Honor. I want to just look at three documents. The first one is an insurance policy. And the reason for the transfers ostensibly was to purchase what is called after-the-fact insurance. And what's on the screen now is Highland's Exhibit 1. And if we can go to the first page, you'll see that it's an email from Isaac Leventon to someone named Chris Dunn. It's dated October 2017. So this is just a few months after the court in New York has denied summary judgment, and it follows on the heels of an analysis that was prepared that I think is at UBS Exhibit No. 7, an analysis of settlement options and optionality following that decision.

Mr. Leventon attaches an insurance policy. He labels it privileged. He says that all communications related to the project are privileged.

You know, Your Honor, he's attaching an insurance policy. I know of no basis to assert any privilege of any kind, but this is the litigation team, if Your Honor will recall, that was found to be subject to the crime fraud exception in Delaware. It's the team that was found by the arbitration panel in Redeemer, the Redeemer arbitration, to have engaged in misleading conduct.

Again, it's troubling to find this document. And here's the thing, Your Honor. You may be aware that UBS took numerous depositions in this case. This particular document wasn't uncovered -- actually, no, I'm confusing it with a different document. So this document is sent by Mr. Ellington, and he attaches the insurance policy.

If we could go to Page 19 of 20 of the PDF, and let's just see exactly what this policy is. It's to insure certain funds. These are the funds that are the Defendants in the UBS action. The appointed representative is Paul Lackey, an attorney now with the Stinson firm. Mr. Lackey is the representative here. It's a policy that was effective as of August 1, 2017. And it specifically covers the UBS action.

You'll see below, Your Honor, that it's supposed to be for a $100 million policy with a premium of $25,000. $25 million. So think about it. The New York court comes out with its decision. They transfer all the assets from the Defendants other than Highland to Mr. Dondero's captive insurance company in the Cayman Islands. And they don't tell anybody.

And if we can go to the next page, you can just see Mr. Dondero's signature on behalf of the various entities. And the important point for us here, Your Honor, as the Debtors, the former Debtors, the reorganized Highland, is that Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund is one of the insureds here, and they're signing the document -- it's being signed by Highland CDO Opportunity Fund GP, its general partner; Highland CDO Opportunity GP, LLC, its general partner; and Highland Capital Management, LP, its sole member.

So the acts that are being undertaken here, unbeknownst to the independent board, Mr. Seery, and the postpetition professionals, is that there was a transaction back in August of 2017 in which the assets of the Defendants were put beyond the reach of UBS.

The $25 million insurance payment premium was funded at the same time, if we can go to Exhibit 2, with what's called a purchase agreement. This purchase agreement, you can see, Your Honor, is dated as of August 7, 2017. It's between Sentinel Reinsurance and the two funds that were Defendants. It is through this agreement that the funds transferred their assets to Sentinel.

Sentinel is, I think I mentioned, a Cayman -- right, no dispute about these facts -- is a Cayman Islands entity owned by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Leventon.

And if we could go to Pages 4 and 5, we'll see again Mr. Dondero signing on behalf of all of the Highland entities.

MR. SODERLUND: Your Honor, this is Eric Soderlund. I just want to interrupt here. I think Mr. Morris said that Sentinel was owned by Mr. Leventon.

THE COURT: Actually, I heard the same --

MR. SODERLUND: I don't think that's true.

THE COURT: I heard the same thing. Did you mean Ellington?

MR. MORRIS: Right. Thank you. I did mean

Ellington.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRIS: Thank you so much.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. MORRIS: Appreciate the clarification. We -- I do need to get this right.

So, you can see that Mr. Dondero is signing on behalf of all of the Highland entities on Pages 4 and 5.

And if we can go down to Pages 7 and 8, you'll see attached is a schedule. And what's really interesting, Your Honor, is that if you add up the assets that are being transferred to Sentinel, they don't equal $25 million. They equal something approaching $300 million. And there will be other evidence in the record that shows the fair market value at the time was over $100 million.

In other words, the Defendants in the UBS action, the evidence, and there really can never be a dispute about this, transferred what appears to be all of their assets, with a value in excess of what the benefit is under the so-called insurance policy.

Why are these issues -- we can take this down now. Why are these issues important, Your Honor? At Mr. Dondero's direction, the funds were left judgment-proof. The only assets it apparently had was this insurance policy.

This became critical in the spring of 2020, postpetition, when the New York court entered judgments against the two funds in amounts in excess of $500 million each. So those judgments early in 2020 were for over a billion dollars. But these transfers by these Defendants were never disclosed to the board.

The evidence will show and Mr. Seery will testify and the documents will corroborate his testimony that the transfers were not only never disclosed, but that the independent board relied specifically on Scott Ellington and Isaac Leventon to learn about the UBS claim, to determine the defenses that the Debtor asserted. And as Your Honor will recall, in 2020 the Debtor spent enormous time, money, and effort, as the Court did, defending against the claims against Highland. We took -- we didn't really have an interest in the claims against these two funds, but as to Highland at that point we had no reason to believe that Highland had been engaged in any wrongdoing, and we litigated accordingly. That's why this is all so terribly important, Your Honor.

The evidence will show that, at the independent board's direction, the Debtor's professionals pressed the Debtor's employees for information relating to the funds' assets, only to be effectively stonewalled.

I don't want to take the time to go through all of the emails, but at Exhibits 5, 6, and 7 there is evidence in the record that will show the Court -- to me, it just, you know, it jumps out -- the answers that were given, you know, to Mr. Demo and DSI's dogged and persistent inquiries. And you'll see, Your Honor, that these employees did nothing but obfuscate, engage in misdirection, and feign ignorance as to basic matters. We just had a judgment entered for over a billion dollars, and nobody told us about the transfer of these assets in 2017, or the existence of the insurance policy.

And we think that we know why. Because -- and this is the document that we uncovered after the depositions, so nobody has ever been asked about this -- but we found a document late last year that's called an indemnification agreement. It's a secret indemnification agreement between these employees and Sentinel, and it was dated June 18, 2020. It is hard to think of a document that could convey a consciousness of guilt more than an indemnification agreement entered into weeks after the New York court enters a billion-dollar judgment against Defendants who have transferred all of their assets to the indemnitor. Hard to imagine.

Mr. Dondero does not act alone. We've spent two years talking about Mr. Dondero. Mr. Dondero does not act alone. He is assisted by a group of loyalists who do his bidding in exchange for substantial compensation and protection.

June 2020. At the very moment that Mr. Dondero is making those $10 million of payments that he admitted to in open court back in April, his insurance company is also indemnifying Highland employees. And the source of the indemnity are the assets that have been -- that were transferred in 2017 from these Defendants to Sentinel.

Let's look at the indemnity agreement. It's Exhibit 9 on the Debtor's exhibit list. And you'll see, Your Honor, in Exhibit 9, if we could just scroll down, you can see that it's sent to an entity called SAS Asset Recovery. You'll see in the emails that I cited to earlier that Mr. Demo and DSI asked numerous questions of the indemnitees, unknown to them at the time, about what SAS was, and they all said they had no idea. And yet this is an agreement dated June 18, 2020, on behalf of Sentinel Reinsurance, where they -- where Sentinel indemnifies six individuals.

And the language is startling, Your Honor, because while Mr. Ellington has an ownership interest and Matthew DiOrio is a director of Sentinel, the other signatories to this indemnity agreement, to the best of our knowledge, have absolutely no formal relationship with Sentinel in any way, shape, or form, and yet Sentinel is thanking them for their efforts, including as an agent in connection with the preparation of documents and reports and, quote, other activities as requested by Sentinel.

Postpetition, undisclosed, and it's issued at the time huge payments of money are being made after the New York court has issued its judgment and as Mr. Demo and DSI began -- begin making very substantial inquiries as to the location of these assets.

If we could go to Page 5, please. I want the Court to be aware of the names of the signatories to this indemnity agreement. We have Matthew DiOrio. Next page. Stephanie Vitiello. Next page. Katie Irving. Next page. Isaac Leventon. Next page. Scott Ellington. Next page. J.P. Sevilla.

Your Honor, those six individuals are all over Exhibits 5, 6, and 7, the emails where Mr. Demo and DSI and Mr. Seery are trying their hardest to find out whatever information they can about SAS, Sentinel, and the assets of these two funds. These are the six people who signed the indemnity, and they're the six people are responding to the inquiries with no meaningful factual information.

The transfers and the cover-ups have substantially harmed the Debtor. The actions taken in 2017, in our view, were plainly wrongful. They left Defendants judgment-proof. They transferred assets to the Cayman Islands. They supposedly paid over a hundred million dollars for a hundred-million-dollar policy.

The Debtors spent significant time, money, and efforts, substantial resources. They stand accused all the time of, oh my god, they're spending so much money. Think about what -- and Mr. Seery is going to testify to this -- about how much time, money, and effort went to defending against UBS's claim against Highland. The mediation where we didn't have this information. The motion for partial summary judgment. The 3018 proceeding. Right? And we finally got to a settlement with them without this information.

The damage caused to the Debtor and the independent board. We sat there and we made representations to the Court. You know, in hindsight, they were not accurate. They just weren't. And they weren't accurate. They weren't accurate to UBS, they weren't accurate to the mediators, they weren't accurate to the Court, because we just didn't know. We didn't know anything about the policy. We didn't know anything about the asset transfers. Substantial damage. Chasing nothing.

Most critically, Your Honor, it deprived the Debtor of currency to settle its claim with UBS on favorable terms, and that is the greatest damage of all. Highland was forced to renegotiate its settlement with UBS because, based on Mr. Dondero's signature under the Highland Capital name back in 2017, and based on the conduct of those six employees, Highland had liability where it believed there was none. And consequently, it had to -- had to increase very substantially, by tens of millions of dollars, the allowed claim with UBS. And then -- and then stand as a Defendant in these proceedings.

We've been damaged hard. This is not -- this is not the way the process is supposed to work. The massive transfer of assets that leave Defendants judgment-proof. Undisclosed and secret indemnity agreements that in and of itself constitutes a massive breach of duty. The cover-up that immediately followed the execution of the indemnity agreement.

We are just bankruptcy lawyers, Your Honor. Our duty is only to maximize recovery for creditors. We're not prosecutors. We're not the SEC. We're not the U.S. Trustee's Office. We're not the Texas Committee of Attorney Discipline. There's only so much that we can do. We'll continue to do our jobs, and we're not presenting everything that we have here today, and our investigation continues. But if nobody is held accountable for this type of conduct, then the system is broken. And I hope that's not the case.

So, we had expected Sentinel and its owners to intervene and defend their conduct in this matter, but they chose not to, although I'm grateful that their attorney or at least the attorney of the individuals are here.

I do want to point out just one clarification. And Mr. Clubok or Mr. Seery may correct me. But the directors at Sentinel today who authorized the entry into the MOU are new directors, and Mr. DiOrio and the others resigned as the heat was being turned up last spring. They were replaced by new directors. And that's, in our opinion -- this is not fact -- in our opinion, that's what enabled Sentinel to reach this agreement that Mr. Clubok described.

But make no mistake. We don't pretend that we know where all assets are. We don't pretend that we know the value of the assets that may have been transferred. But based on the evidence that Mr. Clubok and his team adduced during this adversary proceeding, the Debtor, Highland, does not believe it can defend against the claim, and therefore is prepared to withdraw its answer and confess to the permanent injunction that was sought by UBS.

That's all I have.

THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. Clubok, I understood you were waiving your opening statement, correct?

MR. CLUBOK: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: I'll defer it to my presentation.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Morris, you may call your first witness.

MR. MORRIS: With that, we'll call James Seery.

THE COURT: All right. Welcome back, Mr. Seery.

MR. SEERY: Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Please raise your right hand.

(The witness is sworn.)

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Mr. Morris?

JAMES SEERY, DEFENDANT'S WITNESS, SWORN

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q Good morning, Mr. Seery. Can you hear me okay?

A I can, yes.

Q Okay.

A Apologies on my end. There is some construction in the background. If it interferes, please let me know. I'll try to speak loudly.

Q Okay.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, we're not going through every fact, and I actually don't even plan to share with Mr. Seery any particular exhibits, so that we can try to get through this fairly quickly. But if Your Honor has any particular questions, of course, feel free to interrupt.

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q Mr. Seery, can you please just describe at a general level your involvement with the Highland bankruptcy, including the timing and titles that you've obtained?

A Yes. In the beginning of 2020, January 9th, I was appointed as an independent director by the Court. Prior to that, I didn't have any involvement with Highland. Prior to 2008, the business I ran at Lehman did business with Highland, but between 2008 and 2020 I had no involvement whatsoever with Highland. Was appointed as an independent director on January 9th, working with John Dubel and Russ Nelms, who were also appointed as independent directors. And then in July, I believe, of 2020, I was appointed by the Court as the interim CEO and CRO of Highland Capital.

Q Okay. Did there come a time that you learned of the UBS claim in this case?

A Yes. I learned of the UBS claim before I was even appointed as an independent director. UBS had gotten a decision prior to judgment in I believe November of 2019. Prior to my apartment, I did diligence, and one of the diligence items was to read that decision.

Subsequently, in I believe it was February of 2020, UBS obtained an actual judgment against the two subsidiaries, both indirect, but CDO Funds, which was a little bit more direct subsidiary fund of Highland's, managed by Highland, and SOHC, which was a direct subsidiary of HFP, which is Highland Financial Partners, an indirect subsidiary of Highland.

Q And after being appointed, did the independent board do any work to try to understand, you know, the merits and potential defenses of the UBS claim?

A Absolutely. This was one of the critical issues in the case. This, as I said, was a billion-dollar judgment against subsidiaries, and the question was, was Highland liable? There was really no question that the subsidiaries were liable. There was already a decision and a judgment in February. But was Highland going to be liable for that decision?

UBS had theories, and we -- me, specifically -- did hundreds of hours' worth of research and work around the claims, and I'm sure my fellow directors read and analyzed documents similar to the way that I did.

Q And did Mr. Leventon and Mr. Ellington make any presentations to the board concerning the UBS claim?

A Yes. Mr. Leventon was the point person at Highland managing the UBS litigation. He had been, as he described to me directly on my first day, one of his chief jobs and one of the reasons he was hired was to help manage the UBS litigation. He reported directly to Mr. Ellington, who was the general counsel and an officer of the general partner of Highland. Mr. Ellington described himself as the person chiefly responsible for all negotiations with UBS.

So, everything to do with the underlying transaction, the ten years of litigation, and the various stops and starts in potential settlements was encompassed by the knowledge held by Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon.

Q Can you describe for the Court kind of your understanding of the structure of the Highland legal department, the hierarchy and who reported to whom and who was there?

A Yes. The legal department at Highland was a large group, headed by Mr. Ellington as general counsel.

Mr. Leventon was responsible for all litigation.

Mr. Sevilla was a senior attorney who handled predominantly transactions.

Mr. DiOrio was not an attorney but worked in the legal department.

Ms. Irving was not an attorney but worked in the legal department.

In addition, tangentially, or dotted-line, I think, basically report, the CCO, Thomas Surgent, was connected to the legal department.

And Tim Cournoyer was a transaction lawyer in the legal department.

Other lawyers had come in and out, and there was a paralegal, Helen Kim.

Stephanie Vitiello was also an attorney in the legal department.

But that was the core group when I became an independent director.

Q And I think you mentioned this at a very high level, but how did the board educate -- how did the board interact with the Highland legal group to educate itself on the merits of the UBS claim against Highland, the potential defenses that there was? Just give us a sense of, you know, what the interaction was and what the interface was.

A Well, day-to-day -- and right at the beginning of the case, as I say, a critical issue -- a ton of time spent with Mr. Leventon going through every aspect of the case.

In addition, as I mentioned earlier, I read every document related to the transaction and every one of the court decisions that had been previously issued. Many of those raised questions, and I'd address those generally to Mr. Leventon as the point person.

There came a time in January or early February, pre-COVID, so on the premises of Highland, that there was at least one, possibly two, multi-hour meetings about the UBS litigation. Mr. Leventon led those discussions, really educating myself as the lead director, but also Mr. Nelms and Mr. Dubel as independent directors about this critical issue.

Very specifically, Mr. Leventon provided a detailed PowerPoint deck which he went through. And I recall it because it'll come up later on with another deck that we found from 2017 that had an unusual font, one that you typically don't seem in PowerPoints. So Mr. Leventon presented that and walked through every step of the transaction, what in his view, or at least what he communicated to us, had happened, how the subsidiaries were set up, his statements that they were special purpose entities and that they had no assets, and how the litigation then unfolded after the default in 2000 -- late 2008, early 2009.

Q And based on the review that you've described and your own due diligence, based on the facts that you had at the time, did the independent board form a view as to its perception of the merits of UBS's claim against Highland Capital Management, LP?

A Yes. I and the rest of the board, based upon the -- both the documents we reviewed and the description of the circumstances and the litigation provided to us by Mr. Leventon primarily and Mr. Ellington and the other people in the legal department -- and I should just, as an aside, say the ones in that meeting are Sevilla, DiOrio, Irving, Ellington, Leventon, nobody else. I don't recall Stephanie Vitiello being in that particular meeting or meetings. But our view that we developed from those -- from that work and from the independent work we did was that Highland didn't have any liability for the UBS judgments. It was clear that the subsidiaries did, and the underlying documents made clear that they were responsible to UBS. But our perspective from that work and the information we received from the legal department was that UBS was reaching, its claims were only against subs that never had any assets, and that Highland should not be held responsible for any of the damages from the transaction.

Q And do you recall, at around the time of the mediation in the summer of 2020, did UBS press their informational requests for documents concerning the assets of the funds? Do you recall that at all?

A Yes, they did. They actually started earlier, and we took the perspective initially that we didn't need to provide any documents to them because we were going to really move for summary judgment. We took a very aggressive posture in respect of that position.

When we came to the mediation, there was a slightly different structure and relationship in that you're trying to work towards an understanding, so you really weren't able, between the parties and the mediators, you know, you weren't really able to say, we're not going to give you anything, so we took the perspective that we should just turn over everything because we've got nothing to hide.

And UBS took that very directly and made pretty substantial discovery requests on us with respect to their claim and the mediation, particularly with respect to the underlying assets that they claimed that the CDO Fund and SOHC had and wanted to know what happened to them. And the Highland legal department, as previously described, led by Leventon, said they didn't exist and there were no assets.

Q Did they in fact, though, identify, I think, two assets?

A Ultimately, --

Q (overspoken) and the Multi-Strat?

A Ultimately, they identified, and this was Mr. Leventon, cash that had been used for -- purportedly used for legal fees. And it was a significant amount. And that was a bit startling, because previously we'd been told there was no -- there were no assets there, so it was startling that all of a sudden, well, there was cash, but it was spent. And we pressed Mr. Leventon on that.

In addition, they identified interests in -- potential interests in an entity called Greenbrier. And that was a very confusing description from Mr. Leventon, and it didn't make a lot of sense. But if there was an asset in CDO Fund or SOHC that was owned and had value, then it should have been incumbent on Highland to discover that asset and use that asset in settlement, because, from our perspective, if there was anything in those subsidiaries, we should turn it over to UBS and try to use that to settle the litigation, because it would never come to Highland since these entities had judgments in excess of a billion dollars against them.

Q All right.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, just so the record is clear, the emails that relate to these issues can be found at Exhibits 5 and 6. They're from August 2020.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q And do you recall, in the fall, based on the information that the independent board had at the time, that the Debtor proceeded with their motion for summary judgment and their 3018 hearing with UBS?

A Yes. And previous to that, we'd gone through the mediation with two experienced mediators. It was a very intense experience. Aggressive from both our side and UBS's side. So we had gone through that mediation.

We had endeavored during the mediation to provide discovery around this Greenbrier and any other assets. Both Mr. Leventon and Mr. Ellington made very specific representations to me and to the board and to our counsel regarding lack of assets and the ability to find any assets and that there was really nothing there.

So we went through the mediation and were unable to resolve anything with UBS. The parties were incredibly far apart. And we decided to move for summary judgment. And that became a very tall order because of the complexity of the claims and the complexity of the underlying litigation.

We dug in really hard on that, and ultimately had a hearing both with respect to summary judgment -- partial summary judgment as well as with respect to estimating UBS's claim.

Q And as the calendar rolled towards the end of the year, do you recall that the Debtor was preparing for confirmation?

A Yes. We had developed the monetization plan in the late fall of 2020. We were at the same time trying to structure potential settlements with the creditors. We took the perspective with respect to UBS that it was unlikely we were going to get a settlement. And so as we moved forward with the plan, when looking at it, can see there's a lot of mechanisms that basically assumed that we won't be settled with UBS. They'll be on an oversight board, but that ultimately we're going to be litigating with them to determine what their claim could be.

Q I'm not testifying, but I do remember there was an awful lot going on in January 2021. Did you and the independent board ultimately reach an agreement in principle with UBS on the resolution of their claim?

A Yes. And coming into -- your statement about January 2021 is absolutely correct. But it really went through the fourth quarter and then January 2021.

As the Court will recall, we had a number of hearings in December of 2020 that were intense: contempt, injunction, preliminary to the plan process, disclosure statement. There were depositions. There were challenges -- there were significant challenges to Highland's management of both its assets and managed fund assets.

We discovered some significant problems with what we thought was going on in the legal department at that juncture, which led to the termination of Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon on January 5, 2021. And then January 2021 was chockful of hearings from contempt to HarbourVest to preliminary injunction, and ultimately confirmation at the beginning of February.

Q Did the termination of Mr. Leventon in particular have any impact on the independent board and management's ability to access information?

A Well, both Mr. Leventon and Mr. Ellington then opened up -- which we probably could have done before -- but opened up our access to their email accounts. And in respect of Mr. Leventon, an interesting thing happened when I went to send him his termination notice. Microsoft Outlook thankfully filled an entity called SAS Management into the address bar. And I didn't know what SAS Management was. I had no familiarity with it. It wasn't something I'd seen. So I tasked outside counsel, Mr. Demo, as well as DSI, Mr. Romey, to figure out what SAS was and why that was showing up for Mr. Leventon. That led us to do reviews of their email, and particularly Mr. Leventon, a significant amount of information that we developed over the next several months.

Q And did you instruct my colleague, Mr. Demo, and DSI to continue to pursue, you know, any information relating to SAS?

A Absolutely. What we did was we -- at the same time we were doing this, we were trying to settle with UBS. One of my fellow directors was really leading that. I didn't think there was much chance of settling with them, primarily because I thought there was no way to bridge the gap. And frankly, I was of the firm, firm view that Highland shouldn't have any liability because the allegations that Highland had prevented

UBS from recovering on its judgments really didn't have any basis based on the facts that I had at the time.

But as we continued to look at what SAS might be and whether that was an asset of the Debtor and what it meant to the Debtor, whether Debtor employees were involved, we started finding more and more information about other assets and other dealings with respect to UBS.

We did find that this SAS entity had been around for quite some time. It was, in essence, a secret entity. The legal department -- Ellington, Leventon, Sevilla, Vitiello, I believe, Irving, DiOrio -- all had SAS, my recollection is all had SAS Management emails. They were stored on a separate server so we couldn't uncover those. We could only find things that were sent to the SAS server.

Q And did any of those individuals share with you or the Debtor's professionals any substantive information concerning SAS at the time?

A None at all. What we did do, though, is because we could then use SAS to search through the entire Highland databank, we did find -- let's see how to describe it; we have a colloquial term that I won't use -- but charts that showed the ownership of SAS and the -- and that led to the ownership of Sentinel. And we didn't know what Sentinel was, but one of our outside professionals recalled Sentinel is a redeemer out of the Multi-Strat fund. So that got us looking at who is Sentinel and who owns Sentinel.

The records were ultimate beneficial owner, what they call UBOs, but because of the requirements of the Cayman authorities, ultimately Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon -- Mr. Dondero had to produce their passports and information to show the ultimate beneficial owners, but they're never actually listed as Mr. Ellington and Mr. Dondero. They're only listed on the charts as UBO 1 and UBO 2.

And that shows a whole bunch of different entities, including SAS. And apparently, Ms. Irving worked on a lot of this stuff in the Caymans for either SAS or for these other entities, notwithstanding being a full-time employee of Highland in the legal department.

Q Was -- do you recall if Matt DiOrio was involved in responding to the requests of you and your team in January and early February 2021?

A Yes. So, after Mr. Leventon's termination, Mr. DiOrio was tasked by Mr. Demo and Mr. Romey to help figure out what SAS was, what Sentinel was, and any information regarding these Cayman entities.

He professed ignorance. We now know that he was a director at the time of his protestations of no knowledge. And in addition, he, with respect to other people on the email chain, texted some and said, I've got this, notwithstanding that he didn't produce any information, even though he had been directly asked for it.

Q When you say that --

MR. MORRIS: Ms. Canty, can you put up Exhibit 10? It's just a text message. I just want to make sure the Court understands the context for Mr. Seery's testimony.

But Your Honor, while she's doing that, I would just point the Court to Highland's Exhibits 7 and 8, which are other lengthy email strings from late January 2021 where, at Mr. Seery's direction, the Debtor's professionals were seeking information about these matters.

And if we could just scroll down here, what's on the screen now is Exhibit 10, Your Honor.

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q Mr. Seery, can you just describe for the Court what your understanding of this text message is?

A See if I can see it. This is a text message from DiOrio to Thomas Surgent. Thomas, as I said, is in the legal department tangentially, but is really the CCO. This is Mr. DiOrio telling Mr. Surgent, I've got the request, you don't have to worry about it.

And so that led to a number of obfuscating emails as well as a failure to respond and significant delays. Ultimately, when -- and I'm not sure if this was before Mr. DiOrio was terminated or after he was terminated, as soon as we went to Mr. Surgent directly, he quickly provided the documents -- searched for them and found the documents that we needed on the Highland system.

Q Okay. So let's --

MR. MORRIS: We can take that down now. Thank you very much.

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q Let's just go to the next step. What does the independent board learn in late January or early February -- withdrawn. Did there come a time when the independent board made a disclosure to UBS?

A Yes. So, as we were doing this work in January and early February -- and remember, as I said earlier, this is while there's probably five to ten hearings going on that are crucial in the case. I'm giving multiple depositions. We're trying to figure out assets. We're terminating employees. We're negotiating or attempting to negotiate a transition agreement for the businesses. It was incredibly busy.

But we came across this Sentinel entity, and we came across the fact that it was a redeemer in Multi-Street, and then ultimately led us to find the after-the-event insurance policy, this ATE policy, which I'm not an insurance expert but I know enough that it's not really a thing. There's after-the-event policies that typically cover attorneys' fees in a loser-pays jurisdiction. There's no such thing as a policy where you go to an insurance company and take $100 million worth of assets and buy $100 million worth of coverage. It doesn't provide you any benefit. It's not a thing.

Q So, we did --

A But my point -- sorry, John, I digressed. We have -- we have the contempt, we have all these different things going on, and we're finding different information. And we find out about this policy as negotiations at the same time is going on with UBS to try to reach a settlement on their claim. And that was directed by one of the other directors as this was going on.

And recall that the policy was purchased by CDO Fund and SOHC. As I said, SOHC is an indirect subsidiary. So is CDO Fund. But CDO Fund was controlled by Highland. Highland controlled the GP. Highland controlled SOHC. That policy was the only asset -- I mean, CDO Fund. That's the only asset of CDO Fund. Highland's control of that is a valuable asset of Highland, but it's been hidden from Highland. Completely hidden.

We discover it. We had reached a settlement with UBS while we were doing this work, but we didn't -- we hadn't discovered this, all of this information. I think we announced the settlement with UBS at the -- at the confirmation hearing. I think it was on February 2nd. And later on in the month, as we were working on documenting that settlement -- and documenting a settlement with UBS and the Latham team is not an easy thing. Not because they're not good to their word; they're just (audio gap), as maybe I am. And so that getting that deal documented was taking a while. And we discovered this information, and I couldn't go forward with a deal with UBS, knowing the information I had without sharing that information with them, because it would have been fraudulent, in my opinion.

And so we told them we're not going to enter the settlement agreement. They were a bit shocked. And we told them, well, we need to tell you why. And then we laid out the information to them, which initially set them back to figuring out what they wanted to do, and then ultimately came back to the table to renegotiate the settlement agreement with them.

Q And as a result of the information that the Debtor shared with UBS, did UBS and the Debtor renegotiate the deal that they had presented to the Court at the confirmation hearing?

A We did. And the dates on that are March 21 into April. So we've got a decent amount of information. Not everything, but we've got a decent amount of information that maybe some of their allegations about Highland interfering with their judgment activities was true. And we renegotiated that settlement, upping the claims by about $50 million, the allowed claims that they would get.

Q Why did the independent board decide to share this information with UBS at the time that it did? Why not just take the deal that you had?

A Well, number one, first and foremost, we're fiduciaries. And we're fiduciaries to the estate. Our job is not to defraud the creditors. It's to fight hard to make sure that legitimate claims are allowed but that illegitimate claims are kept out. And we thought, both myself and the other directors, that we couldn't enter into a settlement in good faith when we have knowledge that the underlying facts that the counterparty were relying on were untrue and that we'd provided a lot of that information to them. We had represented to them that there were no assets based upon the information we had been given by Leventon and Ellington in particular.
Q Do you recall that right around the time the parties presented their proposed settlement to the Court UBS also commenced this action?
A Yeah. I think it was -- it was probably the next day.
Q Uh-huh.
A And recall that all of this is while the transfer took place two years prior to filing. All of this cover-up. All of this misdirection. All of the expenditure and the additional damages that Highland suffers is postpetition by officers and attorneys at Highland. In-house senior attorneys on the payroll full-time at Highland.
Q After the action was commenced -- withdrawn. Did the -- did Highland agree to temporary and preliminary injunctive relief?

A I believe we agreed to the temporary preliminary injunction. But we had not yet settled the action completely.

Q And why is that? Why did the Debtor agree to the temporary relief but not the permanent relief?

A Well, the information that we had certainly justified at least a preliminary injunction, in our opinions, because there were -- we didn't have all the information, but it was very clear that there had been material asset transfers and that funds were going to continue to run through the assets that either Highland had or Highland managed that would continue to flow to this Cayman entity.

And those funds had flowed during the case. And in fact, during the case, some of these same individuals, during the bankruptcy case, moved assets around in the Caymans. It wasn't as if they'd forgotten about them.

So we felt that at least a preliminary injunction to keep the status quo and prevent further leakage of assets and protect potentially liability for Highland was appropriate. That subsequently led us to do additional work, and we really didn't have enough at that time to just agree to consent to the judgment.

Q And with respect to discovery, are you aware of any additional documents that were uncovered after the action was commenced?

A Yes. UBS commenced discovery, both document discovery and depositions. And while discovery in the Caymans is not usually that easy, or any foreign jurisdiction, in my experience, the manager, the accounting manager for Sentinel was actually a U.S. entity called Beecher Carlson. And UBS and Latham did a significant amount of discovery with respect to those entities, both depositions and documents, many of which we've seen, one of which you alluded to today which we didn't know about prior to that, which is this indemnification agreement from June 2020.

And by the way, that indemnification agreement has been used. Sentinel paid Baker & McKenzie fees, Sentinel paid Ross & Smith fees, from what we've seen and what we've seen in the depositions. I think it was prior to the indemnification, there's hundreds of thousands of dollars of hit to the policy from personal expenses of Scott Ellington postpetition run through Sentinel.

So we learned about the indemnification. We learned about the payments. We learned about more of the transfers. We learned about attempts during the case to move assets out of Sentinel, calling them worthless. And it became very clear that this was a really organized, orchestrated attempt to hide these assets from the estate and prevent Highland as the Debtor from controlling a CDO Fund asset that really would have changed the dynamic of the case completely. We wouldn't have been spending tens of millions of dollars fighting with UBS, thousands of hours fighting with UBS, if we could have used an insurance policy or the assets to help arrange a settlement.

Q There was a suggestion early on after this adversary proceeding was commenced, I think it was in the context of a motion to quash, that maybe this is a friendly litigation and it's not really adversarial. Do you have a view as to whether or not this has been an arm's length adversary proceeding?

A Everything with UBS and with Latham & Watkins is very arm's length. This is a pretty aggressive group. And I say that respectfully. I don't say that in a negative way at all. It's been that way from the start. And even in this litigation post our settlement with UBS, we have a number of material disputes regarding costs, regarding the breadth of the depositions and the discovery they want from us. They're pretty exhaustive. And we have worked through a number of those disputes, but it has not been easy. It's certainly arm's length.

Q All right. Finally, Mr. Seery, why are we making this or why is the Reorganized Debtor making this motion now?

A We have spent a tremendous amount of time and money on disputes with UBS, both prior to settlement and with respect to this lawsuit. From what we see now -- and I'm sure we don't know everything; we continue to do work -- there is no benefit to the estate, the reorganized entity, from continuing to fight this dispute. I don't think we have a good faith basis to do so.

And to the extent that the injunction, a permanent injunction subsequent -- subject to a resolution can help finally resolve the issues with Sentinel -- as you mentioned, Mr. Morris, the directors at Sentinel are new directors. There has -- we've spent a lot of time working with the parties with respect to our claims from CDO Fund under the policy, a mediation in that action as well. And if that resolution can get done, that'll be of benefit to Highland and all of the respective parties.

MR. MORRIS: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Clubok, any questions?

MR. CLUBOK: A very brief follow-up, Your Honor, just to clarify a couple of points.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: May I proceed?

THE COURT: You may

MR. CLUBOK: Okay.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. CLUBOK:

Q Mr. Seery, I want to take you back to the document requests that UBS made once we had gotten to the point where you had made it clear to both UBS and to your team that you were going to provide whatever information you had.

A This was around the summer of 2020, prior to the mediation, or as we were going through the mediation?

Q Exactly.

A Okay.

Q Exactly. Okay. And just to orient you, I would like to put up what we've marked as Exhibit 57. Exhibit 57 was not previously marked explicitly, but it is a deposition exhibit. You'll recognize it, Mr. Seery and Mr. Morris. It was Deposition Exhibit 69 to your deposition, Mr. Seery. And we'd like to mark it, for the purpose of this hearing, Exhibit 57. This was UBS's first request for production of documents to Debtor Highland Capital Management, which is I think what you're referring to. Do you recognize that document?

A I do, yes.

Q Okay. And I'm going to specifically turn your attention to Request No. 8. Request No. 8 asked for all documents pertaining to the assets and liabilities of HFP, CDO Fund, and SOHC, including but not limited to -- and then there's a number of subparts. Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q And if we can turn -- and, actually, in the very first one, A, you can see it talks about consolidating standalone financial statements from December 2007 through December 2019, or the most recent period available. Do you see that?

A Yes.
Q And there's a number of other requests, but --
THE COURT: Mr. Clubok, let me interrupt a minute. Do you have an exhibit up on the screen? I am not seeing it. But I can pull it up off the docket if you tell me again which one it is.
MR. CLUBOK: I'm sorry. Exhibit 57. It's showing up on my screen. Ms. George has put it up. Does it not show up on your screen, Your Honor? Oh.
THE COURT: No. Do you know what -- just a moment.
(Pause.)
MR. CLUBOK: If I may, Mr. Morris, can you see it?
THE COURT: Okay. Yes. We're -- the court reporter informs me we have --
MR. MORRIS: I can.
THE COURT: -- something frozen on -- where we're supposed to get the document. She's called IT. But I can pull it up on the ECF, I hope. So, you said 57? No?
MR. CLUBOK: Well, unfortunately, Your Honor, this is the one exhibit that we didn't explicitly mark in our amended 179. It is referred to because it was an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. Seery.
THE COURT: Okay.
MR. CLUBOK: So we didn't individually mark this one.

So I'll just narrate it. I don't think you need to see it.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: You can confirm later.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: It is -- Exhibit 57 is the -- is UBS's first request for production of documents to Debtor Highland Capital Management. And it is a series of requests -- I'm sorry, is the first official request, or I should say the first document request, but I think even before this we had exchanged information requests as well.

BY MR. CLUBOK:

Q Is that correct, Mr. Seery?

A That's correct. Do you recall the date on this document, Mr. Clubok?

Q This particular document is dated September 28, 2020. So this would have been the formal document request that encapsulated our discussions that were either communicated more informally or as information requests.

A That's my recollection. I think this would have been during the mediation. I think the first session had already happened, and there was discussion informally or during the mediation that this would have been a document request. My recollection is it's more from UBS to more formally crystallize requests that had been made during the mediation -- during and before the mediation.

Q All right.

MR. CLUBOK: And by the way, Your Honor, I do see that this is Bankruptcy Docket 1345, I believe, if that's helpful.

THE COURT: Okay. Could you repeat the number again?

MR. CLUBOK: 1345.

BY MR. CLUBOK:

Q Mr. Seery, I just want to -- I want to direct your attention to, in particular, Subparts I and J. And this, in Subpart I, if we can hopefully get it on the screen, but if not I'll read it, it asks for a monthly roll-forward of the itemized asset listing and corresponding values requested above from December 31, 2007 through August 31, 2020 or the most recent period available. Here we go. And we now have it on the screen, hopefully, and I just read part of Subpart I. Up on the screen.

Also, Subpart J asked for all activity associated with the itemized assets requested in Items H and I. For each one, a transaction listing of all related parties or affiliated transactions, including date and amount of transaction, et cetera.

Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q In a nutshell, these requests and the prior requests that we had been discussing for the months leading up to that, in sum and substance is it fair to say that you understood that what UBS was looking for was the complete financial picture of the assets that these funds -- namely, HFP, CDO, and SOHC -- had from the time of the original dispute through the present?

A Yeah. I think that's fair.

Q And that was, in fact, very clear to you, that that's what UBS was asking for in a paraphrased nutshell?

A Yes.

Q Okay. And it's true that you tasked your in-house legal team with coming up with a substantive -- or, identifying the information that could form the response to these requests?

A Yeah, that's true, with -- with outside counsel as well.

Q Right. But you in particular tasked Mr. Leventon and Mr. Ellington in the first instance for identifying that information to provide to your outside counsel to be provided to UBS, correct?

A Yeah. I think that's fair. They were working together, though. It was going to be -- Ellington and Leventon had access to the systems and the ability to get the information. How to present it and making sure that it was compliant with discovery requests would have been more of an outside counsel task.

Q Now, prior to getting these requests, even, or maybe when you initially got these requests, Mr. Ellington and Leventon had advised you, in words or substance -- I'm not quoting them, but I want to get the gist of what they said -- that, in fact, these entities had lost all of their value during the financial crisis of 2008 and the years thereafter, correct?

A That's correct.

Q And they told you that these entities had basically no remaining value at all, no assets left at all. Correct?

A That's correct. Even more than that, initially, these were described to us as shell entities. The only assets they would have had were assets that were moving in and out of the UBS warehouse. So it was -- they weren't going to be entities that ever were, as described to us, asset -- entities that held any sort of material assets at all.

And then subsequent to the financial crisis, the information they gave us was that there was no -- there was no -- there were no assets there.

Q Yes. It wasn't just that there was a net negative value; it was that there were no assets at all, supposedly. Correct?

A Correct.

Q And yet when UBS pressed harder for information about assets, eventually Mr. Leventon started to disclose that in fact there were at least some assets in these entities, and specifically CDO Fund. Correct?

A That's correct. As I mentioned earlier, he showed us a spreadsheet with expenditures, millions of dollars of expenditures for legal fees, which was surprising based upon the fact that if these -- the prior statements that these assets had no value, or these entities had no value, how, then, did they have cash to spend millions of dollars on legal fees?

Q But even when he -- and by the way, it came as a surprise to you to learn that, in fact, instead of zero assets, there were at least some assets remaining, correct?

A That's correct.

Q And then even when Mr. Ellington disclosed that additional information, he never disclosed anything about the hundreds of millions of face value in assets that had been transferred out of these funds just a few years prior. Correct?

A That's right. Yes. It was never disclosed to either me or my independent -- fellow independent board members, or, to my knowledge, to counsel or outside consultants.

Q Okay. Mr. Seery, I just want to end with a clarification of your role and why this injunction is proper. It's correct to say that Highland is the portfolio manager of an entity we've been calling Multi-Strat, correct?

A That's correct. I'm not sure if under the docs it's called portfolio manager or collateral manager, but Highland is that entity, yes.

Q And as the CEO, you are responsible for directing the efforts of Highland with respect to its role as the manager of Multi-Strat, correct?

A That's correct, yes.
Q And just -- I think the Court has heard these names below -- the entity that we're calling Multi-Strat has also been called Credit Opportunities in the past? That's interchangeable for purposes of this proceeding; is that correct?
A Yeah. But there's a number of different Credit Opportunity-type funds that Highland has had over the years, but you'll see that in a number of the documents before the name was changed to Multi-Strat.
Q Okay. And with respect to CDO Fund, it is fair to say that Highland Capital Management had control of CDO Fund as a director and as a direct owner of the CDO Funds through its general partner, correct?
A Yeah, through the general partner interest, yes. So, Highland owns CDO Funds GP, which can direct CDO Fund. I believe we had LP units as well, but there were also third-party limited partners in that entity pre-financial crisis.
Q And with respect to Multi-Strat, in addition to acting as Multi-Strat's investment manager, Highland Capital also is the indirect hundred-percent owner of Multi-Strat's general partner as well, correct?
A Of the GP, that's correct, and we own about roughly 55 to 60 percent of the LP interests.

Q And finally, Mr. Seery, you knows there's a TRO or temporary restraining order already issued by the Court in connection with this proceeding?

A Yes. And we've adhered to that order.

Q But absent having that order, you would have had -- you would have felt obligated previously to transfer funds that are currently being restrained by this order, correct?

A That's correct. Our perspective of the documents and the role of the collateral manager is that, at least with respect to Multi-Strat, but also with respect to funds that we turn over to trustees on certain CLOs, which then flow to -- could flow to Sentinel without the TRO, those would have flowed, those funds.

Q Okay. Thank you, Mr. Seery.

MR. CLUBOK: I have nothing further.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MORRIS: No redirect, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Then I have a couple of questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COURT

THE COURT: I just want to make sure I understand the relevance of this line of questioning about Multi-Strat. I remember Multi-Strat. There was an adversary proceeding that I just had in front of me last week, a motion to dismiss. So I remember what it is. It was a fund that, among other things, or maybe it mainly owned the viaticals. But I'm trying to understand the significance of Multi-Strat to these two funds we're talking about right now.

THE WITNESS: So, I'll be happy to walk you through, Your Honor. Multi-Strat, when the case started, owned certain life policies.

THE COURT: Right.

THE WITNESS: It owned some other assets as well, and it owned a lot of MGM. The life policies -- and it's not fair to call them a portfolio. They are -- they were eleven policies on eight lives. When the case started, the premiums on those policies were substantial, and we didn't have the funds to make payments. Multi-Strat didn't, and Highland didn't, with the Committee's involvement, other than an initial payment and to keep the policies alive, didn't have the funds to invest in Multi-Strat.

So Multi-Strat ran an auction and sold those policies above the market value. So it was a full, open auction, it was a successful auction, and it was sold for more than the values that had been maintained by Highland prior to the filing.

As an aside, or there's two asides, one is part of the reason you had to get rid of the -- or sell the Multi-Strat policies was that they were security for a loan to NexBank. And so that loan had to get paid off to free up value to Multi-Strat. Multi-Strat is a separate fund that Highland manages that, in addition, fast forward, no one -- there hasn't been an event on those policies since we sold them in the first quarter of 2020. That means no one passed away up until at least a month or so ago, and premiums would have been in excess of $22 million by now, which Multi-Strat didn't have. So that's the life policy part of that.

In addition, as I said, Multi-Strat owned other assets, including MGM. Also, some of that was secured or provide security to NexBank for a loan that Multi-Strat had taken out previously.

The reason Multi-Strat took out a loan, my recollection is, a number of investors in Multi-Strat had tried to redeem. Most of those were offshore investors in either Australia or Japan, and basically Highland told them, Thanks for your redemption, but we're not paying you. We're not closing the fund down. And the documents allowed those redeemed interests to sit out there, and they basically functioned like non-cumulative preferred, meaning they didn't increase in interest rate but they had a fixed claim.

Amongst those redeemers was Sentinel. And so when we learned about the Sentinel involvement, we didn't really know who Sentinel was, one of our outside advisors said, They're one of the redeemers in Multi-Strat. That got us looking even further.

But Multi-Strat's involvement in this litigation, or the UBS litigation, relates to some fraudulent conveyances that UBS alleged that happened back in 2009, 2008-2009, where Multi-Strat and other funds were making contributions in to try to support the UBS transaction from the Highland perspective, and then when it looked like that transaction wasn't going to work out, a bunch of those assets went back out.

There was a so-called -- it was very oddly named -- but basically a note transaction. A bunch of assets went in, Multi-Strat and other entities got a note, and then there was basically -- I forget what they called it, but it wasn't a -- they didn't call it satisfaction. It was basically they ripped up the trade and gave the assets back. And UBS had issues with that.

So when we sold the life policies, it was actually very difficult, because one of the buying entities had done their diligence and they saw that UBS had a claim against Multi-Strat, and unless we could get a stipulation with UBS we weren't going to be able to sell those policies. If we weren't able to sell those policies, we didn't have the money to pay the premiums, they would have expired worthless. So we cut an initial deal with UBS.

So they -- they've been in and around the Multi-Strat for 14 years. And ultimately Multi-Strat settled with UBS for $18-1/2 million. That was in the original UBS settlement.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE WITNESS: When we learned of all the Sentinel issues and these transfers, UBS took the position that we should start over and we took the position that, no, based on what we see, we've -- Multi-Strat has settled, but these other allegations relate more to Highland liability, CDO and SOHC liability, not to Multi-Strat liability.

So that $18-1/2 million piece didn't change. The extra $50 million in claims was just claims against Highland, not against Multi-Strat. And Multi-Strat has subsequently settled its issues with UBS by paying the $18-1/2 million. It had previously sold the life policies, freeing up the liens from NexBank and paid off NexBank. And it subsequently made distributions and redeemed all of the redeemers save Sentinel. That money is set aside because of the TRO.

And some day there will be more about Multi-Strat and the attempts to, according to the Multi-Strat investors, rip them off for their interests, redeemed interests. And we do have signed documents evidencing that. But we'll get to that another day.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may, can I just ask a --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. MORRIS: -- question or two, a follow-up question?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MORRIS:

Q Mr. Seery, just to make this clean, does Sentinel have a redemption interest in Multi-Strat?

A Yes.

Q And does Highland control Multi-Strat?

A Yes.

Q And is the TRO or now the permanent injunction designed to prevent Highland from paying anything to Sentinel on account of its redemption interest?

A That's my understanding, yes.

Q Okay.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, does that clear it up for you?

THE COURT: It does. And I think probably some of this was explained to me way back when I --

MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

THE COURT: -- was presented with the 9019 settlement with UBS. But, shockingly, I'm a little -- I was a little fuzzy on the Multi-Strat part of that.

MR. MORRIS: There's a lot.

THE COURT: Mr. Seery, --

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, may I ask just one -- may I ask just one follow-up question, just to tie this up in a bow, to make it extra clear? There's one other element to this --

THE COURT: All --

MR. CLUBOK: -- that I just want to make sure is clean.

THE COURT: All right. You may.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. CLUBOK:

Q And Mr. Seery, that redemption interest that is currently on the books as being in favor of Sentinel, that is one of the assets that was transferred by CDO Fund to purportedly buy this so-called insurance policy, correct?

A Part of that is. It has multiple parts. It's all covered in the memorandum of understanding. But the big piece of it is, yes.

Q Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. And another loose end I want to tie up.

EXAMINATION BY THE COURT

THE COURT: I just want to be clear on the $100 million of market value of transferred assets. I think I heard that they were not all transferred in August 2017. There had even been some transfer of value postpetition. Is that correct?

THE WITNESS: So, the transaction was structured so that all of the assets would transfer in 2017. The value -- the face amount of those is north of $300 million. The fair market value, according to a Highland tax memorandum, we didn't value it in 2 -- as of -- we didn't retroactively look back and try to put a value on it. But according to a Highland tax memorandum written by one Shawn Raver, is north of $100 million.

The -- all of the assets didn't -- didn't effectively transfer. It looks like certificates were lost in transit, which just doesn't happen very often, but in this case it seems to. So some of the assets didn't transfer.

So, pre- and postpetition, while that was going on, Highland employees were advising the trustees for those assets -- these are Highland-managed CLOs where there's a trustee in place, and the assets are preferred shares in the CLOs -- when those preferred shares were due cash, they would go to the trustee. The trustee would see that CDO Fund still owned the asset because the transfer didn't make it all the way to Sentinel, and the trustee would deposit those into a CDO Fund account. Highland employees were directing that those pre- and some postpetition, that those assets -- those accounts be swept to Sentinel.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may, I think that -- Mr. Clubok, it would be helpful here. I think some of the documents that they have admitted into evidence relates to these postpetition transfers. So Mr. Seery can correct me if I'm wrong -- and I'll call this argument -- that there are certain assets, including Greenbrier, that didn't make their way, even though they were intended to make their way to Sentinel, did not because their certificates were lost. And as, you know, that assets and any other that didn't actually make its way as intended, as they generated income, it was the income and other dividends or distributions that those interests received that were then transferred to Sentinel. Do I have that right, Mr. Seery?

THE WITNESS: Yes, you have. That's correct.

MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

THE COURT: Okay. That's all the follow-up I had. Anything else of Mr. Seery?

MR. MORRIS: No, Your Honor. Highland at this point rests.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Seery.

MR. MORRIS: I'll turn the podium over to Mr. Clubok. Yeah.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

(The witness is excused.)

THE COURT: Mr. Clubok, any more evidence from UBS?

MR. CLUBOK: Yes, Your Honor. We do have evidence. This is where we have probably a good 45 minutes. I don't know if you want to take a break or if you want me to just launch into it.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. I appreciate getting that time estimate. We will go ahead and take -- let's make it a 10-minute break, please.

THE CLERK: All rise.

(A recess ensued from 11:18 a.m. until 11:31 a.m.)

THE CLERK: All rise.

THE COURT: All right. Please be seated. Thank you. We're back on the record in UBS v. Highland, Adversary 21-3020. Mr. Clubok, are you ready to proceed?

(No response.)

THE COURT: All right. You must be on mute.

MR. CLUBOK: Sorry. Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. Gotcha.

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, can you see the title page of the presentation we're about to walk through?

THE COURT: I can. Thank you.

MR. CLUBOK: Terrific. Okay. I will be -- you know, again, for efficiency's sake, we can call the first few minutes the opening, if you'd like. But really I just want to get right to presenting the evidence for our part of this proceeding.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE PLAINTIFF

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, again, Andrew Clubok, Latham & Watkins, on behalf of UBS.

Your Honor, we start with how did we get here. And you've heard this before. But UBS had a $1 billion judgment. And very specifically, the judgment that I spent so much time that Mr. Seery has alluded to that really was the impetus of a lot of discovery initially was specifically against two entities, approximately 50 percent to each. About $531 million, the judgments against Defendant Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, which we've often shorthanded as CDO Fund, and about $510 million against Defendant Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company, which we often call SOHC.

These judgments were the product of a so-called Phase I of the New York litigation that UBS instituted back in 2009 against Highland Capital Management and some of these other funds.

Phase II was supposed to take on Highland Capital Management and the other Defendants' liabilities, but restructuring intervened, and as a result those proceedings were stayed and Your Honor knows the rest.

We have, as Your Honor knows, settled with most of the Defendants, but there was one important Defendant remaining, and that was the parent company of Highland Special Opportunities Holdco. That SOHC is a hundred-percent subsidiary of Highland Financial Partners.

And just recently, after a damages inquest and other proceedings in New York -- well, this was the total judgment, the $1.042 [billion] that Your Honor is familiar with, before additional interest -- but recently we obtained a judgment in the so-called Phase II portion of what remains in New York, and amongst other judgments, most importantly for the purpose of today, is that we have now obtained a judgment against Highland Financial Partners as an alter ego of the Defendant SOHC. So HFP is responsible for that same $510 million, plus additional interest.

And I'm getting a request to annotate, but I guess I have to hit approve, too. Which is fine with me.

In any event, the HFP alter ego judgment is now also completed.

As was well known, and you'll see that, in particular, Mr. Dondero, Mr. Ellington, and their associates all have anticipated for years that one day SOC's liabilities, SOHC's liabilities, would also be HFP's liabilities, as they now officially are.

Sorry. I've got this request to annotate that has created some curious issues here.

(Pause.)

MR. CLUBOK: A moment, Your Honor.

(Pause.)

MR. CLUBOK: Well, unfortunately, I -- someone asked me if I could annotate. I'm going to try to annotate. Okay. There we go.

In any event, we start with the judgments. Then the next thing to know about, as you've heard a little bit, is there was this so-called ATE, or after-the-event policy. And Exhibit 1 is a copy of this so-called policy. As you can see, the insurer is Sentinel Reinsurance. The legal action that this policy was aimed at, the only one identified in the policy, is the New York action, the UBS Securities v. Highland Capital Management and others. The limit of indemnity was intended to be $100 million. And the premium was identified as $25 million.

Well, Your Honor, you heard a lot about how the ultimate consideration for this policy exceeded even the coverage limits of $100 million. But, of course, that's -- you don't pay for an insurance policy with the coverage limits, you pay for it with a premium, and this premium was supposedly set at $25 million. So the transfer of assets, which you've heard already testimony exceeded $100 million and had a face value of $300 million, far exceeded the so-called premium limit. And, of course, exceeded the limit of indemnity itself.

The policy is fairly straightforward, fairly simple. It said that the insurer agrees to indemnify the insured in respect to any legal liability occurring during the period of insurance, up to and including but not exceeding the limit of indemnity, provided that either the Court or any Appellate Court makes an order of liability relating to the legal action that's insured. Notably, also if there was a settlement would be another way that the policy would be triggered.

As you've seen, this policy was signed by James Dondero in his -- what has become the typical fashion that we've seen in which he signs on behalf of every relevant Highland-related entity. Here, he signs for all the insureds, which are identified as CDO Opportunity Master Fund, Highland CDO Holding Company, which we'll come back to, and then Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company.

At the same time, there was an asset transfer, a so-called purchase agreement whereby all of these funds, and other funds at Highland, pooled their assets and transferred them all to Sentinel, supposedly so that Sentinel could purchase them, so that in turn these Highland funds could then pay the supposed $25 million premium.

And then the premium, as set forth in Exhibit 2, was agreed to be all of the assets listed in Schedule A hereto as a hundred percent payment of the premium. And Schedule A, which you saw briefly during Mr. Morris's presentation, identified every single asset from CDO Fund, from SOHC, from HFP, and also from some other entities that we'll talk more about in a moment.

One thing of note of these assets, and I'll just point out because Your Honor asked about it, is that there is the so-called Multi-Strat asset. Remember, Multi-Strat was then called Credit Opportunities CDO Limited Partnership Interest. You can see that CDO Fund, this is the Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund asset, so CDO Fund, which is the entity -- one of the entities that we have over a half-billion-dollar judgment directly against now, had this interest in what was then called Credit Opportunities but is now known as Multi-Strat. That is the interest that is now currently the subject of the restraining order, and had not the restraining order entered, those monies would have already, as Mr. Seery testified, been distributed on to Sentinel.

Just like with the insurance policy, with the asset transfer agreement, Mr. Dondero just signs on behalf of everybody. You will see all the transferors he signs on behalf of.

It turns out, or as known from the get-go, that this was a massive overpayment. Remember, the aggregate purchase price paid by Sentinel for these assets was $25 million. That was what the premium supposedly was set for -- was set as at the outset.

At this time, and this is according to a tax memo that Shawn Raver wrote, you know, about a year later when he's trying to evaluate the tax consequences of the Sentinel acquisition of -- notably of HFP/CDO Opportunity Assets, you'll note even internally they describe this not as SOHC and CDO Fund assets but as HFP CDO Fund assets. This is when they were challenging alter ego at that time, and they continued to challenge alter ego right up until we got the judgment. But you can see that internally they certainly treated it as an HFP liability, not an SOHC liability.

In any event, you'll note that the purchase price for the assets was $25 million, but the aggregate fair market value of the assets on the date of the transaction was $105 million and change. So, from the get go, they're paying, you know, more than quadruple the premium price, and more even than the limits of coverage.

As you noted, as Mr. Seery testified already, this was from his deposition, we're here because Highland Capital Management controls Multi-Strat in two ways, both as indirect hundred-percent owner, also as investment manager, and also controlled CDO Fund.

And then we're here because Your Honor, having entered a TRO, otherwise it may have already been too late to stop a lot of this.

So, what now? What now is that UBS asks for what it's always asked for, is an ultimate -- a permanent injunction. And we set forth in our response to this motion -- and, really, this is what we've asked for from the get go -- this requires a slightly different form of order than what Highland submitted, but I hope that after they hear the rest of this evidence they will agree that our form of order is appropriate.

By permanent, as you can see in our order, it means not permanent for the rest of time, but permanent until either a court adjudication of what actually happened here or a settlement agreement. And we now hope that the latter will be what triggers it, at least for the assets that we now know about.

So, what are the factors? Obviously, success on the merits. Irreparable injury. Weighing of harms. And the public interest. And these are the familiar factors recently articulated in the Environmental Texas Citizen Lobby case from the Fifth Circuit, 824 F.3d 507.

So, let's talk about success on the merits. Why will UBS win? Not just likely to, but will win on the merits if we proceed?

There's really two ways for UBS to prevail here. You could look at it either way. Either the policy was just pure fraud and everything needs to be unwound. Or the policy was valid, valid, but there was about an $80 million (indecipherable) overpayment. In other words, it may well be fair that a $25 million ATE policy could have purchased a $100 million -- a $100 million after-the-event coverage at that time. As we've seen, they didn't pay $25 million. They paid $105 million.

So these are two different theories that both result in effectively the same place.

Now, we're not claiming simply constructive fraud, or we wouldn't be claiming simply constructive fraud at the end of the day. This is -- this goes into actual fraud. And as a result, we're going to go through the factors, the so-called badges of fraud. And these badges are from New York precedent. And they are from the Matter of Gard Enter. v. Block, most recently articulated, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4175. But they very much overlap with the badges of actual fraud that Texas and the Fifth Circuit have identified very recently in the Matter of Alabama & Dunlavy, 983 F.3d 766. That's a Fifth Circuit 2020 case.

These particular ones that we have on the screen on Slide 12 are the actual ones identified from -- by New York, and we think New York law applies because the fraud was conducted through the Bank of New York and was directed at the New York proceedings. However, you could also argue that Texas law applies because clearly the continuing fraud that continued even after the restructuring has affected this bankruptcy.

So, under either way of looking at it -- and normally you don't need to, of course, show each one of these; you show some of these -- you'll see that literally every one of these, and every one to the extent it's slightly articulated differently in Texas, have all been demonstrated by the evidence that we've obtained. So we're going to briefly walk through those.

We begin with knowledge of the claim. This is obvious. That the timing -- and by the way, a lot of these factors overlap, because it's like one factor is whether you had knowledge of a claim in anticipation of a transfer. Another is suspicious timing of a transfer. So some of these, as you can see, overlap.

But certainly knowledge of the claim. In March of 2017, UBS had defeated all or virtually all of Highland and the Funds' arguments on summary judgments. And they had a host of supposed defenses on liability that they claimed they were going to win on summary judgment. They were, I believe, all or virtually all overruled. That ultimately was appealed, and in New York you can take interlocutory appeals much more liberally than other jurisdictions, so they were able to delay the trial for another year through interlocutory appeal of the denial of summary judgments.

This is the world they were facing in March of 2017. In a very thorough opinion, Justice Friedman and the Supreme Court of New York had overruled their -- rejected their summary judgment claims.

So remember that date, March -- that's March 2017.

So we asked Mr. Leventon, let's start with liability and then we'll talk about damages. Did you ever give a recommendation that UBS was likely to win on its breach of contract claim against CDO Fund and SOHC in Phase I?

Answer, Yes, I did.

Question, What was that recommendation?

Answer, That liability was likely to be found.

Question, Who did you make that to?

Answer, I don't recall. It certainly would have been -- well, I don't recall who it was.

Question, You said certainly would have been.

And then he answered, No, I believe it probably was Mr. Ellington and Mr. Dondero.

Later in his deposition he was asked, How many times did you have discussions with Mr. Dondero in which you expressed your view that liability was likely to be determined against CDO Fund and SOHC? He claimed he didn't recall. And then he said, Well, it would have been more than one and probably less than five.

Likewise, Mr. Ellington testified. We asked him, You said a number of times that it didn't surprise you at all about the size or the magnitude of the damages verdict, correct?

He answered, Correct.

Question, And you had warned Mr. Dondero, in words or substance, that this was likely to occur before the verdict came, correct?

Answer, Yes.

So, not only did they obviously know about the claim, but they had, you know, the individuals, Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon, who were tasked with responding to the claim and running the litigation in-house, had formed opinions about the likely loss and had shared those with each other and certainly with Mr. Dondero.

In the course of purchasing this after-event, you know, so-called after-the-event policy, they were asked by Beecher Carlson -- you're going to find out that Beecher Carlson is the managing -- insurance managing agent for Sentinel. And they were asked at some point, well, you know, what's up with these claims? Or can you give us an analysis of them? And there's an email exchange between Mr. Leventon and then Mr. Sevilla, who at the time was another former assistant general counsel in the Highland legal department. And in that exchange, which they prepared to be able to send on to Sentinel's representative, Mr. Leventon notes, The claims against CDO Fund and HFP and affiliates are very strong. They are guaranty claims. The Defendants' primary responsibility will be to contest the amount of damages.

And they note that it's $686 million at that time from February of 2009, accumulating interest. And obviously the billion-dollar judgment, much of it is interest. And they noted how CDO Fund was a guarantor of 49 percent. And, again, by the way, HFP/Affiliates are 51 percent guarantors.

At this time, they were insisting, demanding, putting on evidence in court that supposedly HFP and SOHC were not at all alter egos, that they were not related, they shouldn't be treated as one. But internally, when they wanted to pool the assets of HFP and SOHC to purchase this so-called policy, and then when they wanted to justify it to Beecher, they're always talking about it as if -- as if it's HFP, as one unified alter ego.

So that's just a -- one of the many sort of side let's just say issues that are uncovered by this whole series of events.

In any event, that's our main story. At that point, and the next thing to see or badge of fraud is the transferor's inability to pay.

Well, at this time, these funds, the HFP and CDO Funds, who are the main Defendants, HFP through its alter ego, SOHC, at that time, were insolvent. And they were insolvent -- at least, they had declared to their investors they were insolvent back in 2009. And check -- and look at this. This is the HFP letter that went to its investors in 2009: Due to events and circumstances described in this letter, we've concluded that as of December 31, 2008, it's likely that all future inflows of cash to HFP will be used to pay creditors and there is no prospect of return to holders of HFP.

So, first of all, they're telling their holders of HFP, hey, all we've got left are creditors. And by the way, other documents, and we've submitted them into the record (indecipherable) and they're talked about in the depositions, the only major creditor left is UBS. If UBS's claim had really been denied or if they had prevailed, HFP would have actually finished in the black, not in the red.

So they're telling their investors, hey, we can't pay you, we're insolvent because we have this giant claim to UBS. Of course, they've never paid a single penny to UBS. HFP has not directly.

Meanwhile, CDO Fund, the same thing. They're telling their investors, yes, we're also insolvent. And explained to their investors, of, look, all of the Fund's available assets will be distributed to the Fund's remaining (indecipherable) and counterparties and other senior and trade creditors in an orderly liquidation.

Of course, that doesn't happen. None of CDO Funds -- and you've seen the CDO Funds that were belatedly identified to Mr. Seery in 2020, and you've also seen that lengthy list of funds or assets that CDO Fund had back in 2017. They obviously had this post-2009. They have told their investors, hey, everything we've got left is going to be distributed to our creditors, but instead we know now that they've funneled it to Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington's Cayman entity.

Another badge of fraud. Suspicious timing in anticipation of litigation. This plan was all hatched -- remember, March '17 is when they lost summary judgment. This plan is hatched just a few weeks later, in April of '17. And this is the so-called settlement analysis that sort of lays out the scheme. And this is a document that I believe was prepared by Mr. Leventon and Ms. Vitiello, at Mr. Ellington's direction, I believe. And it's Exhibit 7 in the record.

And it notes -- this is why they were trying to justify why they should do this ATE policy. And they say, well, if UBS wins, Highland is going to lose all the assets again in HFP and CDO Fund.

And by the way, of particular note, the one asset they made particular note of: HFP assets include a $32 million DAF note payable. Put a pin in that. And remember, why are they so intently concerned? Of all the $300 million of face value assets, the one that gets particular attention in this presentation is a $32 million DAF note payable.

That note, by the way, we now have come to learn, is an entity which Your Honor is familiar with, I think it's been called CLO Holdco or CLO entity, and it's also known as the DAF. That note was owed to CDO Fund because of a prior transfer, probab... you know, of -- or I do know that we're -- I'm sure we'll dig into. And so they're holding this $32 million note that the DAF owes them, and they note that, if Highland doesn't settle, Highland is going to lose all the assets, including that particular $32 million DAF note.

It's also noted that Highland will face years of fraudulent transfer claims through the Highland structure, and HCMLP will face clawback of $9 million and liability to backstop HFP CDO Fund for up to $1.2 billion.

This was the view of the legal department. Obviously, never shared with us during the litigation, but we've come to understand never shared with Mr. Seery or with Mr. Morris, right? Their team, right? This is -- this is all -- this document is uncovered after Mr. DiOrio is fired, after everyone is fired, I believe, related to this, and then they happen to find this document either on a desk or through that email search that you heard about.

Side note. If Highland were to win, you can see below, then it would show that HFP is solvent. That would have reduced -- reversed the tax write-off and would have perhaps exposed them to tax fraud or to at least a massive payment for prior taxes.

So, a lot going on here. But, again, let's get back to the direct impact on UBS and then, later, Highland.

So, this is the settlement analysis that was prepared to support this whole ATE scheme. And here's the structure that's laid out. Okay. And this is before the actuaries have gone to work. This is before they've put together the actual documents. This is April of 2017, when the scheme is first hatched. And it says, Step 1. HFP -- once again, HFP, CDO Fund -- will buy a $100 million ATE policy from Sentinel. The ATE premium will be all assets in HFP CDO Fund.

It doesn't say, gee, we'll go find out what the premium is, or we'll go check with an actuary and see what it should be, or we'll price this thing out and find out what the likelihood is of buying such a helpful insurance policy at this time. Nope. It's just, The premium is going to be whatever assets are left that we can round up. That's the plan from the get go. And it's suspiciously timed right after summary judgment has been lost in anticipation of trial.

The close relationship amongst the parties who devised this plan. Mr. Ellington -- that's putting it mildly. Mr. Ellington is the one who devised the plan. Says the idea -- we asked him, Who had the idea? He said, I had that initial conversation with Mr. Leventon because it was my idea.

Question, It was your idea to have Sentinel issue an insurance policy with respect to the UBS litigation that was then pending in New York, correct?

Answer, Yes.

This is from Mr. Leventon's deposition transcript, 86:21 through 87:6, which has been marked and included as part of the designations for Mr. Ellington.

Mr. Leventon was then asked, Who made the decision to obtain the policy? So, Mr. Ellington had come up with the idea, but of course, we all know who's the ultimate decider at Highland.

Mr. Leventon says, My understanding is that it was Mr. Dondero who made that decision.

What's that understanding based on?

That was communicated to him by Mr. Ellington.

When?

Back around the time, probably right after the policy was implemented.

Of course, there is a very close relationship, because Dondero and Ellington own several. This is Mr. Ellington. This is a -- this is an org chart for Sentinel. And you can see it was notarized -- this was produced to Sentinel back in -- or provided, I believe, to the regulators in the Caymans in January of 2018.

So this is the way things looked back at the end of '17 when these actions were taken. And you can see that Mr. Ellington has a 30 percent ownership interest in Sentinel, although he was only given a 9 percent vote. Mr. Dondero had a 70 percent ownership interest ultimately through a bunch of, you know, intermediary entities, but yet a 91 percent vote in how Sentinel would be operated.

And that's it. These are the two so-called UBOs or ultimate beneficial owners. Sometimes they're listed on org charts as UBO 1 and UBO 2. But UBO 1 and UBO 2 are simply Mr.

Ellington and Mr. Dondero, who collectively own a hundred percent of Sentinel.

Remember, this is the scheme. We're going to pool all of HFP and CDO Fund's assets, whatever they amount to, send them off to Sentinel, supposedly for this hundred-million-dollar ATE policy.

And this was Beecher Carlson. Again, it's Sentinel's insurance manager. He was deposed in these proceedings. And we asked, Was it common that employees of Highland Capital would do things on behalf of Sentinel? This goes, again, to whether there's a close relationship between HCM and Sentinel. Mr. Carlson -- or Mr. Adamczak, who is the representative, the corporate representative of Beecher Carlson, says, Well, a captive insurance company does not generally have any employees, so all of the employees are typically from a sponsoring organization. In this case, it was Highland Capital that was the sponsoring organization.

Now, when you look at the deposition transcripts, you can see that, one by one, the former Highland employees denied to various degrees their involvement with Sentinel. Meanwhile, though, Sentinel has no employees, and it was these Highland former employees who did everything for Sentinel while they were being paid by Highland.

But, again, this just -- for purposes of this factor, this just goes to the close relationship between HCM and Sentinel.

Obviously, Mr. Dondero, who ultimately controls HCM, also ultimately controlled Sentinel. You've got Mr. Ellington. And then you've got all of the Highland former employees doing the work of Sentinel.

Here is an example of each of the key figures who were at Highland who've now been fired. Mr. DiOrio. He was the former managing director of Sentinel, but he was also a Sentinel director. And that included right up until after even he was fired by Highland and finally tendered his resignation. But he was made a director in the wake of this transaction.

Mr. Sevilla. He was the former assistant general counsel at Highland. And he was described by Mr. DiOrio as the point person, I guess, for things that had to happen with Sentinel. He helped with the formation. He, as I understand it, he was part of the team. And he's also described as the point person by everybody except for Mr. Sevilla, who disavows the same kind of involvement that everyone else said he had and that the documents show he had.

Then you've got Mr. Leventon. He was another former assistant general counsel.

By the way, all these folks are in the legal department. They have fiduciary duties. They're all in the legal department, and they presumably have fiduciary duties throughout, and they're all, as you can see, right in the thick of this.

Mr. -- the corporate representative of Beecher Carlson talked about how Mr. Leventon, each year-end, would work with Sentinel's actuaries to determine the scenarios for the outcome of the case -- he's talking about the UBS litigation -- with the end goal being to determine what the loss, ultimate loss would end up being that Sentinel would record in their financial statements.

So Mr. Leventon is working hand-in-glove with Sentinel from the time the policy is issued -- even before; you know, he was one of the drafters of that memo -- but certainly for years after, including after the restructuring. Of course, with never a word to Mr. Seery or his outside counsel.

And then you have Katie Irving. She was a former managing director. She's, again, one of these people who, in her deposition, tried to effectively say she really didn't have much to do with Sentinel. But at the Beecher deposition, they noted that she was someone who had been knowledgeable of all the activities centered around Sentinel, and she attended multiple meetings between Sentinel and CIMA, which is the regulatory authority in the Caymans. She had traveled to the Cayman Islands several times for these meetings, yet somehow it's all apparently slipped her mind when she was being examined or asked about this kind of information directly or indirectly by Mr. Seery and his team.

Back to the Beecher Carlson representative. In terms of the unusualness of the transaction, Beecher has lots of insurance companies that they help manage. We asked if they have any other clients that issue ATE policies. Answer is no. Sentinel is the only one.

Just how many ATE policies did Sentinel actually produce?

Just the one.

Just the one we're looking at here?

Correct.

So this is very outside the ordinary course of business. And here's why. At the time of the transaction -- this is the financials at the end of 2016. Remember, the transaction is summer of 2017. Things haven't changed much for Sentinel in those few months.

(Interruption.)

MR. CLUBOK: That's -- the total assets are $19 million. Okay?

A VOICE: Sorry. I didn't mean to get --

THE COURT: I'm sorry. Who's speaking?

MR. CLUBOK: Okay.

THE COURT: Who is that voice?

MR. MORRIS: I think that was one of ours, Chris, I think you went off mute.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. CLUBOK: That's okay.

THE COURT: Continue.

MR. CLUBOK: That's fine. Back on Slide 30. Slide 30 is UBS Exhibit 9, and that's from Sentinel's financial statements year end of 2016. And you can see that as December 2016 Sentinel's total assets were only about $19 million. So how are they issuing a $100 million ATE policy in good faith?

Well, the only way to even try to justify it is if you get more than $100 million in transfers, which we know they ultimately did. But, again, this just shows how unusual and outside the ordinary course of business this whole transaction was, even for Sentinel, even if someone were to try to portray it as just a, you know, normal insurance company, just your everyday normal captive insurance company in Highland run by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington.

You can see the total cash was only about $5.8 million. And of course, the policy doesn't -- isn't supposed to pay off the claim in cash and prizes. It's supposed to pay just cash. But they only had about less than $6 million on the balance sheet at the time.

Unusualness of the case, case, is another factor that indicates fraud. And of course, we asked -- this is the former chief accounting officer, Mr. Stoops. At Mr. Sevilla's instructions, did you transfer all the assets of the relevant funds?

Answer, Yes. That is my recollection.

And in that instruction, he wanted all funds or all assets transferred, regardless of the value of those assets?

Yes. That's right.

Mr. Ringheimer, who was the former management or manager of operations, I guess, is his title at Highland, he was asked, To the extent there's a transfer of all of the funds of a particular entity, would you say it was common while you were at Highland for Highland to transfer all of the assets out of a Highland entity?

Answer, I don't believe I -- so, I have seen funds wind down before, but I don't believe I've seen another transfer like this before.

Then we asked, Do you recall what the urgency was for executing a transfer that day?

Answer, I do not.

Never communicated to you why it was urgent?

Answer, If they did, I don't remember.

And remember, you've already heard testimony that it was done in such haste that some of the assets weren't even properly transferred.

Use of dummies. This is a -- you know, it's always hard to unpack how Highland -- entities. But if you look at Exhibit 1, you will note three insureds. CDO Fund and SOHC, which you would expect, but also, oddly, CDO Holding Company. When you look at the Defendants, though, you don't see CDO

Holding Company. That was not one of the Defendants in the litigation, and yet somehow they're becoming an insured pursuant to this policy. That's curious.

Meanwhile, who paid for the insurance? There are six entities who paid for the insurance, and three of them are the insureds. That's double-curious, right?

And so all of this just adds to the suspiciousness of this whole transaction.

So, what about the consideration? Well, obviously, you've heard a lot. It was inadequate. This was, going back to that settlement analysis that was done, you know, hastily a few weeks after summary judgment was lost, out there it was identified that HFP CDO Fund would send all their assets, and they said, parentheses, $94 million, as the ATE premium, and that would let them write a $100 million ATE policy for UBS liability. They had roughly estimated that there was about $94 million left between HFP and CDO Fund, and that would justify this $100 million policy.

Well, it turns out that the aggregate purchase price paid was actually $25 million. Okay? So the premium gets set at $25 million, for other curious reasons. And meanwhile, the aggregate fair market value of all the assets -- because the plan was always to transfer all the assets, regardless of the value -- turns out to be $105 million. So that original plan, transfer all the assets to get us $100 million, that never changed, even though it turned out the assets were worth more than $100 million and the so-called premium had to be set at $25 million.

Now, the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, CIMA, found this suspicious. And they asked about it. And here you'll see, they catch Sentinel in a complete lie. This is a report that was done May 19th, when they're saying -- they're asking for information about what happened here. And they say, Those changed with Licensee's governance could not explain the basis upon which the investments had been valued on or about August 20 -- August 1, 2017 for the purpose of premium settlement. And this is Page 78819, Bates label, that is, of UBS Exhibit 11. Sort of a question/answer. It's like CIMA will say, Well, here's the question we raised, and then they will say, Well, how did management respond? And this is how management responded when CIMA raised this question. They said, you know, basically, how'd you set the policy? How'd you set the premium? And management -- this is management's comments, was that, At the time the ATE policy was drafted, premium had been established at $25 million based on a pricing study conducted by Licensee's actuary.

So they told CIMA, Hey, no problem, we had an actuary set the price, and $25 million was the price. Let alone the overage of payment, but at least $25 million was supposedly the premium price pursuant to this actuary.

Well, CIMA didn't just take their word for it. They continued their investigation, and this is how CIMA in this report, Exhibit 11, responds to this management comment. They say, Well, on April 4, 2019, the Authority held a telephone interview with Mr. Jason Stubbs of Risk International, the Licensee's actuary. During the interview, Mr. Stubbs informed the Authority he was not involved in the determination of premium pricing for the Licensee to any extent at all.

It goes on to say, The Authority notes with concern that the management's assertion that the ATE policy premium of $25 million was established based on a pricing study conducted by the Licensee's actuary contradicts the actuary's position.

So the actuary is basically outing them for having just simply lied to CIMA.

But you still -- even all that is suspicious, but the problem is we know the assets were worth way more than $25 million. And by June of 2018, there was already questions being raised. And Mr. Adamczak at Beecher Carlson had written an email to J.P. Sevilla and Matt DiOrio, copied one of his colleagues, and he said, Look, the problem is the premium was only $25 million, creating a ding on the transaction. This is from Exhibit 12. Because there is no return of overpayment of premium, it gives rise to the question, is this an arm's length transaction?

This is the managing agent for Sentinel raising these concerns.

So what do they do? They change -- they change the policy. And this is -- this is way after the fact. This ends up being in 2018. This is like June of 2018. Remember, this is about a year after the policy which was -- it was issued in 2017.

And what they do is they just say, you know what, let's just adjust the premium. Now let's say the premium is $68 million. Okay? And now let's say that the limit of indemnity is down to $91 million. Okay? Remember, previously, they had a fair market value of $105 million. They've now got the fair market value supposedly down to $68 million. P.S., because they're now treating that note from DAF as worthless, amongst other things.

But they say, Well, the premium is $68 million. We had said if it was a $25 million premium, we at Sentinel would have to take a gain on that difference. Well, what if we just after-the-fact changed the premium up to match exactly the supposed new fair market value, and then lower the limit of indemnity at the same time down to $91 million?

So they cook up this scheme, they do it. Of course, they forget to have the insureds sign it, which is, again, a series of, I would say, fully unusual transactions. And this is, you know, again, a year after. So they're just continuing to do things to dig deeper into this hole.

We asked Mr. Adamczak, Is this something you've done before in other policies, changed the premium to reflect assets transferred?

Answer, This is the first situation like this we've seen where there are assets that were taken in as opposed to cash.

And have you ever seen anything like it since?

I have not.

Beecher Carlson is a nationally renowned, you know, large entity that works with insurance companies, I believe, you know, all over the world, I think, but certainly they have many clients. They've never seen anything like this. And certainly it has never been done before by Sentinel.

So, again, this goes to how it's an unusual transaction, and also it goes to the fact that this is not just one mistake or one event but a whole series of things in a pattern.

By the way, he was asked, Did any one of the insureds actually agree with the policy premium increasing by three times without increasing the coverage amount?

He said, I'm not aware if that was presented to the insureds.

Now, we know that a couple of those individuals at Highland Capital Management were in the mix on this, but it was never formally presented, I guess, to the insureds. Somebody at Highland just said, Yeah, go ahead and do this.

Then, in 2019 -- and note, this is Exhibit 15, the date of this is December 31, 2019, months after the bankruptcy in this case has opened. And then what happens? There's an asset transfer agreement because Sentinel had this collection of assets that they want to get out of even Sentinel and basically to transfer all these assets to another Dondero/ Ellington-affiliated entity -- I believe it was to Sebastian Clark, allegedly -- all of these assets for $3. That's in December of 2019.

Now, this is -- you know, they've already moved the assets from CDO Fund, HFP, and Sentinel in 2017. They disposed of some of them in other ways, but some they still have in the Caymans. And what they do is they hustle or try to hustle and get them out after the restructuring to an entity connected or owned by Ellington for $3.

You'll note that amongst these assets there's that $32 million CLO Holdco also known as the DAF note. Remember the one that they had so much emphasis on when they originally hatched the scheme, that they were really worried that this note could ultimately end up in the hands of UBS if UBS were to prevail? Well, they now try to double-transfer it away.

After, by the way -- here's another asset. Aberdeen. This is an interest in a CLO. We now know this is -- millions of dollars, I believe, are currently restrained in connection with this Aberdeen asset by the New York court. But, again, they're just transferring all these assets, supposedly for $3.

Why? Well, Mr. Adamczak said they were told they were worthless. And we asked, Who told you they were worthless? And he said, That direction would have come from Matt DiOrio. This is December of '19, after the bankruptcy.

Then we asked, Well, as part of the valuation service the Valuation and Research Corp. had done, had they determined these assets were worthless? Had this VRC group, this -- the group that previously they had used to try to give them at least some argument of fair market value. Mr. Adamczak said, Well, they -- VRC had not been engaged to perform valuations on those investments, and it was discussed that if those investments were worthless there's no point in obtaining a valuation.

So just think about that. And this is his deposition at 276, Line 17, through 277, Line 6.

Basically, Matt DiOrio says, Hey, these assets are worthless. Transfer them to this entity for $3. And they say, Well, shouldn't we have VRC value them? And DiOrio basically says, No need to value them. I told you they're worthless. Why spend money valuing them when I've already told you they're worthless? Even though they include a $32 million note payable by the DAF and they include at least other assets that we know are worth millions of dollars. We asked if Beecher had done anything independent, and they explained that had no way of confirming anything.

Now, luckily, those assets had been transferred back to Sentinel. And, luckily, the current directors, I believe, did listen to our arguments, and also had, I think, some pretty sharp instructions from CIMA. And as a result, those assets or those purported transfers have been unwound and those assets have been returned to Sentinel.

But this just shows the danger and risk that at every -- every opportunity, these individuals will try to keep moving these assets and try to keep evading them from judgment.

And by the way, this has happened before. Mr. Seery was testifying a little bit about what started all this. This -- Slide 43 just has a compilation from UBS Exhibit 52, which just showed the asset transfer or the fraudulent transfer that we alleged back in 2009.

And for UBS, this is just déjà vu all over again, because what we alleged in the New York case was, at the time, there was a whole bunch of assets that were pooled into HFP and then distributed to the winds right after default was declared in the contract and at the outset of this litigation.

Actually, after UBS had sued Highland, a couple months later they did this, you know, then face value of a couple hundred million dollars in assets that we had argued was fraudulently transferred.

What we see now happened in 2017 was basically the follow-on to that, like, everything that was left, let's put it all together and send all that to Sentinel. So, to us, it is a pattern. And it is, as I said, déjà vu all over again.

And back then, just like in 2017, of course, Mr. Dondero signed on behalf of everybody. That's the typical pattern. That's the series of continued fraudulent transfers that had been -- UBS, but also really speak to what we've seen from Highland in connection with many of the creditors.

Sentinel again looked at all of this -- later, and they say, with respect to some of the other practices, they say that, Those charged with the Licensee and licensing at Sentinel governance could not explain the basis upon which the investments have been valued in August 2017.

They also couldn't explain the reason why the information that was relied on to value the investments for the purpose of premium couldn't be readily provided to the auditors upon request, considering that the policy inception and the financial statements on it was only a few months apart.

CIMA also noted, and this is Exhibit 11 at Bates 78819, that those charged with governance could not explain why the premium was adjusted without a commensurate adjustment to the indemnity limit provided or why the initial pricing was subsequently deemed not sufficient.

And they say, In addition, in any case, to amend an insurance policy to artificially inflate the premium amount to equal the value of investments transferred to the licensee without any justifiable business purpose and economic substance is, at the very least, questionable.

In sum, the above matters cast significant doubt on the economic substance and business purpose of the transactions relating to the ATE coverage.

According to CIMA, it was Sentinel's own lawyers. They hired a lawyer in Cayman to look at this, and they tried to get some help -- this was back in 2017 -- to just effectuate this plan once it had been cooked up. And even back then the Cayman lawyer noted, Has any thought been given as to the legal validity of such a transfer, bearing in mind that these assets will then be put beyond the reach of the Plaintiffs in the U.S. litigation against the Fund. Obviously, the last thing you want to find is that the "premium" has to be returned or set aside as some unlawful preference or similar. Obviously, an issue for U.S. counsel, but just thought I should raise it. Well, you can imagine U.S. counsel at the time in 2017 did nothing, but this was obviously flagged by their Cayman counsel.

So, one factor that I skipped over but you've heard a lot about is the secrecy. And, really, the secrecy is a -- just sort of it wraps everything up. You know, we know the bankruptcy was in October 2019. We know that we got a decision that notified the world or at least notified Highland and Mr. Dondero and even Mr. Seery before he became a director that there was this looming $1 billion judgment.

It was first issued as a decision. It was not made public so that the parties could have some time to try to negotiate settlement, which we -- you heard testimony in other proceedings that we started to with Mr. Ellington.

So Highland obviously had received it from the Court and knew all about the billion-dollar judgment.

February 10th, it -- I'm sorry, the billion-dollar then-decision.

By February 10, 2020, it is reduced to a judgment for Phase I. And yet from 2019 until the beginning of 2021, everyone -- all these ex-employees of Highland now who knew about this actively concealed it.

And of course, we start with Mr. Dondero. This is Mr. Ellington saying, Did you ever tell Mr. Dondero that there was an insurance policy issued by Sentinel that could potentially satisfy the judgment?

That was kind of an obvious question.

Ellington said, Well, I didn't need to tell Mr. Dondero. He was aware of it since the inception.

And, of course, Mr. Dondero signed it. So it just goes without saying Exhibit 1 shows that Dondero knew about it. And, of course, Mr. Dondero never said anything about it throughout, as you can see by his deposition.

Meanwhile, though, Mr. Sevilla also covered it up. We asked Mr. DiOrio about Mr. Sevilla's role, and as we noted, he was the point person for things that happened on Sentinel. He knew everything about Sentinel.

We asked Mr. Sevilla, in his deposition transcript, 278, Line 20, to 279, Line 3: So, between the time the independent board was appointed and your departure from the company, did you ever disclose to any of the members of the independent board that you were aware the existence of a Sentinel insurance policy ostensibly provided for coverage for the loss of the UBS litigation?

Answer, no.

Mr. Leventon. Mr. Leventon doesn't just omit information, he -- well, you'll see for yourself. This is one of the documents where he had been tasked with tracking the assets through on SOHC. He says, this is Exhibit 16, and in one of his emails to Mr. Seery and to Mr. Demo and others, he claims he had been tracking the assets through an SOHC and CDO Fund. He was putting together a report with supporting documentation. And he claims that there's just this small account of cash and a few worthless securities.

Now, he's claiming he's tracking the assets through. Okay. He knows what happened to the assets of SOHC and CDO Funds. He helped devise the scheme to transfer them in 2017 to Sentinel. He has also been, every year, talking to Sentinel or their actuaries about the prospects of the litigation. And yet when Mr. Seery, Mr. Demo, and others task him with tracking the assets, he just, you know, says what's there, doesn't ever mention this. You know, this would be, at a minimum, a material omission.

I think if you read the documents and you look in Exhibit 16, you'll see things that are even more concerning. This is not an accidental omission.

This is the list he provides, without identifying at all that there is, in fact, all of this other -- all these other assets that were transferred and a $10 million supposed insurance policy just available for the asking.

And he was asked, Well, you knew there was a schedule that showed Sentinel having an interest in Multi-Strat that specifically said, parentheses, from Highland CDO Fund. There was a schedule that showed that.

And he said, Well, I think that's fair. December 2017, I think that's fair.

And we asked, Well, when you were tasked with helping trace the assets of CDO Fund and HFP, you even talked to Mr. Ellington, in words or substance, about whether or not you should mention Sentinel, correct?

And this is an email exchange that Mr. Ellington had had with Mr. Leventon back in December of 2017. This is Exhibit 46. This showed -- this is of Highland Credit Opportunities. In other words, the Multi-Strat list of -- of interests in Multi-Strat.

And you can see, back in the end of 2017, it was identified, the first one on the list is an interest of Sentinel in Credit Opportunities, also called Multi-Strat. Okay. That's the interest that right now is being restrained by Your Honor's order. And this interest was being -- was on the books as being settled but it said right in their document, parentheses, from Highland CDO Fund, because it had only been transferred a few months ago, in August. Right?

So Leventon and Ellington know this. They know that Sentinel has an asset that came from CDO Fund. Of course, not just because of this document. This is just one of many. But back then -- and, again, if you look at those documents, Mr. Leventon was asked, You never told anyone at the Pachulski firm that assets of CDO Fund held with respect to Multi-Strat may have been transferred to Sentinel, correct? And he says yes, that's correct. Just never -- never mentioned it.

We asked, What was the information you had about the assets of SOHC and CDO Fund from March of 2009 to the present that you chose not to provide to the Pachulski firm? He says, Answer, I knew that there had been a transaction in 2017 sometime with respect to an after-the-event insurance policy with Sentinel.

Then we asked, Did you ever disclose the existence of this policy to any of the independent directors?

Answer, I never discussed with them one way or the other.

This is all while he has been tasked with, as Mr. Seery put it, generally speaking, to trace the assets from 2009 through the present.

Mr. Ellington goes even further. He really tries to divert things. And you'll see in an email exchange where he jumps in and tries to cloud the issue by using a phrase he's used over and over again as he explains so-called ghost funds. This is an August 15, 2020 exchange that's got Mr. Ellington, Mr. Demo, Mr. Leventon, Mr. Seery, and others on it. And this is Exhibit 17.

Mr. Ellington jumps in. If you read the Exhibit 17, you'll see how he jumps in and he says, Look, stop, stop all this. You know, basically, he says, There's not much more to do.

He goes, I have personally discussed at length this situation with the head of KPMG Cayman Islands and he expressed to me there are currently more than 6,000 ghost funds such as these target entities -- the target entities, of course, are not just random funds out of the so-called 6,000 ghost funds, but CDO, SOHC, HFP -- stemming from the 2008 crisis that do not have directors, custodians, administrators, bank accounts, et cetera, that sit dormant, and, capital, NO ONE, capital letters, knows what they truly retain, et cetera.

He then said, I know that UBS is aware of the situation, and I know Andy Clubok -- that's me -- knows of this situation, the so-called situation of everything being ghost funds because I've personally discussed it with him several dozen times, including as recently as this year.

He goes on to say, Oh, this process is a Herculean task. He and I just spent 100 hours, or excess of 100 hours, trying to piece together everything they can to create a true and accurate document record, based record, of what happened with these target entities.

He is affirmatively telling Mr. Seery, Mr. Demo, and others that, you know, not just waiving those funds and trying to trick them with that, but claiming that he is doing everything with Leventon to piece together everything they can to create a true and accurate document, at least record of what happened to these entities. And the simple thing that happened to those entities, the most important thing, frankly, the only really relevant thing, is that all of their assets were transferred or tried to be transferred in 2017 to Sentinel.

Now, by the way, some of those assets weren't transferred. So CDO Fund still had some accounts and still did have some assets, even when Mr. Ellington is claiming this. So the whole thing is, you know, inaccurate, but, frankly, just a downright -- well, I won't characterize it. I think it speaks for itself.

We deposed Mr. Ellington in this proceeding. This is at Deposition Transcript 83, Line 15, to 84:24. I asked him, Did you ever tell me that there was an insurance policy issued by Sentinel that potentially could satisfy that judgment?

Answer, No.

Did you ever tell Mr. Seery anything at all about the insurance policy that was issued by Sentinel with respect to the UBS litigation in New York?

Answer, No.

Question, Did you tell Mr. Nelms, Judge Nelms, anything at all about the insurance policy that was issued by Sentinel with respect to the UBS litigation in New York?

Answer, No.

Mr. Leventon was asked, Well, did you, in words or substance, ever ask Mr. Ellington whether you should disclose the policy?

And we got kind of a hard-to-understand answer, but it's Leventon Deposition Transcript 154, 217. The gist of it is Ellington told him not to.

The answer specifically says, So, the conversation was, is the policy relevant to the task I'm working on? And the answer, Mr. Ellington said he didn't believe that it was and therefore didn't need to be included as material because part of that past.

And then I asked, You know, you've been in conversations with Mr. Seery. I don't talk to Mr. Seery hardly ever. So is there any other thing that any other -- anything else that I should know of or -- or any other reason, you know, outside of my task that I should include in the materials, and Scott said no. Okay?

Basically, this is a very narrowly defined -- it's an effort by Mr. Leventon to somehow define his task down so narrowly that he and Mr. Ellington could somehow have a conversation and believe in good faith, while they are lawyers working for the estate that's in bankruptcy, that somehow this is something they should affirmatively not disclose to Mr. Seery and his team.

And then we get to Mr. DiOrio. And Mr. DiOrio tried and tried to hide it, but ultimately I believe it was his documents that left -- were left behind or that were found that helped unravel the scheme. But back in January of '21, when he was still here, he repeatedly lied to Highland Capital.

This is an email exchange from January 28, '21. Remember, Mr. DiOrio is a Sentinel director at that time. Okay? He's getting paid exclusively by Highland Capital Management, but on Highland Capital Management time he has this side gig of being a Sentinel director. And he's asked -- he was asked to figure out what are the -- what are the assets that didn't make its way to actually be transferred. There's an asset that's called Greenbrier. It's an interest in a CLO. And with respect to that particular asset, he claims he was working to reissue physical certificates, he'll keep everyone in the loop on the timing. Does not appear to be a swift process, but we're moving forward. The shares are still registered to Hare & Co., with CDO Opportunity Fund as beneficial owner.

So this is one of those assets where they, just because of the haste, had not -- not competently effectuated the transfer as they tried to do.

He talks about how BONY has a custody account in CDO Opportunity Fund's name, and been receiving past waterfall payments.

By the way, I think this has amounted to over $10 million, and these have been ultimately now paid to UBS and we're continuing to get it as part of the prior settlement agreement, but, you know, obviously only because it was identified at the last minute.

Anyway, Mr. DiOrio says, Well, these certificates were transferred in error in 2017 by Carter Chisholm, who no longer works at HCM. Now, Mr. DiOrio knows exactly what happened with these transfers, okay, but he just kind of gives this weird answer, it was transferred in error.

And then Mr. Demo says, Okay, but do we have any visibility into who Sentinel Reinsurance is? Who owns them?

What do they do? Et cetera.

Because this is about the time, as Mr. Seery testified, that it's all kind of starting to unravel. They've seen a ledger that showed that Sentinel actually had some interest in Multi-Strat, and that's kind of weird, and it sparked some memory, and certainly they really start fussing Mr. DiOrio, who is a director of Sentinel. And Mr. Demo asks him this January 27, 2021. This is Exhibit 18. What does Mr. DiOrio say? He says, It's a nondebtor, non-affiliate reinsurance company, but I do not know who or how it's owned. That's what he tells Mr. Demo and the others. Okay?

Now, we asked him about that, and we said, Well, you knew it was owned in part by Dondero?

Yes.

And you knew it was owned at least in part by Mr. Ellington?

This is when he gets under oath. His deposition transcript at Page 336, Lines 3, to 338, Line 1.

He said, yeah, he knew it when he told them that he didn't.

And we say, Well, he asked -- talking about Mr. Demo -- who owns Sentinel Reinsurance, right?

Answer, Yes.

Okay. And you didn't tell him Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington owned part of it, right?

Right.

Question, Well, why didn't you just explain this to Mr. Demo?

Answer, I wanted as little to do with Pachulski as possible, so I answered the questions and waited for the next one.

Okay? Now, to be sure, he wasn't under oath in Exhibit 18, I guess. But he's a member of the legal department, he's a Sentinel director, he's working for the bankruptcy estate at that time, and he just flat lies. There's no getting around it. And then when we're talking under oath, he admits the lie and, you know, basically just didn't want to -- didn't want to have anything to do with Pachulski, I guess.

Well, that's when luckily Mr. Seery now stepped in. And seeing all of this, I think he fires the last of these individuals who were still there. And then just, you know, weeks later makes a claim on behalf of CDO Fund to Sentinel for that $100,000 million, which, of course, he clearly would have done, and his deposition testimony reflects this, from the get go had he known about it, since we had a judgment and the insurance policy was intended to benefit UBS.

So that's secrecy.

Turning back to the factors, I'll run through the rest of these quickly. Transfers retain control. Well, of course. It is the case that Beecher had been servicing Sentinel -- throughout the time that Beecher worked for Sentinel, Dondero and Ellington were the ultimate beneficial owners, called UBOs. Mr. Adamczak testified to that on Pages 22, 24, and 25 of his deposition.

He was asked, What's the role of the ultimate beneficial owner? And as he understood it, the ultimate person would call the shots for the captive. And we asked him if that was true with respect to Dondero and Ellington, that they were the ones ultimately calling the shots. He said, To the best of our knowledge, that's correct.

Everything that was done -- remember, Sentinel doesn't have employees, so everything is either done by a Highland employee working for Sentinel or being executed by Beecher, which is sort of the agent that executes stuff. And they just did everything that Dondero and Ellington told them.

So, with all of that, where has this money gone? Okay? At least the money that has not been restrained. Where has some of the other money gone? And you heard a little bit about this, but I am sure you can't -- will not believe some of this.

Basically, the transferors, and that's Dondero and Ellington, retained control and have used that money that they transferred out of CDO Fund and HFP and all the others as their own personal piggybank. Here is just a sampling of some of the expenses that have been approved since that transfer.

And by the way, these are post-bankruptcy, November of 2019 through January of 2020 expenses that, unbeknownst to Mr. Seery and our understanding is unbeknownst to the Pachulski firm, were just being authorized by Mr. DiOrio and others post-bankruptcy with money out of Sentinel that should have been used to pay UBS's judgment.

First of all, here's an expense report from January 15, 2020 through January 19, 2020. It's UBS Exhibit 19. And in there you will see Ellington expenses for a London and Paris trip of over $78,000. At least one of these trips, I think it's this one, or maybe others, he went with his girlfriend. There are some emails that we have submitted that are in the records that show her, like, talk about which restaurants she wants to dine at, what hotels they want to stay in. All that's in the exhibits to the depositions. One of the -- one of the visits they did was a place called Sexy Fish. Sounds good. This is all being charged to Sentinel, okay?

Then there's another expense report to Toronto, $97,000. Interesting. There, they spent about $12,000 at the Rebel nightclub. Okay? Again, this is all instead of using the money to satisfy the judgment.

Meanwhile, there's another one. This is December of 2019. Scott Ellington. A $318,000 expense report. Okay. Now, this is before Mr. Seery has been appointed but post-bankruptcy. And I'm sure that the Pachulski firm had no idea about this.

A huge expense on this one was the Sapphire. This is a trip to Las Vegas. Somehow they spent $318,000 in Las Vegas. And there's five entries that total, you know, something like almost $50,000 or something to Sapphire. So we said, Well, what's Sapphire? This is Sapphire. And you can see inside 72, there's a picture, and we've hidden strategically some of it.

But we asked Mr. Adamczak, the corporate representative of Beecher Carlson, at Page 101, Lines 15, to 102, What did you understand Sapphire to be?

He answered, A typical Las Vegas strip club.

Question, Did you look at that at the time when they submitted $318,000 in expenses?

Answer, Yes.

And did you ask Mr. DiOrio specifically about that?

Answer, I did.

Question, And his answer was that it was business development?

Answer, They were all business development. This is how they do business.

Question, They being who?

Answer, Highland Capital.

Okay? By the way, the business is, on one day, or one evening, December 16, 2019, as you can see, $9,800, $9,800, $9,000, all being supposedly conducted at the Sapphire strip club.

Back in the day, this was looked at. And you can see on some of these emails. Remember, you heard about this SAS Management server that's apparently been hidden from the Highland -- from the Debtor? Sarah Goldsmith to Matt DiOrio says that she was submitting the attached expense reimbursement on behalf of Scott Ellington. Ms. Goldsmith, I think, was his assistant. Subject to an approval by the directors, please instruct reimbursement to Scott Ellington for this total travel expenses of $318,000.

Mr. DiOrio forwards that on to Beecher Carlson and just says, Hey, guys, Please submit the attached expenses for approval and reimbursement.

By the way, as a heads up, settlement talks are cranking up, but okay.

Internally at Beecher Carlson -- and this finally gets their attention. They mostly just do what they're told, but internally Mr. Adamczak emails with his colleague and says, Nice. What the hell is going on with these expenses? I question how much, quote, business development is actually being done. Did you look at this?

Well, we asked, What raises concern? He said, The fact there was $318,000 worth of expenses at first, but there was a significant amount of that that seemed to be club-related. We asked if the directors approved it. He said, Ultimately, but they also questioned it.

Oh, by the way, these are not the current directors. As Mr. Morris noted, the current directors are new, and those are the ones we're dealing with now. These were Mr. DiOrio and his two other colleagues back then.

They were asked -- they requested the nature of these expenses and then specifically inquired whether all or both of the UBOs would be okay with running these expenses through the captive as business development. That was their only question. Are the UBOs -- that is, Dondero and Ellington -- going to be okay with running these expenses through the captive?

Who did they ask? Matt DiOrio. What did he answer? That it was appropriate.

And I just clarified, So he was saying it's appropriate because the UBOs said it was appropriate?

Answer, To my knowledge, yes.

No justification other than, Hey, if Dondero and Ellington said it's okay, at least according to DiOrio, it must be okay.

That's not it, though. It wasn't just a mod... you know, relatively, I guess, when you consider the total amount of expenses. There's also dividend payments. And on Slide 77, you see that we've uncovered at least a total of $8.9 million dividend payments that were paid to Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington's entities that they owned, that they're the intermediaries to them as the ultimate beneficial owners.

Here is an example of a payment that was made in April of 2020 -- again, unbeknownst I think at the time, I'm sure at the time, to Mr. Seery. And this is out of Sentinel's money. It's supposed to be -- you know, they don't even have a hundred million in cash at that time, and yet they're dividending up to Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington. There is an approval of the payment, of course. It's done by Matt DiOrio and his -- and then two colleagues, as the Sentinel director at the time, in April 24, 2020. This is Exhibit 47. A total of $6.4 million. And you can see it's divided up. About $4.4 million goes to Main Spring, Limited. This is Exhibit 21. That's a Dondero entity. And you can see there's -- Exhibit 22 shows the wire transfer to another entity called Montage of about $1.9 million. That's the Ellington-affiliated entity.

So, the grand total of about $6.4 million gets distributed 70/30, as we've seen in the ownership interest, to entities controlled, respectively, by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington, as set forth in Exhibits 21 and 22.

That's not all, of course. Even in 2021, in January of 2020 -- sort of the last gasp before they get found out, there's another dividend payment. Again, approved by Mr. DiOrio. January 11, 2021. This is -- this is all during a time when they're not telling anything to Mr. Seery or Mr. Demo or the others about Sentinel. And yet Mr. DiOrio is hustling dividend payments up to Dondero and Ellington. And you can see Exhibits 48 and 23 show how the money ultimately gets transferred, you know, even, you know, as late as the spring of 2021.

Finally, Sentinel money. Mr. Morris talked about this. And I guess there's a lawyer on the -- on the -- in the proceedings today that maybe intends to try to benefit from Sentinel's money as well.

In June 2021, Beecher Carlson was given a request for expense approval for Ross & Smith of about $75,000. This, according to Mr. DiOrio, was all in order and should be settled. Mr. DiOrio represents -- this is June of 2021, after he's been fired by Highland. He says, The company identified a group of former employees, my -- former employees, okay? Sentinel had no employees. And by the way, many of these people testified under oath that not only were they not employees, but they hardly did anything at all with Sentinel. Yet Mr. DiOrio is claiming that the company had identified a group of former employees, myself included -- presumably, he's talking about former Sentinel employees; there's no reason why Sentinel would be indemnifying former Highland employees. But in any event, he says, It relates to our defense with today's hearing that I mentioned.

Now, they're not a part of this hearing. To the extent Sentinel -- Sentinel insurance doesn't go to Mr. DiOrio for trying to avoid deposition testimony or something, and that's, by the way, what that hearing was.

Your Honor may not remember that date. We do. It was June 24, 2021. This is an entry that shows that that hearing that day was the motion we had to make to compel the deposition testimony, because at the time all of these former Highland employees were fighting having to come provide all of this testimony you've now seen. You would never have seen much of what we presented today had this motion to compel not been granted. And they charged $75,000 to fight it.

Now, we asked for fees at the time. And we understand why Your Honor didn't award fees, but -- we can understand that. But it sort of put us flat. Not only did they not pay our fees for having to move to compel, they depleted Sentinel further, which owes us, at the time, owes us quite a bit of money, for the privilege of trying to stop us from finding out all of the evidence here.

So, and I say that it's UBS's money at Sentinel because the New York courts say so. The New York courts have held that insurance policies may constitute debts against which a money judgment may be enforced under Article 52 of the New York CPLR, and a judgment debtor can enforce the subject debt arising from the court's final judgment against the judgment debtor's insurer, pursuant to Article 52 of the CPLR. So, really, this money really ultimately should go to UBS. It should not be allowed to continue to be paid for this indemnification or for any other purpose, et cetera.

At the end of the day, even if the policy were valued, or valid, UBS would be owed at least $100 million, even if it was a totally valid thing. But in fact, UBS is owed the $100 million plus the $80 million for the fraudulent transfer, for a total of over $180 million.

So that's how we get to success on the merits. The others, I really don't need to go much through.

I think, you know, irreparable injury. In brief, there's case law that makes it clear that the irreparable injury element is satisfied when the defendants would dissipate the frozen assets, and if the defendants were to dissipate or transfer these assets out of the jurisdiction, the District Court would not be able to grant the effective remedy. That's from the Fifth Circuit, Janvey v. Alguire, 647 F.3d 585. There's similar law in the Ninth Circuit: Johnson v. Couturier, 572 F.3d 1067.

And, again, Mr. Seery, as you heard him testify live, but this is from his deposition, made it clear that he really had no choice. Without the TRO, this money probably would have been already transferred to Sentinel and gosh knows what would have happened.

The weighing of harms. Well, this adversary proceeding, of course, as Mr. Morris said, we kind of expected maybe Sentinel or maybe Mr. DiOrio or someone to intervene. No one did. So the proceeding is between UBS and Highland. There is huge harm to UBS if the injunction is not granted.

The other party is Highland, because Highland -- you know, there's certainly no benefit to Highland, and instead what Highland will face is more litigation, costs, and a fraud, which, of course, Highland doesn't want. And that's why I think Highland -- not only is there no harm to Highland to granting the relief, but Highland wants to cut these proceedings short. And that's fine with us, as long as we were able to present this evidence, as long as it doesn't cut short the ability to get the full order that we've requested. So, I think the weighing of harms is easy.

And finally I end with the public interest. Your Honor, there is no harm to the public interest if the Court does enjoin fraudulent behavior. That is the only way that we can prevent harm to the public interest. You have seen a pattern, a series, you know, it's tacked on to other things you've seen in connection with these proceedings. But the prevention of unjust enrichment by means of fraud or misappropriation, even if it was affecting "only private entities," is in the general public interest.

Of course, here, all of these things impact not just UBS, it affects the other creditors of the estate. It affects the Court's time. And certainly, I think as Mr. Morris put it, it's just the signal that it sends to allow this to go unchecked would be terrible.

So it's many issues of concern that we haven't even dived into as much as we could, including testimony that is questionable, I'll say, at best, and various transfers and information that was not provided to the Court and its representatives. And, of course, these proceedings, I suspect there will be issues for someone else for another day to deal with.

But for us, we just ask that the Court enter the injunction as we have suggested with the minor edits to the version that Mr. Morris and his colleagues submitted. The public interest will be served by that.

And I'll end with, you know, why are we still here? We're still here because UBS still has that over billion-dollar judgement. And, in fact, because of interest, that judgment has grown by about $116 million, okay, while we've been dealing with all of this. While we could've maybe gotten a significant portion, maybe could've settled, et cetera, but it's now up to over $1.1 billion.

And how much total has UBS been paid by the judgment debtors? About $14 million. By the way, the $14 million is those assets that we caught at the last second that were ineffectually tried to -- transferred, even though they tried to be. But that's all that UBS has recovered from the actual judgment debtors. And that's why we're still here, that's why we have to stay here, and that's why we should be entitled to continue to make sure that this Court's injunctive power protects UBS's ability to continue in its efforts.

Thank you for your patience. I appreciate it.

THE COURT: All right. I'm going to ask you a couple of follow-up questions. I've heard today that once Highland's independent directors, Strand's, discovered all of this, the Sentinel policy and the transfer of assets, they immediately notified UBS. And one of the results was the settlement that had originally been struck between UBS and Highland was increased with $50 million more to go to UBS. Could you just elaborate on that? Before this was all discovered, the settlement that had been negotiated that was going to be presented to the Bankruptcy Court involved how much of an allowed claim that would be paid out of the estate and any other relevant components?

MR. MORRIS: Mr. Clubok, I have those numbers if you don't have them handy.

THE COURT: Okay. Or Mr. Morris.

MR. CLUBOK: Thank you. I was just going to -- so I would appreciate that.

MS. MORRIS: So, at the confirmation hearing, the proposed settlement was a Class 8 general unsecured claim for $50 million, a $25 million Class 9 subordinated general unsecured claim, and a cash payment of $18-1/2 million from Multi-Strat.

After the disclosure of this information, the Class 8 claim was increased by $15 million, from $50 to $65 million, and the Class 9 subordinated general unsecured claim was increased by $35 million, from $25 to $60 million. And the Multi-Strat cash payment remained the same.

So, just to summarize, the Class 8 claim went up by $15 million and the Class 9 claim went up by $35 million.

THE COURT: Okay. And just another refresher of my memory. The global mediation that happened in this case, it was summer 2020, the global mediation before former Judge Gropper and Sylvia Mayer. So I know UBS technically did not settle during that mediation, but it came about, you know, a few weeks or months after. But there had been participation by UBS and the Debtor in that mediation. And, again, this was summer 2020, before anyone knew about this Sentinel insurance policy, correct?

MR. CLUBOK: That's correct, Your Honor, but also, as you note, the mediation started in the summer of 2020. We were, prior to doing that mediation, in anticipation of that mediation, asking for all this financial information. To Mr. Seery's credit, as he testified, he said, Hey, we'll get it to you. We -- that's fair. And he said, I'll tell my folks to get whatever you need, or words to that effect.

We didn't settle in the first round when some others did, but we had continuing mediation sessions into the fall. And I believe, I don't have the exact dates, but I believe UBS then had follow-on continuing discussions with Judge Gropper or Ms. Mayer in, you know, I want to say October, September/October time frame. And that's when we're still in the mediation, we believe or we've been told at that time, oh, you've got all the information about the assets now, because in the first mediation we didn't have it, so that's why I said, hey, we can't settle. By the time we had that second set of sessions with Judge Gropper and Ms. Mayer, then we had been given all the information, as we now know, because Mr. Leventon, Mr. Ellington, and others told Mr. Seery and Mr. Morris and his team, hey, this is everything.

So, with that in hand, that's when we reached this initial settlement that Mr. Morris described to you. And then, you know, as we're working through it and we'd gotten that -- I think we finally got to that settlement by the end of the year, by the end of 2020. But then, luckily, as we continued to press for information, and then in January a lot of this gets uncovered. In fact, before we had finalized that settlement per those discussions, this was all uncovered. And so that's what caused us to, then, say, well, -- that were incurred related to this UBS claim and what was a fair and equitable settlement, without anyone having the benefit of the knowledge about this Sentinel transaction.

THE COURT: I'm just mainly trying to be clear. And I'm just thinking through all the time and attorneys' fees

MR. CLUBOK: For sure. And my point is it started August, but we worked all the way -- I think maybe it was even close to Christmas. I feel like it was very much at the end of the year when we finally got a settlement, and all that was on the fiction of the belated production of some of the assets, which then we get to January and it's like ah, gee, we have to start over again. And you know, it's all those months of attorneys' fees and time and et cetera, all because or largely because this information was hidden from Mr. Seery, Mr. Morris, and his colleagues.

THE COURT: Okay. My last question for you. We heard a little bit of testimony from Mr. Seery about the after-the-fact insurance policy and whether that's a thing or not. That's our new phrase in this case, "Is this really a thing or not?" it seems like.

What is your view of this? I mean, I'm certainly generally aware. I think Mr. Seery said, you know, in jurisdictions where there's a loser-pay concept as opposed to the American rule there is a concept such as this, I guess, to at least pay defense costs. But what is your take on this, you know, fake or real insurance policy?

MR. CLUBOK: So, so a slightly different take. It's a little more nuanced. There is certainly something called an after-the-event insurance policy that is not -- it would be common for some insurers to issue those policies. Sometimes it's call judgment insurance. And basically what happens is that, you know, let's say your company gets hit with some lawsuit, maybe it's an environmental potential liability, so it's now known that, you know, you are alleged to have leaked chemicals onto somebody's property. So, a claim is filed. Normally, obviously, you can't buy insurance to insure against something right after you find out about it, but there are companies, I understand, insurers, that will say, okay, you've already been sued; I'm going to now insure you against the judgment. Now, the premium might be very high, and we have to, you know, price it the right way. But, you know, you have a, you know, if you have a billion dollar claim, if you want a billion dollar judgment, the premium might be, you know, $250 million, or you have a $100 million claim, you know, it could be a $100 million claim, and so maybe the premium could be $25 [million]. Let's look at the strengths and weaknesses, we'll price it out, et cetera.

There is a market that I'm very loosely describing. I'm not an insurance expert. I'm not testifying here. But my understanding is that is a market and you could theoretically get it.

What is in the record here is that these guys came up with this idea that -- probably because they had heard there's something like this -- and they start with the proposition, okay, all the assets, hundred million coverage, let's backdoor figure out how to work it out.

They then ask Beecher Carlson to "shop it" to see if they could get a policy. And Beecher Carlson, there's extensive testimony in this, I'm not sure we submitted every bit, but we could if we needed to, basically said, yeah, we shopped around and no -- no insurance would have done it for anything like that. There would have been a very different premium. They would have had to do lots of due diligence. It would have been a whole different process.

They said some of them agreed to just look into it as a favor to Beecher Carlson, but they were never going to write a policy. And so there was some -- something suspect. Some of the individuals said, oh, this looks very legitimate. We priced it around. Now, one of -- some of them said, oh, we priced it around. There's other testimony that some of it's been designated by us that I didn't cover today for purpose of time that say, yeah, but no other insurer would -- no other insurer would do it at this price. Right?

Which just shows it's not -- even if it's a thing, theoretically, this particular transaction is not arm's length. Obviously, they grossly overpaid. They did it in a way that was very highly irregular for any insurance company.

And they -- and for Sentinel, it was the one and only ATE policy they ever tried to issue.

So, yes, it's a thing. That's why they -- there's enough there that they, in some of their deposition testimony, can sort of say, this is a legitimate thing. And that's why, you know, if we take them at their word, it's perfectly legitimate to have a hundred -- you know, had they told us, hey, we spent $25 million and we got in a $100 million insurance policy, we probably would have said, that sounds okay. You know.

Had they told us we shipped away $300 million face-value assets that were worth at least $105 million and then we're going to buy $100 million policies and we're going to hide it from you and never pay out on it, that wouldn't be so good. And that's the difference between a thing that's legit and a thing that is let's just say highly irregular.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. I just wanted to be educated on that point. I realize what the real beef is here, the nondisclosure.

MR. CLUBOK: Did I give you the information you needed?

THE COURT: What?

MR. CLUBOK: I'm sorry. Did I give you what you needed --

THE COURT: Yes, you did.

MR. CLUBOK: -- on that?

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

MR. CLUBOK: Okay.

THE COURT: Was there anything else? I think you rested, correct?

MR. CLUBOK: I assume Mr. Morris -- I don't know if there's going to be "closing arguments." I don't need any if Mr. Morris is comfortable with standing on the record, unless there's final --

MR. MORRIS: I've got about three minutes, Your Honor, if I may.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead, Mr. Morris.

CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE DEFENDANT

MR. MORRIS: Number one, I don't think anybody could fairly call this insurance policy a legitimate thing, and you know that from two undisputed facts. Number one, it was never disclosed, and number two, nobody ever made a claim until Jim Seery did. So nobody ever tried to recover the assets and nobody ever disclosed the existence of the policy. It is not a thing.

Number two, at Slide 79 of Mr. Clubok's presentation, you'll see a transfer of $6.4 million to an entity called Main Spring. You'll see that that transfer was made in the spring of 2020, and we believe, Your Honor, that that $6.4 million was part of the $10 million that Mr. Dondero referred to in April in open court when he testified that he had caused $10 million to be paid to Highland's insiders.

So, think about that. They transfer the money to Sentinel. That money was from the Defendants that UBS was suing. And then they use that money to pay the insiders at the same time they're signing the indemnity agreement. At the exact same moment.

Your Honor, I told you that Mr. Seery and the Debtor and the independent board agreed to the preliminary injunction but could not agree to a permanent injunction because they didn't have personal knowledge of all the facts. We knew of the existence of the policy, but Mr. Clubok's presentation and the work done by his team show exactly the justification, the rationale, and the common sense that Mr. Seery and the independent board showed in not rushing to a conclusion here.

The evidence that Mr. Clubok presented today was unknown to the Debtor, was unknown to the independent board, and we thank them for their diligence and for their work.

At the end of the day, Your Honor, to borrow a phrase the Court has used before, this is not a garden-variety commercial dispute. This is not a garden-variety fraudulent transfer action. This is not a garden-variety breach of fiduciary duty. This is fraud, plain and simple, compounded by the failure, the intentional -- knowing, intentional failure to disclose post-bankruptcy.

We'd respectfully request that the Court grant the motion.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, if I may.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. CLUBOK: Very briefly. I just --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE PLAINTIFF

MR. CLUBOK: Sorry. Yeah, as a housekeeping matter, I would like to offer our presentation as a demonstrative exhibit reflective of the evidence. We will provide you with a hard copy. It refers to, obviously, many of the exhibits that we submitted, and it'll be up to the Court's convenience, I think. I think we've -- we've given a copy to Mr. Morris ahead of time. I think there's no objection to that being submitted to Your Honor.

I would just like to, you know, end by saying, you know, we started the proceedings, we appreciate, we understand certainly why Highland wanted to stop the bleeding and stop spending money on this proceeding, and so that -- we have no issue with that.

We would ask that -- we provided a redline that makes mild edits that I think -- dare I hope, Mr. Morris, that, per agreement, can and should be made to the proposed order. They submitted one and we submitted a slightly proposed -- one which also referred to a consideration of the evidence that we anticipated being able to present today, and most importantly, now that we've presented that evidence today, I think that justifies a modest change in the order along the lines to that effect.

I see Mr. Morris nodding, so hopefully that means he agrees.

MR. MORRIS: It does. We hadn't heard the evidence before, Your Honor. I'd never seen Mr. Clubok's presentation. I didn't know quite what he was going to do today. And that's the reason why we had a slight dispute over some of the language.

But based on the evidence that I heard, you know, if we could take one last review of it and confirm, but I have no reason to believe that we'll have any objection.

THE COURT: All right. And you have no objection to the PowerPoint being part of the record, Mr. Morris?

MR. MORRIS: Not as -- not as a demonstrative exhibit, Your Honor, --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRIS: -- which is, I think, what Mr. Clubok said.

THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. Clubok, if you could send it to Traci Ellison, with copy to counsel, I will make that part of the record. It's always, I think, easier to understand a transcript, if anyone's looking at it after the fact, if they have the PowerPoint in the Court file to cross-reference.

Well, it's been, for lack of a better term, an amazing day of evidence. The Court believes the evidence is overwhelming to justify the granting of an injunction here. And as was stated early on, it's been phrased in terms of it being a permanent injunction, but as I understand it, the injunction sought would be to enjoin disbursement, disposition of the so-called transferred assets until a further order of a court of competent jurisdiction with regard to fraudulent transfer litigation or other litigation over the Sentinel matters or a settlement with Sentinel.

Certainly, the four prongs for an injunction have been met here.

I believe the relief is necessary to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the UBS entities.

I believe UBS has made a very strong showing of likely success on the merits here with regard to these transfers of assets being fraudulent and with regard to a potential showing of insolvency or inability of the transferors to pay debts as they become due, and as a result of the transfers, consideration for the transfers appears to have been inadequate.

Secrecy of the transaction.

Certainly, there are all of these indicia of fraud suggesting UBS would succeed on the merits.

The balance of equities certainly tip in favor of UBS here. Injury to it would appear to outweigh any damages that the injunction would cause Highland. And such relief would serve the public interest.

So, the Court reserves the right to supplement in a more fulsome form of order, but, again, the motion of the Debtor to withdraw its answer disputing this relief is granted, and I think judgment for this injunctive relief is also appropriate at this juncture.

I said that it's been an amazing day of evidence. It's been amazing. It's been exhausting. It's been troubling. You know, I think it was, Mr. Morris, you who said at the beginning today that, you know, Debtor-in-Possession counsel is not a prosecutor, it's not the SEC, it's not the State Bar disciplinary agency. And, you know, your goal for your client is always to maximize value for creditors and get a good overall result for all parties in interest affected by the bankruptcy.

I could say something similar right now that I, you know, I oversee these things. I apply the Bankruptcy Code to motions filed and different relief sought and grant relief where appropriate that is designed to help companies or people get a fresh start and help creditors get paid what they're justly owed.

But this evidence today, I am, unfortunately, duty-bound to do more than just sign the judgment and order that's submitted to me and forget about it. I'm just letting you know that referrals will likely be made to the State Bar disciplinary agencies regarding the attorneys' activities that I've heard about. And, you know, it's not a good day in court when I'm looking at 18 U.S.C. during the middle of evidence, but I'm just going to let observers who -- I don't who all is on the WebEx today. I don't have all the little boxes on my screen to know. But 18 U.S.C. Section 3057: Any judge having reasonable grounds for believing that violation of laws of the United Stated relating to insolvent debtors has been committed or that an investigation should be had in connection therewith shall report to the appropriate United States Attorney all the facts and circumstances of the case, the names of the witnesses, and the offense or offenses believed to have been committed. And there are different provisions of Title 18 that I'm very, very concerned may be implicated.

So, I'm duty-bound to go back and carefully look at some of the exhibits that have been submitted today. And, again, I'm not the U.S. Attorney and I'm not a criminal judge. I don't plan on combing over everything as, you know, a grand jury would do. But if I think there is enough there, I will be making a referral to the U.S. Attorney.

Again, the nondisclosure, the potential cover-up here is beyond troubling. And, you know, I'm duty-bound to do what

I've got to do if the exhibits look as damning as, you know, on further reflection in chambers, as they did sitting here on the bench today.

So, you know, I regret, I regret this greatly, but, you know, I'm just letting people know that it's a potential consequence of what I've heard today.

All right. Anything else? All right.

MR. MORRIS: No, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you. We stand adjourned.

EXHIBIT "A"

Hunter Mountain Trust (HMT) is the obligor under an original $63,000,000 Secured Promissory Note that HMT entered into with Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") as payee on or after December 21, 2015 (the "Secured Contribution Note") pursuant to the terms and conditions of the Contribution Agreement of even date where HMT made a cash contribution of $7,000,000 and issued the Secured Contribution Note for the balance of the $70,000,000 obligation detailed in the Contribution Agreement.

Just prior to the Petition Date, as of September 30, 2020, HMT was obligated to the Debtor in the amount of $56,873,209, with interest accruing thereafter with subsequently scheduled principal payments until the Secured Contribution Note comes due by its terms.

The amount of the claim stated on the proof of claim form ($60,298,739) is the maximum balance due by HMT to Debtor per the amortization schedule attached hereto if the Priority Distributions were timely made.

Notwithstanding denoting this amount as the maximum, the indemnity protect HMT from and against, any and all losses incurred or sustained by, or imposed upon it by virtue of the Debtor's failure to perform and such listed amount may necessarily increase over the stated amount in the proof of claim.

Pursuant to Section 6.02 of the Contribution Agreement (which caused the Secured Contribution Note to be executed and the cash contribution to be made) the Debtor (identified as the Partnership in the Contribution Agreement) agreed to indemnify HMT (identified as Contributor in the Contribution Agreement) as follows:

> Section 6.02 Indemnification By the Partnership. Subject to the other terms and conditions of this Article VI, the Partnership shall indemnify and defend Contributor and its trustees, sponsors, administrators, grantors, officers, directors, managers, Affiliates, beneficiaries, shareholders, members, partners, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Contributor Indemnified Parties") against, and shall hold the Contributor Indemnified Parties harmless from and against, any and all Losses incurred or sustained by, or imposed upon, any Contributor Indemnified Parties based upon, arising out of, with respect to or by reason of:
> (a) any inaccuracy in or breach of any of the representations or warranties of the Partnership contained in this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party;
> (b) any breach or non-fulfillment of any covenant, agreement or obligation to be performed by the Partnership pursuant to this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party; and

(c) any and all actions, suits, proceedings, claims, demands and Losses incident to any of the foregoing or incurred in attempting to oppose the imposition thereof, or in enforcing this indemnity. [emphasis added]

While there are limitations on this indemnity, as detailed in Section 6.05, those limitations do not affect HMT's claim for indemnity for the Debtor's existing or future failures to address its obligation to make Priority Distributions to HMT as detailed first in the Third Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Highland Capital Management, L.P. dated December 21, 2015 attached to the Contribution Agreement (all of which were retained in the Fourth Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Highland Capital Management, L.P. dated December 24, 2015 – referenced in the Debtor's Schedule G):

3.9 (b) Priority Distributions. Prior to the distribution of any amounts to Partners pursuant to Section 3.9(a), and notwithstanding any other provision in this Agreement to the contrary, the Partnership shall make the following distributions ("Priority Distributions") pro-rata among the Class B Partners[1] in accordance with their relative Percentage Interests:

(i) No later than March 31st of each calendar year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to $1,600,000.00;

(ii) No later than March 31st of each year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to three percent (3%) of the Partnership's investment gain for the prior year, as reflected in the Partnership's books and records within ledger account number 90100 plus three percent (3%) of the gross realized investment gains for the prior year of Highland Select Equity Fund, as reflected in its books and records; and

(iii) No later than March 31st of each year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to ten percent (10%) of the Partnership's Operating Cash Flow for the prior year.

4.2 (e) Default on Priority Distributions. If the Partnership fails to timely pay Priority Distributions pursuant to Section 3.9(b), and the Partnership does not subsequently make such Priority Distribution within ninety days of its due date, the Class B Limited Partner may require the Partnership to liquidate publicly traded securities held by the Partnership or Highland Select Equity Master Fund, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership controlled by the Partnership; provided, however, that the General Partner may in its sole discretion elect instead to liquidate other non-publicly traded securities owned by the Partnership in order to satisfy the Partnership's obligations under Section 3.9(b) and this Section 4.2(e). In either case, Affiliates of the General Partner shall have the right of first offer to purchase any securities liquidated under this Section 4.2(e).

With regard to missed Priority Distributions and Priority Distributions that likely will not occur hereinafter, HMT claims the maximum benefit available to it on account of the Indemnity referenced in Section 6.02 of the Contribution Agreement, with regard to the Debtor's obligation to fund Priority Distributions per the Fourth Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership, an "agreement or obligation to be performed by the Partnership pursuant to this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party."

[1] HMT is the sole Class B Partner

Pursuant to Section 6.05 (e) of the Contribution Agreement HMT's remedy is subject to the following restriction where Partnership is the Debtor and HMT is an Indemnified Party:

> (e) Subject to the limitations in this Section 6.05, any indemnification obligation of the Partnership under Section 6.02 shall not be payable to the Indemnified Party in cash, but shall instead be satisfied by a reduction in the principal balance of the Contribution Note for the amount of such indemnification obligation.

This provision of the Contribution Agreement, HMT, asserts, functionally sets up a contractual right of set off as to any claim by the Debtor under the Secured Contribution Note in addition to any common law right of set off which HMT may have as against any claims by the Debtor with regard to the any obligations due under the Secured Contribution Note.

Complete copies of documents supporting this proof of claim are available from counsel for HMT upon request.

"Term" has the meaning set forth in Section 7.01.

ARTICLE II
SHARED SERVICES

Section 2.01 Services. During the Term, Service Provider will provide Recipient with Shared Services, including without limitation, all of the (i) finance and accounting services, (ii) human resources services, (iii) marketing services, (iv) legal services, (v) corporate services, (vi) information technology services, and (vii) operations services; each as requested by HCMFA and as described more fully on Annex A attached hereto, the "Shared Services"), it being understood that personnel providing Shared Services may be deemed to be employees of HCMFA to the extent necessary for purposes of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended.

Section 2.02 Changes to the Shared Services.

(a) During the Term, the Parties may agree to modify the terms and conditions of a Service Provider's performance of any Shared Service in order to reflect new procedures, processes or other methods of providing such Shared Service, including modifying the applicable fees for such Shared Service to reflect the then current fair market value of such service (a "Change"). The Parties will negotiate in good faith the terms upon which a Service Provider would be willing to provide such New Shared Service to Recipient.

(b) The Party requesting a Change will deliver a description of the Change requested (a "Change Request") and no Party receiving a Change Request may unreasonably withhold, condition or delay its consent to the proposed Change.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, a Service Provider may make: (i) Changes to the process of performing a particular Shared Service that do not adversely affect the benefits to Recipient of Service Provider's provision or quality of such Shared Service in any material respect or increase Recipient's cost for such Shared Service; (ii) emergency Changes on a temporary and short-term basis; and/or (iii) Changes to a particular Shared Service in order to comply with applicable law or regulatory requirements, in each case without obtaining the prior consent of Recipient. A Service Provider will notify Recipient in writing of any such Change as follows: in the case of clauses (i) and (iii) above, prior to the implementation of such Change, and, in the case of clause (ii) above, as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter.

Section 2.03 New Shared Services. The Parties may, from time to time during the Term of this Agreement, negotiate in good faith for Shared Services not otherwise specifically listed in Section 2.01 (a "New Shared Service"). Any agreement between the Parties on the terms for a New Shared Service must be in accordance with the provisions of Article IV and Article V hereof, will be deemed to be an amendment to this Agreement and such New Shared Service will then be a "Shared Service" for all purposes of this Agreement.

Section 2.04 Subcontractors. Nothing in this Agreement will prevent Service Provider from, with the consent of Recipient, using subcontractors, hired with due care, to perform all or any part of a Shared Service hereunder. A Service Provider will remain fully responsible for the performance of its obligations under this Agreement in accordance with its terms, including any obligations it performs through subcontractors, and a Service Provider will be solely responsible for payments due to its subcontractors.

ARTICLE III
SHARED ASSETS

Section 3.01 Shared IP Rights. Each Service Provider hereby grants to Recipient a non-exclusive right and license to use the intellectual property and other rights granted or licensed, directly or indirectly, to such Service Provider (the "Shared IP Rights") pursuant to third party intellectual property Agreements ("Third Party IP Agreements"), provided that the rights granted to Recipient hereunder are subject to the terms and conditions of the applicable Third Party IP Agreement, and that such rights shall terminate, as applicable, upon the expiration or termination of the applicable Third Party IP Agreement. Recipient shall be licensed to use the Shared IP Rights only for so long as it remains an Affiliate of HCMLP. In consideration of the foregoing licenses, Recipient agrees to take such further reasonable actions as a Service Provider deems to be necessary or desirable to comply with its obligations under the Third Party IP Agreements.

Section 3.02 Other Shared Assets. Subject to Section 3.01, each Service Provider hereby grants Recipient the right, license or permission, as applicable, to use and access the benefits under the agreements, contracts and licenses that such Service Provider will purchase, acquire, become a party or beneficiary to or license on behalf of Recipient (the "Future Shared Assets" and collectively with the Shared IP Rights, the "Shared Assets").

ARTICLE IV
COST ALLOCATION

Section 4.01 Actual Cost Allocation Formula. The Actual Cost of any item relating to any Shared Services or Shared Assets shall be allocated based on the Allocation Percentage. For purposes of this Agreement, "Allocation Percentage" means:

(a) To the extent 100% of such item is demonstrably attributable to HCMFA, 100% of the Actual Cost of such item shall be allocated to HCMFA as agreed by HCMFA;

(b) To the extent a specific percentage of use of such item can be determined (e.g., 70% for HCMLP and 30% for HCMFA), that specific percentage of the Actual Cost of such item will be allocated to HCMLP or HCMFA, as applicable and as agreed by HCMFA; and

(c) All other portions of the Actual Cost of any item that cannot be allocated pursuant to clause (a) or (b) above shall be allocated between HCMLP and HCMFA in such proportion as is agreed in good faith between the parties.

Section 4.02 Non-Cash Cost Allocation. The actual, fully burdened cost of any item relating to any Shared Services or Shared Assets that does not result in a direct, out of pocket cash expense may be allocated to HCMLP and HCMFA for financial statement purposes only, as agreed by HCMFA, without any corresponding cash reimbursement required, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, based on the Allocation Percentage principles described in Section 4.01 hereof.

ARTICLE V
PAYMENT OF COST AND REVENUE SHARE; TAXES

Section 5.01 Quarterly Statements. Within thirty (30) days following the end of each calendar qaurter during the Term (or at such time as may be otherwise agreed by the parties), each Service Provider shall furnish the other Parties hereto with a written statement with respect to the Actual Cost paid by it in respect of Shared Services and Shared Assets provided by it, in each case, during such period, setting forth (i) the cost allocation in accordance with Article IV hereof together with the Applicable Margin on such allocated amounts, and (ii) any amounts paid pursuant to Section 5.02 hereof, together with such other data and information necessary to complete the items described in Section 5.03 hereof (hereinafter referred to as the "Quarterly Report").

Section 5.02 Settlement Payments. At any time during the Term, any Party may make payment of the amounts that are allocable to such Party together with the Applicable Margin related thereto, regardless of whether an invoice pursuant to Section 5.03 hereof has been issued with respect to such amounts.

Section 5.03 Determination and Payment of Cost and Revenue Share.

(a) Within ten (10) days of the submission of the Quarterly Report described in Section 5.02 hereof (or at such other time as may be agreed by the parties), the Parties shall (i) agree on the cost share of each of the Parties and Applicable Margin as calculated pursuant to the provisions of this Agreement; and (ii) prepare and issue invoices for the cost share and Applicable Margin payments that are payable by any of the Parties.

(b) Within ten (10) days of preparation of the agreement and the issuance of the invoice described in Section 5.03(a) (or at such other time as may be agreed by the parties), the Parties shall promptly make payment of the amounts that are set forth on such cost allocation invoice. Notwithstanding anything in this Agreement to the contrary, provision of the Shared Services shall commence from the Effective Date, but no fees shall be payable from Recipient or otherwise accrue with respect to such services provided during the month of December 2011.

Section 5.04 Taxes.

(a) Recipient is responsible for and will pay all Taxes applicable to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets provided to Recipient, provided, that such payments by Recipient to Service Provider will be made in the most tax-efficient manner and provided further, that Service Provider will not be subject to any liability for Taxes applicable to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets as a result of such payment by Recipient. Service Provider will collect such Tax from Recipient in the same manner it collects such Taxes from other customers in the ordinary course of Service Provider's business, but in no event prior to the time it invoices Recipient for the Shared Services and Shared Assets, costs for which such Taxes are levied. Recipient may provide Service Provider with a certificate evidencing its exemption from payment of or liability for such Taxes.

(b) Service Provider will reimburse Recipient for any Taxes collected from Recipient and refunded to Service Provider. In the event a Tax is assessed against Service Provider that is solely the responsibility of Recipient and Recipient desires to protest such assessment, Recipient will submit to Service Provider a statement of the issues and arguments requesting that Service Provider grant Recipient the authority to prosecute the protest in Service Provider's name. Service Provider's authorization will not be unreasonably withheld. Recipient will finance, manage, control and determine the strategy for such protest while keeping Service Provider reasonably informed of the proceedings. However, the authorization will be periodically reviewed by Service Provider to determine any adverse impact on Service Provider, and Service Provider will have the right to reasonably withdraw such authority at any time. Upon notice by Service Provider that it is so withdrawing such authority, Recipient will expeditiously terminate all proceedings. Any adverse consequences suffered by Recipient as a result of the withdrawal will be submitted to arbitration pursuant to Section 9.14. Any contest for Taxes brought by Recipient may not result in any lien attaching to any property or rights of Service Provider or otherwise jeopardize Service Provider's interests or rights in any of its property. Recipient agrees to indemnify Service Provider for all Losses that Service Provider incurs as a result of any such contest by Recipient.

(c) The provisions of this Section 5.04 will govern the treatment of all Taxes arising as a result of or in connection with this Agreement notwithstanding any other Article of this Agreement to the contrary.

ARTICLE VI
SERVICE PROVIDER RESPONSIBILITIES

Section 6.01 Service Provider General Obligations. Service Provider will provide the Shared Services and the Shared Assets to Recipient on a non-discriminatory basis and will provide the Shared Services and the Shared Assets in the same manner as if it were providing such services and assets on its own account (the "Service Standards"). Service Provider will conduct its duties hereunder in a lawful manner in compliance with applicable laws, statutes, rules and regulations and in accordance with the Service Standards, including, for avoidance of doubt, laws and regulations relating to privacy of customer information.

Section 6.02 Books and Records; Access to Information. Service Provider will keep and maintain books and records on behalf of Recipient in accordance with past practices and internal control procedures. Recipient will have the right, at any time and from time to time upon reasonable prior notice to Service Provider, to inspect and copy (at its expense) during normal business hours at the offices of Service Provider the books and records relating to the Shared Services and Shared Assets, with respect to Service Provider's performance of its obligations hereunder. This inspection right will include the ability of Recipient's financial auditors to review such books and records in the ordinary course of performing standard financial auditing services for Recipient (but subject to Service Provider imposing reasonable access restrictions to Service Provider's and its Affiliates' proprietary information and such financial auditors executing appropriate confidentiality agreements reasonably acceptable to Service Provider). Service Provider will promptly respond to any reasonable requests for information or access. For the avoidance of doubt, all books and records kept and maintained by Service Provider on behalf of Recipient shall be the property of Recipient, and Service Provider will surrender promptly to Recipient any of such books or records upon Recipient's request (provided that Service Provider may retain a copy of such books or records) and shall make all such books and records available for inspection and use by the Securities and Exchange Commission or any person retained by Recipient at all reasonable times. Such records shall be maintained by Service Provider for the periods and in the places required by laws and regulations applicable to Recipient.

Section 6.03 Return of Property and Equipment. Upon expiration or termination of this Agreement, Service Provider will be obligated to return to Recipient, as soon as is reasonably practicable, any equipment or other property or materials of Recipient that is in Service Provider's control or possession.

ARTICLE VII
TERM AND TERMINATION

Section 7.01 Term. The term of this Agreement will commence as of the Effective Date and will continue in full force and effect until the first anniversary of the Effective Date (the "Term"), unless terminated earlier in accordance with Section 9.02. The Term shall automatically renew for successive one year periods unless sooner terminated under Section 7.02.

Section 7.02 Termination. Either Party may terminate this Agreement, with or without cause, upon at least 60 days advance written notice at any time prior to the expiration of the Term.

ARTICLE VIII
LIMITED WARRANTY

Section 8.01 Limited Warranty. Service Provider will perform the Shared Services hereunder in accordance with the Service Standards. Except as specifically provided in this Agreement, Service Provider makes no express or implied representations, warranties or guarantees relating to its performance of the Shared Services and the granting of the Shared Assets under this Agreement, including any warranty of merchantability, fitness, quality, non-infringement of third party rights, suitability or adequacy of the Shared Services and the Shared Assets for any purpose or use or purpose. Service Provider will (to the extent possible and subject to Service Provider's contractual obligations) pass through the benefits of any express warranties received from third parties relating to any Shared Service and Shared Asset, and will (at Recipient's expense) assist Recipient with any warranty claims related thereto.

ARTICLE IX

Each of the signatories hereto is individually a "Party" and collectively the "Parties".

RECITALS

A. During the Term, HCMLP will seek reimbursement from NexPoint for the cost of certain employees who are dual employees of HCMLP and NexPoint and who provide advice to registered investment companies advised by NexPoint under the direction and supervision of NexPoint as more fully described in this Agreement.

AGREEMENT

In consideration of the foregoing recitals and the mutual covenants and conditions contained herein, the Parties agree, intending to be legally bound, as follows:

ARTICLE I
DEFINITIONS

"Actual Cost" means, with respect to any period hereunder, the actual costs and expenses caused by, incurred or otherwise arising from or relating to each Dual Employee, in each case during such period. Absent any changes to employee reimbursement, as set forth in Section 2.02, such costs and expenses are equal to $252,000 per month.

"Affiliate" means a Person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls, or is controlled by, or is under common control with, a specified Person. The term "control" (including, with correlative meanings, the terms "controlled by" and "under common control with") means the possession of the power to direct the management and policies of the referenced Person, whether through ownership interests, by contract or otherwise.

"Agreement" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Allocation Percentage" has the meaning set forth in Section 3.01.

"Dual Employee" has the meaning set forth in Section 2.01.

"Effective Date" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Party" or "Parties" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Person" means an association, a corporation, an individual, a partnership, a limited liability company, a trust or any other entity or organization.

"Tax" or "Taxes" means: (i) all state and local sales, use, value-added, gross receipts, foreign, privilege, utility, infrastructure maintenance, property, federal excise and similar levies, duties and other similar tax-like charges lawfully levied by a duly constituted taxing authority against or upon the Shared Services and the Shared Assets; and (ii) tax-related surcharges or fees that are related to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets identified and authorized by applicable tariffs.

ARTICLE II
EMPLOYEE REIMBURSEMENT

Section 2.01 Employee Reimbursement. During the Term, NexPoint shall reimburse HCMLP for the Actual Cost to HCMLP of certain employees who (i) are dual employees of HCMLP and NexPoint and (ii) provide advice to any investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act") pursuant to an investment advisory agreement between NexPoint and such investment company (each, a "Fund") under the direction and supervision of NexPoint (each, a "Dual Employee").

Section 2.02 Changes to Employee Reimbursement. During the Term, the Parties may agree to modify the terms and conditions of NexPoint's reimbursement in order to reflect new procedures or processes, including modifying the Allocation Percentage (defined below) applicable to such Dual Employee to reflect the then current fair market value of such Dual Employee's employment. The Parties will negotiate in good faith the terms of such modification.

ARTICLE III
COST ALLOCATION

Section 3.01 Actual Cost Allocation Formula. The Actual Cost of any Dual Employee relating to the investment advisory services provided to a Fund shall be allocated based on the Allocation Percentage. For purposes of this Agreement, "Allocation Percentage" means the Parties' good faith determination of the percentage of each Dual Employee's aggregate hours worked during a quarter that were spent on NexPoint matters, as listed on Exhibit A.

ARTICLE IV
PAYMENT OF COST AND REVENUE SHARE; TAXES

Section 4.01 Settlement Payments. At any time during the Term, NexPoint may make payment of the amounts that are allocable to it.

Section 4.02 Determination and Payment of Cost. NexPoint shall promptly make payment of the Actual Cost within ten (10) days of the end of each calendar month. Should either Party determine that a change to employee reimbursement is appropriate, as set forth in Section 2.02, the Party requesting the modification shall notify the other Party on or before the last business day of the calendar month.

Section 4.03 Taxes.

(a) NexPoint is responsible for and will pay all Taxes applicable to it, provided, that such payments by NexPoint to HCMLP will be made in the most tax-efficient manner and provided further, that HCMLP will not be subject to any liability for Taxes applicable to the cost of a Dual Employee of NexPointas a result of such payment by NexPoint. HCMLP will collect such Tax from NexPoint in the same manner it collects such Taxes from other customers in the ordinary course of its business, but in no event prior to the time it invoices NexPoint for costs for which such Taxes are levied. NexPoint may provide HCMLP with a certificate evidencing its exemption from payment of or liability for such Taxes.

(b) NexPoint will reimburse HCMLP for any Taxes collected from HCMLP and refunded to NexPoint. In the event a Tax is assessed against NexPoint that is solely the responsibility of HCMLP and HCMLP desires to protest such assessment, HCMLP will submit to NexPoint a statement of the issues and arguments requesting that NexPoint grant HCMLP the authority to prosecute the protest in NexPoint's name. NexPoint's authorization will not be unreasonably withheld. HCMLP will finance, manage, control and determine the strategy for such protest while keeping NexPoint reasonably informed of the proceedings. However, the authorization will be periodically reviewed by NexPoint to determine any adverse impact on NexPoint, and NexPoint will have the right to reasonably withdraw such authority at any time. Upon notice by NexPoint that it is so withdrawing such authority, HCMLP will expeditiously terminate all proceedings. Any adverse consequences suffered by HCMLP as a result of the withdrawal will be submitted to litigation pursuant to Section 6.14. Any contest for Taxes brought by HCMLP may not result in any lien attaching to any property or rights of NexPoint or otherwise jeopardize NexPoint's interests or rights in any of its property.

(c) The provisions of this Section 4.03 will govern the treatment of all Taxes arising as a result of or in connection with this Agreement notwithstanding any other Article of this Agreement to the contrary.

ARTICLE V

The Staff and Services Provider shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided that the Staff and Services Provider shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

The Staff and Services Provider shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Staff and Services Provider hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties, except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued by a CLO or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolio, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any Client or Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity, (iv) as required by (A) Applicable Law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Staff and Services Provider or any of its Affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Staff and Services Provider on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Staff and Services Provider may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any Client or Account, (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolio as may be used by the Staff and Services Provider in the ordinary course of its business or (xx) such information as is routinely disclosed to the trustee, custodian or collateral administrator of any Client or Account in connection with such trustee's, custodian's or collateral administrator's performance of its obligations under the transaction documents related to such Client or Account. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Staff and Services Provider may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as staff and services provider to the Management Company, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolio, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolio, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolio and the Clients or Accounts as is customarily disclosed by staff and services providers to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Staff and Services Provider, the Clients or Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

EXCULPATION AND INDEMNIFICATION

Section 6.01 Standard of Care. Except as otherwise expressly provided herein, each Covered Person shall discharge its duties under this Agreement with the care, skill, prudence and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, each Covered Person shall follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder. No Covered Person shall deal with the income or assets of the Management Company in such Covered Person's own interest or for its own account. Each Covered Person in its respective sole and absolute discretion may separately engage or invest in any other business ventures, including those that may be in competition with the Management Company, and the Management Company will not have any rights in or to such ventures or the income or profits derived therefrom

Section 6.02 Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, or any shareholder, partner or member thereof, for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the conduct of the business of the Management Company or its General Partner, or any investment made or held by the Management Company or its General Partner, unless it is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a "Disabling Conduct") on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any act or omission of any Investor, (iii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of such Covered Person, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of such Covered Person with reasonable care, or (iv) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to the Management Company or any Member, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to the Management Company or to any such Member for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement. The exculpations set forth in this Section 6.02 shall exculpate any Covered Person regardless of such Covered Person's sole, comparative, joint, concurrent, or subsequent negligence.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to the Management Company or any Member solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to the Management Company or the Members, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to the Management Company or any Member in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care.

Section 6.03 Indemnification by the Management Company. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, causes of action (including, but not limited to, strict liability, negligence, statutory violation, regulatory violation, breach of contract, and all other torts and claims arising under common law), demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated ("Claims"), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the investment or other activities of the Management Company or its General Partner, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company or its General Partner, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a "Proceeding"), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as "Damages"), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons. Any Covered Person shall be indemnified under the terms of this Section 6.03 regardless of such Covered Person's sole, comparative, joint, concurrent, or subsequent negligence.

Expenses (including attorneys' fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder shall be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 6.03 shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 6.03 to the fullest extent permitted by law.

Section 6.04 Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 6.03 are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any of the Clients or Accounts has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained.

Section 6.05 Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 6.03 shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person.

Section 6.06 Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to the Management Company or any Member in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

ARTICLE VII

TERMINATION

Section 7.01 Termination. Either Party may terminate this Agreement at any time upon at least thirty (30) days' written notice to the other.

ARTICLE VIII

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 8.01 Amendments. This Agreement may not be amended or modified except by an instrument in writing signed by each Party.

Section 8.02 Assignment and Delegation.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 8.02, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with Applicable Law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 8.02, the Staff and Services Provider may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with Applicable Law.

(c) The Staff and Services Provider may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 8.02(a) other than clause (ii) thereof, (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an Affiliate; provided that such Affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Staff and Services Provider pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Staff and Services Provider in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided further that the Staff and Services Provider shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Staff and Services Provider will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

Section 8.03 Non-Recourse; Non-Petition.

(a) The Staff and Services Provider agrees that the payment of all amounts to which it is entitled pursuant to this Agreement shall be payable by the Management Company only to the extent of assets held in the Portfolio.

(b) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, the liability of the Management Company to the Staff and Services Provider hereunder is limited in recourse to the Portfolio, and if the proceeds of the Portfolio following the liquidation thereof are insufficient to meet the obligations of the Management Company hereunder in full, the Management Company shall have no further liability in respect of any such outstanding obligations, and such obligations and all claims of the Staff and Services Provider or any other Person against the Management Company hereunder shall thereupon extinguish and not thereafter revive. The Staff and Services Provider accepts that the obligations of the Management Company hereunder are the corporate obligations of the Management Company and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Management Company and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Management Company hereunder.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, any Staff and Services Provider agrees not to institute against, or join any other Person in instituting against, the Management Company any bankruptcy, reorganization, arrangement, insolvency, moratorium or liquidation proceedings, or other proceedings under United States federal or state bankruptcy laws, or similar laws until at least one year and one day (or, if longer, the then applicable preference period plus one day) after the payment in full all amounts payable in respect of any Indebtedness incurred to finance any portion of the Portfolio; provided that nothing in this provision shall preclude, or be deemed to stop, the Staff and Services Provider from taking any action prior to the expiration of the aforementioned one year and one day period (or, if longer, the applicable preference period then in effect plus one day) in (i) any case or proceeding voluntarily filed or commenced by the Management Company, or (ii) any involuntary insolvency proceeding filed or commenced against the Management Company by a Person other than the Staff and Services Provider.

(d) The Management Company hereby acknowledges and agrees that the Staff and Services Provider's obligations hereunder shall be solely the corporate obligations of the Staff and Services Provider, and are not the obligations of any employee, member, officer, director or administrator of the Staff and Services Provider and no action may be taken against any such Person in relation to the obligations of the Staff and Services Provider hereunder.

(e) The provisions of this Section 8.03 shall survive termination of this Agreement for any reason whatsoever.

Section 8.04 Governing Law.

(a) This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The Parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

(b) The Parties irrevocably agree for the benefit of each other that the courts of the State of Texas and the United States District Court located in the Northern District of Texas in Dallas are to have exclusive jurisdiction to settle any disputes (whether contractual or non-contractual) which may arise out of or in connection with this Agreement and that accordingly any action arising out of or in connection therewith (together referred to as "Proceedings") may be brought in such courts. The Parties irrevocably submit to the jurisdiction of such courts and waive any objection which they may have now or hereafter to the laying of the venue of any Proceedings in any such court and any claim that any Proceedings have been brought in an inconvenient forum and further irrevocably agree that a judgment in any Proceedings brought in such courts shall be conclusive and binding upon the Parties and may be enforced in the courts of any other jurisdiction.

Section 8.05 WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY IN RESPECT OF ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

Section 8.06 Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the Parties shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the Parties.

Section 8.07 No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any Party may be waived only upon the written consent of the Parties. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other Party. Any failure by any Party to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

Section 8.08 Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written or electronic form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any Party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the Parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

Section 8.09 Third Party Beneficiaries. This Agreement is for the sole benefit of the Parties hereto and their permitted assigns and nothing herein express or implied shall give or be construed to give to any Person, other than the Parties hereto and such permitted assigns, any legal or equitable rights hereunder. For avoidance of doubt, this Agreement is not for the benefit or and is not enforceable by any Shared Employee, Client or Account or any investor (directly or indirectly) in the Management Company.

Section 8.10 No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the Parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the Parties, no Party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other Party.

Section 8.11 Independent Contractor. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the Staff and Services Provider shall be deemed to be an independent contractor and, except as expressly provided or authorized herein, shall have no authority to act for or represent the Management Company or any Client or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity in any manner or otherwise be deemed an agent of the Management Company or any Client or Account in which the Management Company acts as portfolio manager or investment manager or in a similar capacity.

Section 8.12 Written Disclosure Statement. The Management Company acknowledges receipt of Part 2 of the Staff and Services Provider's Form ADV, as required by Rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act, on or before the date of execution of this Agreement.

Section 8.13 Headings. The descriptive headings contained in this Agreement are for convenience of reference only and shall not affect in any way the meaning or interpretation of this Agreement.

Section 8.14 Entire Agreement. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the Parties with respect to such subject matter.

SUB-ADVISORY AGREEMENT

This Sub-Advisory Agreement (as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated from time to time in accordance with the terms hereof, this "Agreement"), dated effective as of January 1, 2018, is entered into by and between NexPoint Advisors, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership, as the management company hereunder (in such capacity, the "Management Company"), and Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Highland"), as the sub-advisor hereunder (in such capacity, the "Sub-Advisor" and together with the Management Company, the "Parties").

WHEREAS, the Management Company from time to time has entered and will enter into portfolio management agreements, investment management agreements and/or similar agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a "Management Agreement") and related indentures, credit agreements, collateral administration agreements, service agreements or other agreements (each such agreement as amended, modified, waived, supplemented or restated, subject in each case to the requirements of Section 8, a "Related Agreement"), in each case as set forth on Appendix A hereto, as amended from time to time, pursuant to which the Management Company has agreed to provide portfolio and/or investment management services to certain funds and accounts (any such fund or account, an "Account", and the assets comprising the portfolio of such Account, a "Portfolio"); and

WHEREAS, the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor desire to enter into this Agreement in order to permit the Sub-Advisor to provide certain limited services to assist the Management Company in performing certain obligations under the Management Agreements and Related Agreements.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals, and the receipt of good and valuable consideration, the receipt and sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties, intending to be legally bound, hereby agree as follows.

1. Appointment; Limited Scope of Services.

(a) Highland is hereby appointed as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company for the purpose of assisting the Management Company in managing the Portfolios of each Account pursuant to the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, in each case that have been included in the scope of this Agreement pursuant to the provisions of Section 8, subject to the terms set forth herein and subject to the supervision of the Management Company, and Highland hereby accepts such appointment.

(b) Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor shall, during the term and subject to the provisions of this Agreement:

(i) make recommendations to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio with respect to such Account among various types of securities, the nature and timing of the changes therein and the manner of implementing such changes, including recommendations as to the specific assets to be purchased, retained or sold by any such Account;

(ii) place orders with respect to, and arrange for, any investment by or on behalf of such Account (including executing and delivering all documents relating to such Account's investments on behalf of such Account or the Management Company, as applicable), upon receiving a proper instruction from the Management Company;

(iii) identify, evaluate and recommend to the Management Company, in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account, and, if applicable, negotiate the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of the Management Company for such Account;

(iv) assist the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account in performing due diligence on prospective Portfolio investments by such Account;

(v) provide information to the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments and, if requested by the Management Company, provide information to assist in monitoring and servicing other investments by such Account;

(vi) assist and advise the Management Company in its capacity as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis; and

(vii) assist the Management Company in performing any of its other obligations or duties as portfolio manager, investment manager or any similar capacity for any applicable Account.

The foregoing responsibilities and obligations are collectively referred to herein as the "Services."

Notwithstanding the foregoing, all investment decisions will ultimately be the responsibility of, and will be made by and at the sole discretion of, the Management Company. Furthermore, the parties acknowledge and agree that the Sub-Advisor shall be required to provide only the services expressly described in this Section 1(b), and shall have no responsibility hereunder to provide any other services to the Management Company, including, but not limited to, administrative, management or similar services.

(c) The Sub-Advisor agrees during the term hereof to furnish the Services on the terms and conditions set forth herein and subject to the limitations contained herein. The Sub-Advisor agrees that, in performing the Services, it will comply with all applicable obligations of the Management Company set forth in the Management Agreements and the Related Agreements.

In addition, with respect to any obligation that would be part of the Services but for the fact that the relevant Management Agreement or Related Agreement does not permit such obligation to be delegated by the Management Company to the Sub-Advisor, the Sub-Advisor, upon request in writing by the Management Company, shall work in good faith with the Management Company and shall use commercially reasonable efforts to assist the Management Company in satisfying all such obligations.

2. Compensation.

(a) As compensation for its performance of its obligations as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement, the Sub-Advisor will be entitled to receive a monthly fee in the amount of Two Hundred Fifty-Two Thousand and 00/100 Dollars ($252,000.00) (the "Sub-Advisory Fee"). The Sub-Advisory Fee shall be payable monthly in advance.

(b) Each party shall bear its own expenses.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, if on any date the Management Company determines that it would not have sufficient funds available to it to make a payment of Indebtedness, it shall have the right to defer any and all amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement, including any fees and expenses; provided that the Management Company shall promptly pay all such amounts on the first date thereafter that sufficient amounts exist to make payment thereof.

3. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each of the Management Company and the Sub-Advisor represents and warrants, as to itself only, that:

(i) it has full power and authority to execute and deliver, and to perform its obligations under, this Agreement;

(ii) this Agreement has been duly authorized, executed and delivered by it and constitutes its valid and binding, obligation, enforceable in accordance with its terms except as the enforceability hereof may be subject to (i) bankruptcy, insolvency, reorganization moratorium, receivership, conservatorship or other similar laws now or hereafter in effect relating to creditors' rights and (ii) general principles of equity (regardless of whether such enforcement is considered in a proceeding, in equity or at law);

(iii) no consent, approval, authorization or order of or declaration or filing with any government, governmental instrumentality or court or other person or entity is required for the execution of this Agreement or the performance by it of its duties hereunder, except such as have been duly made or obtained; and

(iv) neither the execution and delivery of this Agreement nor the fulfillment of the terms hereof conflicts with or results in a breach or violation of any of the terms or provisions of, or constitutes a default under, (A) its constituting and organizational documents; (B) the terms of any material indenture, contract, lease, mortgage, deed of trust, note, agreement or other evidence of indebtedness or other material agreement, obligation, condition, covenant or instrument to which it is a party or by which it is bound; (C) any statute applicable to it; or (D) any law, decree, order, rule or regulation applicable to it of any court or regulatory, administrative or governmental agency, body of authority or arbitration having or asserting jurisdiction over it or its properties, which, in the case of clauses (B) through (D) above, would have a material adverse effect upon the performance of its duties hereunder.

(b) The Sub-Advisor represents and warrants to the Management Company that it is a registered investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended (the "Advisers Act").

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that it has received Part 2 of the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Sub-Advisor will provide to the Management Company an updated copy of Part 2 of its Form ADV promptly upon any amendment to such Form ADV being filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

4. Standard of Care; Liability; Indemnification.

(a) Sub-Advisor Standard of Care. Subject to the terms and provisions of this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements, as applicable, the Sub-Advisor will perform its obligations hereunder and under the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements in good faith with reasonable care using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Sub-Advisor uses with respect to comparable assets that it manages for others and, without limiting the foregoing, in a manner which the Sub-Advisor reasonably believes to be consistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing relating to assets of the nature and character of the Portfolios, in each case except as expressly provided otherwise under this Agreement, the Management Agreements and/or the Related Agreements. To the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, the Sub-Advisor will follow its customary standards, policies and procedures in performing its duties hereunder, under the Management Agreements and/or under the Related Agreements.

(b) Exculpation. To the fullest extent permitted by law, none of the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates, and any of their respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents (but shall not include the Management Company, its subsidiaries or member(s) and any managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents of the Management Company or its subsidiaries or member(s) (in their capacity as such)) (each a "Covered Person") will be liable to the Management Company, any Member, any shareholder, partner or member thereof, any Account (or any other adviser, agent or representative thereof), or to any holder of notes, securities or other indebtedness issued by any Account (collectively, the "Management Company Related Parties"), for (i) any acts or omissions by such Covered Person arising out of or in connection with the provision of the Services hereunder, for any losses that may be sustained in the purchase, holding or sale of any security or debt obligation by any Account, or as a result of any activities of the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company or any other adviser to or agent of the Account or any other sub-advisor appointed by the Management Company to provide portfolio management services to any other delegatee of the Management Company or any other person or entity, unless it is determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, to be the result of gross negligence or to constitute fraud or willful misconduct (as interpreted under the laws of the State of Delaware) (each, a "Disabling Conduct") on the part of such Covered Person, (ii) any mistake, gross negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any employee, broker, administrator or other agent or representative of the Sub-Advisor, provided that such employee, broker, administrator or agent was selected, engaged or retained by or on behalf of the Sub-Advisor with reasonable care, or (iii) any consequential (including loss of profit), indirect, special or punitive damages. To the extent that, at law or in equity, any Covered Person has duties (including fiduciary duties) and liabilities relating thereto to any Management Company Related Party, no Covered Person acting under this Agreement shall be liable to such Management Company Related Party for its good-faith reliance on the provisions of this Agreement. The exculpations set forth in this Section 4(b) shall exculpate any Covered Person regardless of such Covered Person's sole, comparative, joint, concurrent, or subsequent negligence.

To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall have any personal liability to any Management Company Related Party solely by reason of any change in U.S. federal, state or local or foreign income tax laws, or in interpretations thereof, as they apply to any such Management Company Related Party, whether the change occurs through legislative, judicial or administrative action.

Any Covered Person in its sole and absolute discretion may consult legal counsel, accountants or other advisers selected by it, and any act or omission taken, or made in good faith by such Person on behalf of the Management Company or in furtherance of the business of the Management Company in good-faith reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel, accountants or other advisers shall be full justification for the act or omission, and to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, no Covered Person shall be liable to any Management Company Related Party in so acting or omitting to act if such counsel, accountants or other advisers were selected, engaged or retained with reasonable care.

(c) Indemnification. The Management Company shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, causes of action (including, but not limited to, strict liability, negligence, statutory violation, regulatory violation, breach of contract, and all other torts and claims arising under common law), demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated, whether currently existing or accruing in the future ("Claims"), that may accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may become involved, as a party or otherwise, or with which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to or arising out of the Services, the activities of the Management Company Related Parties, or activities undertaken in connection with the Management Company Related Parties, or otherwise relating to or arising out of this Agreement, any Management Agreement and/or the Related Documents, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a "Proceeding"), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as "Damages"), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from Disabling Conduct of any Covered Persons. Any Covered Person shall be indemnified under the terms of this Section 4(c) regardless of such Covered Person's sole, comparative, joint, concurrent, or subsequent negligence.

Expenses (including attorneys' fees) incurred by a Covered Person in defense or settlement of any Claim that may be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder shall be advanced by the Management Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of a written undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder. The right of any Covered Persons to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives. Any judgments against the Management Company and/or any Covered Persons in respect of which such Covered Person is entitled to indemnification shall first be satisfied from the assets of the Management Company, including Drawdowns, before such Covered Person is responsible therefor.

Notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement to the contrary, the provisions of this Section 4(c) shall not be construed so as to provide for the indemnification of any Covered Person for any liability (including liability under Federal securities laws which, under certain circumstances, impose liability even on persons that act in good faith), to the extent (but only to the extent) that such indemnification would be in violation of applicable law, but shall be construed so as to effectuate the provisions of this Section 4(c) to the fullest extent permitted by law

(d) Other Sources of Recovery etc. The indemnification rights set forth in Section 4(c) are in addition to, and shall not exclude, limit or otherwise adversely affect, any other indemnification or similar rights to which any Covered Person may be entitled. If and to the extent that other sources of recovery (including proceeds of any applicable policies of insurance or indemnification from any Person in which any Account has an investment) are available to any Covered Person, such Covered Person shall use reasonable efforts to obtain recovery from such other sources before the Company shall be required to make any payment in respect of its indemnification obligations hereunder; provided that, if such other recovery is not available without delay, the Covered Person shall be entitled to such payment by the Management Company and the Management Company shall be entitled to reimbursement out of such other recovery when and if obtained

(e) Rights of Heirs, Successors and Assigns. The indemnification rights provided by Section 4(c) shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of each Covered Person

(f) Reliance. A Covered Person shall incur no liability to any Management Company Related Party in acting upon any signature or writing reasonably believed by him, her or it to be genuine, and may rely in good faith on a certificate signed by an officer of any Person in order to ascertain any fact with respect to such Person or within such Person's knowledge. Each Covered Person may act directly or through his, her or its agents or attorneys.

(g) Rights Under Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Management Company will ensure that the Sub-Advisor is provided substantially similar indemnification and exculpation rights as are afforded to the Management Company in its role as portfolio manager under any future Management Agreement or Related Agreement encompassed within the Services hereunder, and it is expressly acknowledged by the Parties that the Sub-Advisor may not consent to including a Management Agreement and Related Agreements within the scope of this Agreement pursuant to Section 8 if such indemnification and exculpation rights are not reasonably acceptable to it.

5. Limitations on Employment of the Sub-Advisor; Conflicts of Interest.

(a) The services of the Sub-Advisor to the Management Company are not exclusive, and the Sub-Advisor may engage in any other business or render similar or different services to others including, without limitation, the direct or indirect sponsorship or management of other transactions, investment-based accounts or commingled pools of capital, however structured, having investment objectives similar to those of the Management Company or the Accounts. Moreover, nothing in this Agreement shall limit or restrict the right of any manager, partner, officer or employee of the Sub-Advisor to engage in any other business or to devote his or her time and attention in part to any other business, whether of a similar or dissimilar nature to the Management Company or any Account, or to receive any fees or compensation in connection therewith.

(b) So long as this Agreement or any extension, renewal or amendment of this Agreement remains in effect, the Sub-Advisor shall be the only portfolio management sub-advisor for the Management Company. The Sub-Advisor assumes no responsibility under this Agreement other than to render the services called for hereunder. It is understood that directors, officers, employees, members and managers of the Management Company are or may become interested in the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates as directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members, managers or otherwise, and that the Sub-Advisor and directors, officers, employees, partners, stockholders, members and managers of the Sub-Advisor and its Affiliates are or may become similarly interested in the Management Company as members or otherwise.

(c) The Management Company acknowledges that various potential and actual conflicts of interest may exist with respect to the Sub-Advisor as described in the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV Part 2A and as described in Appendix B hereto, and the Management Company expressly acknowledges and agrees to the provisions contained in such Appendix B, as amended from time to time with mutual consent of the Parties.

6. Termination; Survival.

(a) This Agreement may be terminated, in its entirety or with respect to any Management Agreement, at any time without payment of penalty, by the Management Company upon 30 days' prior written notice to the Sub-Advisor.

(b) This Agreement shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated (and, if required thereunder, a successor portfolio manager has been appointed and accepted) or discharged; or (ii) the Management Company is no longer acting as portfolio manager, investment manager or in a similar capacity (whether due to removal, resignation or assignment) under such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements. Upon the termination of this Agreement with respect to any Management Agreement the Management Company shall provide prompt notice thereof to the Sub-Advisor, and Appendix A hereto shall be deemed to be amended by deleting such Management Agreement and the Related Agreements related thereto.

(c) All accrued and unpaid financial and indemnification obligations with respect to any conduct or events occurring prior to the effective date of the termination of this Agreement shall survive the termination of this Agreement.

7. Cooperation with Management Company. The Sub-Advisor shall reasonably cooperate with the Management Company in connection with the Management Company's compliance with its policies and procedures relating to oversight of the Sub-Advisor. Specifically, the Sub-Advisor agrees that it will provide the Management Company with reasonable access to information relating to the performance of Sub-Advisor's obligations under this Agreement.

8. Management Agreements and Related Agreements. The Sub-Advisor's duty to provide Services in connection with any Management Agreement shall not commence until (a) Appendix A to this Agreement has been amended by mutual agreement of the Parties to include such Management Agreement and the related Account, fund and/or account and Related Agreements and (b) the Sub-Advisor acknowledges receipt of such Management Agreement and each Related Agreement. The Sub-Advisor shall not be bound to comply with any amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or any Related Agreement until it has received a copy thereof from the Management Company. No amendment, modification, supplement or waiver to any Management Agreement or Related Agreement that, when applied to the obligations and rights of the Management Company under such Management Agreement or Related Agreement, affects (i) the obligations or rights of the Sub-Advisor hereunder; (ii) the amount of priority of any fees or other amounts payable to the Sub-Advisor hereunder; or (iii) any definitions relating to the matters covered in clause (i) or (ii) above, will apply to the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement unless in each such case the Sub-Advisor has consented thereto in writing (such consent not to be unreasonably withheld or delayed unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its reasonable judgment that such amendment, modification, supplement or waiver could have a material adverse effect on the Sub-Advisor).

9. Amendments; Assignments.

(a) Neither Party may assign, pledge, grant or otherwise encumber or transfer all or any part of its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement, in whole or in part, except (i) as provided in clauses (b) and (c) of this Section 9, without the prior written consent of the other Party and (ii) in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Section 9, the Sub-Advisor may not assign its rights or responsibilities under this Agreement unless (i) the Management Company consents in writing thereto and (ii) such assignment is made in accordance with the Advisers Act and other applicable law.

(c) The Sub-Advisor may, without satisfying any of the conditions of Section 9(a) other than clause (ii) thereof (so long as such assignment does not constitute an assignment within the meaning of Section 202(a)(1) of the Advisers Act), (1) assign any of its rights or obligations under this Agreement to an affiliate; provided that such affiliate (i) has demonstrated ability, whether as an entity or by its principals and employees, to professionally and competently perform duties similar to those imposed upon the Sub-Advisor pursuant to this Agreement and (ii) has the legal right and capacity to act as Sub-Advisor under this Agreement, or (2) enter into (or have its parent enter into) any consolidation or amalgamation with, or merger with or into, or transfer of all or substantially all of its assets to, another entity; provided that, at the time of such consolidation, merger, amalgamation or transfer the resulting, surviving or transferee entity assumes all the obligations of the Sub-Advisor under this Agreement generally (whether by operation of law or by contract) and the other entity is a continuation of the Sub-Advisor in another corporate or similar form and has substantially the same staff; provided, further, that the Sub-Advisor shall deliver ten (10) Business Days' prior notice to the Management Company of any assignment or combination made pursuant to this sentence. Upon the execution and delivery of any such assignment by the assignee, the Sub-Advisor will be released from further obligations pursuant to this Agreement except to the extent expressly provided herein.

10. Advisory Restrictions. This Agreement is not intended to and shall not constitute an assignment, pledge or transfer of any Management Agreement or any part thereof. It is the express intention of the parties hereto that (i) the Services are limited in scope; and (ii) this Agreement complies in all respects with all applicable (A) contractual provisions and restrictions contained in each Management Agreement and each Related Agreement and (B) laws, rules and regulations (collectively, the "Advisory Restrictions"). If any provision of this Agreement is determined to be in violation of any Advisory Restriction, then the Services to be provided under this Agreement shall automatically without action by any person or entity be limited, reduced or modified to the extent necessary and appropriate to be enforceable to the maximum extent permitted by such Advisory Restriction.

11. Records; Confidentiality.

(a) The Sub-Advisor shall maintain or cause to be maintained appropriate books of account and records relating to its services performed hereunder, and such books of account and records shall be accessible for inspection by representatives of the Management Company and its accountants and other agents at any time during normal business hours and upon not less than three (3) Business Days' prior notice; provided, that the Sub-Advisor shall not be obligated to provide access to any non-public information if it in good faith determines that the disclosure of such information would violate any applicable law, regulation or contractual arrangement.

(b) The Sub-Advisor shall follow its customary procedures to keep confidential any and all information obtained in connection with the services rendered hereunder that is either (a) of a type that would ordinarily be considered proprietary or confidential, such as information concerning the composition of assets, rates of return, credit quality, structure or ownership of securities, or (b) designated as confidential obtained in connection with the services rendered by the Sub-Advisor hereunder and shall not disclose any such information to non-affiliated third parties except (i) with the prior written consent of the Management Company, (ii) such information as a rating agency shall reasonably request in connection with its rating of notes issued by an Account or supplying credit estimates on any obligation included in the Portfolios, (iii) in connection with establishing trading or investment accounts or otherwise in connection with effecting transactions on behalf of the Management Company or any Account for which the Management Company serves as portfolio manager, (iv) as required by (A) applicable law or (B) the rules or regulations of any self-regulating organization, body or official having jurisdiction over the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, (v) to its professional advisors (including, without limitation, legal, tax and accounting advisors), (vi) such information as shall have been publicly disclosed other than in known violation of this Agreement or shall have been obtained by the Sub-Advisor on a non-confidential basis, (vii) such information as is necessary or appropriate to disclose so that the Sub-Advisor may perform its duties hereunder, (viii) as expressly permitted in the final offering memorandum or any definitive transaction documents relating to any transaction, or (ix) information relating to performance of the Portfolios as may be used by the Sub-Advisor in the ordinary course of its business. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it is agreed that the Sub-Advisor may disclose without the consent of any Person (1) that it is serving as Sub-Advisor to the Management Company and each Account, (2) the nature, aggregate principal amount and overall performance of the Portfolios, (3) the amount of earnings on the Portfolios, (4) such other information about the Management Company, the Portfolios as is customarily disclosed by Sub-Advisors to management vehicles similar to the Management Company, and (5) the United States federal income tax treatment and United States federal income tax structure of the transactions contemplated by this Agreement and the related documents and all materials of any kind (including opinions and other tax analyses) that are provided to them relating to such United States federal income tax treatment and United States income tax structure. This authorization to disclose the U.S. tax treatment and tax structure does not permit disclosure of information identifying the Sub-Advisor, the Management Company, the Accounts or any other party to the transactions contemplated by this Agreement (except to the extent such information is relevant to U.S. tax structure or tax treatment of such transactions).

12. Notice. Any notice or demand to any party to this Agreement to be given, made or served for any purposes under this Agreement shall be given, made or served by sending the same by overnight mail, facsimile or email transmission or by delivering it by hand as follows (or to such other address, email address or facsimile number as shall have been notified to the other parties hereto):

13. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of Texas. The parties unconditionally and irrevocably consent to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts located in the State of Texas and waive any objection with respect thereto, for the purpose of any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the transactions contemplated hereby.

14. WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL. EACH OF THE PARTIES HERETO HEREBY KNOWINGLY, VOLUNTARILY AND INTENTIONALLY WAIVES ANY RIGHTS IT MAY HAVE TO A TRIAL BY JURY WITH RESPECT TO ANY LITIGATION BASED HEREON, OR ARISING OUT OF, UNDER, OR IN CONNECTION WITH, THIS AGREEMENT. EACH PARTY HERETO ACKNOWLEDGES AND AGREES THAT IT HAS RECEIVED FULL AND SUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION FOR THIS PROVISION AND THAT THIS PROVISION IS A MATERIAL INDUCEMENT FOR ITS ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT.

15. Severability. The provisions of this Agreement are independent of and severable from each other, and no provision shall be affected or rendered invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part. Upon such determination that any term or other provision is invalid, illegal or incapable of being enforced, the parties hereto shall negotiate in good faith to modify this Agreement so as to effect the original intent of the parties.

16. No Waiver. The performance of any condition or obligation imposed upon any party hereunder may be waived only upon the written consent of the parties hereto. Such waiver shall be limited to the terms thereof and shall not constitute a waiver of any other condition or obligation of the other party under this Agreement. Any failure by any party to this Agreement to enforce any provision shall not constitute a waiver of that or any other provision or this Agreement.

17. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts by facsimile or other written form of communication, each of which shall be deemed to be an original as against any party whose signature appears thereon, and all of which shall together constitute one and the same instrument. This Agreement shall become binding when one or more counterparts hereof, individually or taken together, shall bear the signatures of all of the parties reflected hereon as the signatories.

18. Third Party Beneficiaries. Nothing in this Agreement will be construed to give any person or entity other than the parties to this Agreement, the Accounts and any person or entity with indemnification rights hereunder any legal or equitable right, remedy, or claim under or with respect to this Agreement or any provision of this Agreement. Except as provided in the foregoing sentence, this Agreement and all of its provisions and conditions are for the sole and exclusive benefit of the parties to this Agreement and their successors and assigns.

19. No Partnership or Joint Venture. Nothing set forth in this Agreement shall constitute, or be construed to create, an employment relationship, a partnership or a joint venture between the parties. Except as expressly provided herein or in any other written agreement between the parties, no party has any authority, express or implied, to bind or to incur liabilities on behalf of, or in the name of, any other party.

20. Entire Agreement. This Agreement, together with each Management Agreement and Related Agreement, constitutes the entire agreement of the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and undertakings, both written and oral, between the parties with respect to such subject matter.

APPENDIX B

Purchase and Sale Transactions; Brokerage

The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates may acquire or sell obligations or securities, for its own account or for the accounts of its clients, without either requiring or precluding the acquisition or sale of such obligations or securities for the account of any Account. Such investments may be the same or different from those made by or on behalf of the Management Company or the Accounts.

Additional Activities of the Sub-Advisor

Nothing herein shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its clients, its partners, its members, funds or other investment accounts managed by it or any of its affiliates, or their employees and their affiliates (collectively, the "Related Entities"), from engaging in other businesses, or from rendering services of any kind to the Management Company, its affiliates, any Account or any other Person or entity regardless of whether such business is in competition with the Management Company, its affiliates, such Account or otherwise. Without limiting the generality of the Sub-Advisor and its Related Entities may:

(a) serve as managers or directors (whether supervisory or managing), officers, employees, partners, agents, nominees or signatories for the Management Company or any affiliate thereof, or for any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio assets or any affiliate thereof, to the extent permitted by their respective organizational documents and underlying instruments, as from time to time amended, or by any resolutions duly adopted by the Management Company, any Account, their respective affiliates or any obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio assets (or any affiliate thereof) pursuant to their respective organizational documents;

(b) receive fees for services of whatever nature rendered to the obligor or issuer in respect of any of the Portfolio Assets or any affiliate thereof;

(c) be retained to provide services unrelated to this Agreement to the Management Company, any Account or their respective affiliates and be paid therefor, on an arm's-length basis;

(d) be a secured or unsecured creditor of, or hold a debt obligation of or equity interest in, the Management Company, any Account or any affiliate thereof or any obligor or issuer of any Portfolio asset or any affiliate thereof;

(e) sell any Portfolio asset to, or purchase or acquire any Portfolio asset from, any Account while acting in the capacity of principal or agent; provided, however, that any such sale or purchase effected by the Sub-Advisor shall be subject to applicable law and any applicable provisions of this Agreement, the related Management Agreement and Related Agreements, as applicable;

(f) underwrite, arrange, structure, originate, syndicate, act as a distributor of or make a market in any Portfolio asset;

(g) serve as a member of any "creditors' board", "creditors' committee" or similar creditor group with respect to any Portfolio asset; or

(h) act as portfolio manager, portfolio manager, investment manager and/or investment adviser or sub-advisor in collateralized bond obligation vehicles, collateralized loan obligation vehicles and other similar warehousing, financing or other investment vehicles.

As a result, such individuals may possess information relating to obligors and issuers of Portfolio assets that is (a) not known to or (b) known but restricted as to its use by the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for monitoring the Portfolio assets and performing the Services under this Agreement. Each of such ownership and other relationships may result in securities laws restrictions on Transactions in such securities by the Management Company and/or any Account and otherwise create conflicts of interest for the Management Company and/or any Account. The Management Company acknowledges and agrees that, in all such instances, the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may in their discretion make investment recommendations and decisions that may be the same as or different from those made by the Management Company with respect to the investments of any Account and they have no duty, in making or managing such investments, to act in a way that is favorable to any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that there are generally no ethical screens or information barriers between the Sub-Advisor and certain of its affiliates of the type that many firms implement to separate Persons who make investment decisions from others who might possess applicable material, non-public information that could influence such decisions. The officers or affiliates of the Sub-Advisor may possess information relating to obligors or issuers of Portfolio Assets that is not known to the individuals at the Sub-Advisor responsible for providing the Services under this Agreement. As a result, the Sub-Advisor may from time to time come into possession of material nonpublic information that limits the ability of the Sub-Advisor to effect a Transaction for the Management Company and/or any Account, and the Management Company and/or such Account's investments may be constrained as a consequence of the Sub-Advisor's inability to use such information for advisory purposes or otherwise to effect Transactions that otherwise may have been initiated on behalf of its clients, including the Management Company and/or such Account.

Unless the Sub-Advisor determines in its sole discretion that a Portfolio investment complies with the conflicts of interest provisions set forth in the applicable Management Agreement and Related Agreements, the Sub-Advisor will not direct any Account to acquire or sell loans or securities entered into or issued by (i) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor, any of its affiliates or any of its officers, directors or employees are directors or officers, (ii) Persons of which the Sub-Advisor or any of its respective affiliates act as principal or (iii) Persons about which the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates have material non-public information which the Sub-Advisor deems would prohibit it from advising as to the trading of such securities in accordance with applicable law.

It is understood that the Sub-Advisor and any of its affiliates may engage in any other business and furnish investment management and advisory services to others, including Persons which may have investment policies similar to those followed by the Management Company with respect to the Portfolio assets and which may own securities or obligations of the same class, or which are of the same type, as the Portfolio assets or other securities or obligations of the obligors or issuers of the Portfolio assets. The Sub-Advisor and its affiliates will be free, in their sole discretion, to make recommendations to others, or effect Transactions on behalf of themselves or for others, which may be the same as or different from those effected with respect to the Collateral. Nothing in this Agreement, in the Management Agreements or in the Related Agreements shall prevent the Sub-Advisor or any of its affiliates, acting either as principal or agent on behalf of others, from buying or selling, or from recommending to or directing any other account to buy or sell, at any time, securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same obligor or issuer, as those directed by the Sub-Advisor to be purchased or sold on behalf of an Account. It is understood that, to the extent permitted by applicable law, the Sub-Advisor, its Related Entities, or any of their owners, directors, managers, officers, stockholders, members, partners, partnership committee members, employees, agents or affiliates or the other Covered Persons or any member of their families or a Person or entity advised by the Sub-Advisor may have an interest in a particular transaction or in securities or obligations of the same kind or class, or securities or obligations of a different kind or class of the same issuer, as those that may be owned or acquired by an Account. The Management Company agrees that, in the course of providing the Services, the Sub-Advisor may consider its relationships with other clients (including obligors and issuers) and its affiliates.

The Management Company agrees that neither the Sub-Advisor nor any of its affiliates is under any obligation to offer any investment opportunity of which they become aware to the Management Company or any Account or to account to the Management Company or any Account for (or share with the Management Company or any Account or inform the Management Company or any Account of) any such transaction or any benefit received by them from any such transaction. The Management Company understands that the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may have, for their own accounts or for the accounts of others, portfolios with substantially the same portfolio criteria as are applicable to the Accounts. Furthermore, the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates may make an investment on behalf of any client or on their own behalf without offering the investment opportunity or making any investment on behalf of the Management Company or any Account and, accordingly, investment opportunities may not be allocated among all such clients. The Management Company acknowledges that affirmative obligations may arise in the future, whereby the Sub-Advisor and/or its affiliates are obligated to offer certain investments to clients before or without the Sub-Advisor offering those investments to the Management Company or any Account.

The Management Company acknowledges that the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates may make and/or hold investments in an obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities that may be pari passu, senior or junior in ranking to an investment in such obligor's or issuer's obligations or securities made and/or held by the Management Company or any Account, or in which partners, security holders, members, officers, directors, agents or employees of the Sub-Advisor and its affiliates serve on boards of directors, or otherwise have ongoing relationships or otherwise have interests different from or adverse to those of the Management Company and the Accounts.

Defined Terms

For purposes of this Appendix B, the following defined terms shall have the meanings set forth below:

"Portfolio" shall mean, with respect to any Account, the assets held by or in the name of the Account or any subsidiary of the Account in respect of such Transaction, whether or not for the benefit of the related secured parties, securing the obligations of such Account.

"Transaction" shall mean any action taken by the Sub-Advisor on behalf of any Account with respect to the Portfolio, including, without limitation, (i) selecting the Portfolio assets to be acquired by the Account, (ii) investing and reinvesting the Portfolio, (iii) amending, waiving and/or taking any other action commensurate with managing the Portfolio and (iv) instructing the Account with respect to any acquisition, disposition or tender of a Portfolio asset or other assets received in respect thereof in the open market or otherwise by the Account.

PAYROLL REIMBURSEMENT AGREEMENT

THIS PAYROLL REIMBURSEMENT AGREEMENT (this "Agreement") entered into on this 1st day of May, 2018 by and among Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("HCMLP"), and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("HCMFA"), and any affiliate of HCMFA that becomes a party hereto, is effective as of January 1, 2018 (the "Effective Date"). Each of the signatories hereto is individually a "Party" and collectively the "Parties".

RECITALS

A. During the Term, HCMLP will seek reimbursement from HCMFA for the cost of certain employees who are dual employees of HCMLP and HCMFA and who provide advice to registered investment companies advised by HCMFA under the direction and supervision of HCMFA as more fully described in this Agreement.

AGREEMENT

In consideration of the foregoing recitals and the mutual covenants and conditions contained herein, the Parties agree, intending to be legally bound, as follows:

ARTICLE I
DEFINITIONS

"Actual Cost" means, with respect to any period hereunder, the actual costs and expenses caused by, incurred or otherwise arising from or relating to each Dual Employee, in each case during such period. Absent any changes to employee reimbursement, as set forth in Section 2.02, such costs and expenses are equal to $416,000 per month.

"Affiliate" means a Person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls, or is controlled by, or is under common control with, a specified Person. The term "control" (including, with correlative meanings, the terms "controlled by" and "under common control with") means the possession of the power to direct the management and policies of the referenced Person, whether through ownership interests, by contract or otherwise.

"Agreement" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Allocation Percentage" has the meaning set forth in Section 3.01.

"Dual Employee" has the meaning set forth in Section 2.01.

"Effective Date" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Party" or "Parties" has the meaning set forth in the preamble.

"Person" means an association, a corporation, an individual, a partnership, a limited liability company, a trust or any other entity or organization.

"Tax" or "Taxes" means: (i) all state and local sales, use, value-added, gross receipts, foreign, privilege, utility, infrastructure maintenance, property, federal excise and similar levies, duties and other similar tax-like charges lawfully levied by a duly constituted taxing authority against or upon the Shared

Services and the Shared Assets; and (ii) tax-related surcharges or fees that are related to the Shared Services and the Shared Assets identified and authorized by applicable tariffs.

ARTICLE II
EMPLOYEE REIMBURSEMENT

Section 2.01 Employee Reimbursement. During the Term, HCMFA shall reimburse HCMLP for the Actual Cost to HCMLP of certain employees who (i) are dual employees of HCMLP and HCMFA and (ii) provide advice to any investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act") pursuant to an investment advisory agreement between HCMFA and such investment company (each, a "Fund") under the direction and supervision of HCMFA (each, a "Dual Employee").

Section 2.02 Changes to Employee Reimbursement. During the Term, the Parties may agree to modify the terms and conditions of HCMFA's reimbursement in order to reflect new procedures or processes, including modifying the Allocation Percentage (defined below) applicable to such Dual Employee to reflect the then current fair market value of such Dual Employee's employment. The Parties will negotiate in good faith the terms of such modification.

ARTICLE III
COST ALLOCATION

Section 3.01 Actual Cost Allocation Formula. The Actual Cost of any Dual Employee relating to the investment advisory services provided to a Fund shall be allocated based on the Allocation Percentage. For purposes of this Agreement, "Allocation Percentage" means the Parties' good faith determination of the percentage of each Dual Employee's aggregate hours worked during a quarter that were spent on HCMFA matters, as listed on Exhibit A.

ARTICLE IV
PAYMENT OF COST AND REVENUE SHARE; TAXES

Section 4.01 Settlement Payments. At any time during the Term, HCMFA may make payment of the amounts that are allocable to it.

Section 4.02 Determination and Payment of Cost. HCMFA shall promptly make payment of the Actual Cost within ten (10) days of the end of each calendar month. Should either Party determine that a change to employee reimbursement is appropriate, as set forth in Section 2.02, the Party requesting the modification shall notify the other Party on or before the last business day of the calendar month.

Section 4.03 Taxes.

(a) HCMFA is responsible for and will pay all Taxes applicable to it, provided, that such payments by HCMFA to HCMLP will be made in the most tax-efficient manner and provided further, that HCMLP will not be subject to any liability for Taxes applicable to the cost of a Dual Employee of HCMFAas a result of such payment by HCMFA. HCMLP will collect such Tax from HCMFA in the same manner it collects such Taxes from other customers in the ordinary course of its business, but in no event prior to the time it invoices HCMFA for costs for which such Taxes are levied. HCMFA may provide HCMLP with a certificate evidencing its exemption from payment of or liability for such Taxes.

(b) HCMFA will reimburse HCMLP for any Taxes collected from HCMLP and refunded to HCMFA. In the event a Tax is assessed against HCMFA that is solely the responsibility of HCMLP and HCMLP desires to protest such assessment, HCMLP will submit to HCMFA a statement of the issues and arguments requesting that HCMFA grant HCMLP the authority to prosecute the protest in HCMFA's name. HCMFA's authorization will not be unreasonably withheld. HCMLP will finance, manage, control and determine the strategy for such protest while keeping HCMFA reasonably informed of the proceedings. However, the authorization will be periodically reviewed by HCMFA to determine any adverse impact on HCMFA, and HCMFA will have the right to reasonably withdraw such authority at any time. Upon notice by HCMFA that it is so withdrawing such authority, HCMLP will expeditiously terminate all proceedings. Any adverse consequences suffered by HCMLP as a result of the withdrawal will be submitted to litigation pursuant to Section 6.14. Any contest for Taxes brought by HCMLP may not result in any lien attaching to any property or rights of HCMFA or otherwise jeopardize HCMFA's interests or rights in any of its property.

(c) The provisions of this Section 4.03 will govern the treatment of all Taxes arising as a result of or in connection with this Agreement notwithstanding any other Article of this Agreement to the contrary.

ARTICLE V
TERM AND TERMINATION

Section 5.01 Term. If the Debtor objects to this Proof of Claim, CLO reserves the right to produce additional documents and facts as necessary to support its claim. CLO also reserves the right to file a motion for relief from stay or other pleading to enforce its right to the proceeds of certain funds in which CLO owns a participation or tracking interest.

Exhibit A

NexPoint Capital, Inc. ("Claimant") may have a claim against the Debtor related to its rights under a Backstop Agreement, Joinder Agreement, and a Purchase and Sale Agreement with respect to 750,000 shares of American BankNote Corporation ("ABC"). Under the agreements, Claimant purchased shares from ABC and/or its selling shareholders. After Claimant purchased 700,000 shares of ABC, Claimant also was entitled to receive a fee of an additional 50,000 shares for a total of 750,000 shares. However, ABC's agent mistakenly recorded the shares in the Debtor's name rather than in the name of Claimant. Accordingly, Claimant may have a claim against the Debtor related to Claimant's rights under these agreements and the purchased shares. Claimant has requested information from the Debtor to ascertain the exact amount of its claim. This process is on-going. Additionally, this process has been delayed due to the outbreak of the Coronavirus. Claimant is continuing to work to ascertain the exact amount of its claim and will update its claim in the next ninety days.

James Dondero ("Claimant") was a limited partner in the Debtor in 2008. Debtor's tax return for 2008 is being audited and as a result the partnership and/or general partner may be liable to the limited partners. In addition, for certain years during the period from 2004 through 2018, the Debtor did not make tax distributions to its limited partners, which may give rise to claim(s) against the Debtor. Certain of these limited partners were trusts which are or may be treated "pass-through" entities for tax purposes, with taxes to be paid by the trust grantor. Claimant may be entitled to the economic benefit of the tax distributions payable by the Debtor to such trusts, including, but not limited to, The Dugaboy Investment Trust, the Get Good Trust, the Get Good Non-Exempt Trust No. 1, the Get Good Non-Exempt Trust No. 2, the Get Better Trust, the Canis Major Trust, and the Canis Minor Trust. Accordingly, Claimant may have a claim against the Debtor. Claimant has requested information from the Debtor to ascertain the exact amount of his claim. This process is on-going. Additionally, this process has been delayed due to the outbreak of the Coronavirus. Claimant is continuing to work to ascertain the exact amount of his claim and will update his claim in the next ninety days.

ATTACHMENT TO PROOF OF CLAIM

This attachment supplements the accompanying Proof of Claim (Official Form 410) and is hereby expressly incorporated into Official Form 410 as if set forth fully therein (collectively, the "Proof of Claim").

NexVest, LLC, (the "Claimant") files this Proof of Claim against Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor"). Claimant holds a promissory note dated September 21, 2018, payable by HCRE Partners, LLC ("HCRE") in the original face amount of $44,719,991.57 (the "HCRE Note") scheduled to mature on September 21, 2020 (The "Maturity Date"). Claimant files this Proof of Claim in an abundance of caution to preserve and assert any claim or cause of action Claimant has or may have against Debtor regarding any action, omission or inaction by Debtor, or any party acting for or on behalf of Debtor, that impacts, impairs or delays Claimant's rights and remedies under the HCRE Note, including, without limitation, (i) Claimant's rights to timely collect and receive payment of all amounts due under the HCRE Note, including, without limitation, principal, interest, expenses, costs and fees; (ii) Claimant's rights to pursue or collect against any lien, security interest, pledge or collateral securing any obligation under or related to the HCRE Note; and (iii) Claimant's rights to pursue any claims, causes of action, requests for relief and remedies in contract, law or equity.

Without limiting the forgoing, Claimant expressly reserves any claim, request of relief or cause of action against Debtor for tortious interference of contract, breach of contract, and any other basis in contract, law or equity in any way related to the HCRE Note. This Proof of Claim includes, without limitation, the right to obtain attorneys' fees and defense costs, or other fees, expenses or obligations arising from all legal proceedings or governmental or private investigations/inquiries in which the Claimant may become involved after the filing of this Proof of Claim.

RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

By filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant waives nothing and expressly reserves all rights, claims, privileges, benefits, obligations and defenses, whether at contract, law or equity.

The Claimant reserves, without limitation and to the fullest extent allowed by law, the right to amend, modify, renew, extend, restate and supplement, for any reason, this Proof of Claim, including, but not limited to, the right to amend amounts claimed, to assert any liquidated claim amount upon liquidation, and to reflect any additional or supplement amounts owed to the Claimant.

Without prejudice to the claims filed herein, the Claimant also preserves and asserts all claims entitled to priority under sections 503 and 507 of the Bankruptcy Code, or under any order of the Court.

The Claimant reserves all of its rights, claims and defenses, whether under the Bankruptcy Code or other laws, including as to any claims that may be asserted against the Claimant by the Debtor, its bankruptcy estate, successors and assigns of the Debtor or its bankruptcy estate, any trustee, plan agent or liquidating agent, any creditor, or any other person or entity, including, without limitation, any rights of setoff and recoupment.

By filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not waive, and hereby preserves: (a) any obligation owed to the Claimant; (b) any interests, units or security held by the Claimant or for its benefit; (c) any right or rights of action that the Claimant has or may have against the Debtor, its bankruptcy estate or any other person or persons, including, without limitation, insurers, guarantors and sureties, as applicable; (d) any right to contest the validity, priority or extent of any lien, security interest or right purported to be equal, senior or inferior to any right of the Claimant; and (e) any and all rights and remedies at law or in equity available to the Claimant against the Debtor and any of its respective affiliates or subsidiaries, or any other person or entity.

The filing of this Claim shall not constitute: (i) a waiver, release or limitation of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property; (ii) a waiver, release or limitation of any rights, remedies, claims or interest of the Claimant, including without limitation, all rights and claims under sections 502 and 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, as applicable; (iii) a consent by the Claimant to the jurisdiction or venue of this Court or any other court with respect to the proceedings, if any, commenced in any case against or otherwise involving the Claimant with respect to the subject matter of the claims set forth in this Proof of Claim, any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect thereto or any other proceeding commenced against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (iv) a waiver, release or limitation of the right of the Claimant to trial by jury in any proceeding as to any and all matters so triable herein, whether or not the same be designated legal or private rights or in any case, controversy or proceeding related thereto, notwithstanding the designation or not of such matters as "core proceedings" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2), and whether such jury trial right is pursuant to statute or the U.S. Constitution; (v) a consent by the Claimant to a jury trial in this Court or any other court in any proceeding as to any and all matters so triable herein or in any case, controversy or proceeding related hereto, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(e) or otherwise; (vi) a waiver, release or limitation of the Claimant's right to have any and all final orders in any matters or proceedings entered only after de novo review by a United States District Court Judge; (vii) a waiver of the right to move to withdraw the reference with respect to the subject matter of this Proof of Claim, any objection thereto or other proceeding which may be commenced against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (viii) a consent to the determination of any liability to Claimant by any particular court, including, without limitation, this Court; (ix) a consent to the final determination or adjudication of any claim or right pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(c); (x) an election of remedies; or (xi) a waiver or release of the Claimant's rights against any third party.

SUPPORTING DOCUMENTS

Documents referenced in support of the Proof of Claim will be made available either through providing a copy to the appropriate requesting persons or entities, or these documents shall be made available for inspection and copying during normal business hours at a mutually convenient location. Any request for such documents should be directed towards the Claimant's counsel as set forth in Form 410.

EXHIBIT "A"

Hunter Mountain Trust (HMT) is the obligor under an original $63,000,000 Secured Promissory Note that HMT entered into with Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") as payee on or after December 21, 2015 (the "Secured Contribution Note") pursuant to the terms and conditions of the Contribution Agreement of even date where HMT made a cash contribution of $7,000,000 and issued the Secured Contribution Note for the balance of the $70,000,000 obligation detailed in the Contribution Agreement.

Just prior to the Petition Date, as of September 30, 2020, HMT was obligated to the Debtor in the amount of $56,873,209, with interest accruing thereafter with subsequently scheduled principal payments until the Secured Contribution Note comes due by its terms.

The amount of the claim stated on the proof of claim form ($60,298,739) is the maximum balance due by HMT to Debtor per the amortization schedule attached hereto if the Priority Distributions were timely made.

Notwithstanding denoting this amount as the maximum, the indemnity protect HMT from and against, any and all losses incurred or sustained by, or imposed upon it by virtue of the Debtor's failure to perform and such listed amount may necessarily increase over the stated amount in the proof of claim.

Pursuant to Section 6.02 of the Contribution Agreement (which caused the Secured Contribution Note to be executed and the cash contribution to be made) the Debtor (identified as the Partnership in the Contribution Agreement) agreed to indemnify HMT (identified as Contributor in the Contribution Agreement) as follows:

> Section 6.02 Indemnification By the Partnership. Subject to the other terms and conditions of this Article VI, the Partnership shall indemnify and defend Contributor and its trustees, sponsors, administrators, grantors, officers, directors, managers, Affiliates, beneficiaries, shareholders, members, partners, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Contributor Indemnified Parties") against, and shall hold the Contributor Indemnified Parties harmless from and against, any and all Losses incurred or sustained by, or imposed upon, any Contributor Indemnified Parties based upon, arising out of, with respect to or by reason of:
> (a) any inaccuracy in or breach of any of the representations or warranties of the Partnership contained in this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party;
> (b) any breach or non-fulfillment of any covenant, agreement or obligation to be performed by the Partnership pursuant to this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party; and

(c) any and all actions, suits, proceedings, claims, demands and Losses incident to any of the foregoing or incurred in attempting to oppose the imposition thereof, or in enforcing this indemnity. [emphasis added]

While there are limitations on this indemnity, as detailed in Section 6.05, those limitations do not affect HMT's claim for indemnity for the Debtor's existing or future failures to address its obligation to make Priority Distributions to HMT as detailed first in the Third Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Highland Capital Management, L.P. dated December 21, 2015 attached to the Contribution Agreement (all of which were retained in the Fourth Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Highland Capital Management, L.P. dated December 24, 2015 – referenced in the Debtor's Schedule G):

3.9 (b) Priority Distributions. Prior to the distribution of any amounts to Partners pursuant to Section 3.9(a), and notwithstanding any other provision in this Agreement to the contrary, the Partnership shall make the following distributions ("Priority Distributions") pro-rata among the Class B Partners[1] in accordance with their relative Percentage Interests:

(i) No later than March 31st of each calendar year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to $1,600,000.00;

(ii) No later than March 31st of each year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to three percent (3%) of the Partnership's investment gain for the prior year, as reflected in the Partnership's books and records within ledger account number 90100 plus three percent (3%) of the gross realized investment gains for the prior year of Highland Select Equity Fund, as reflected in its books and records; and

(iii) No later than March 31st of each year, commencing March 31, 2017, an amount equal to ten percent (10%) of the Partnership's Operating Cash Flow for the prior year.

(iv) No later than December 24th of each year, commencing December 2016, an amount equal to the aggregate annual principal and interest payments on the Purchase Notes for the then current year.

4.2 (e) Default on Priority Distributions. If the Partnership fails to timely pay Priority Distributions pursuant to Section 3.9(b), and the Partnership does not subsequently make such Priority Distribution within ninety days of its due date, the Class B Limited Partner may require the Partnership to liquidate publicly traded securities held by the Partnership or Highland Select Equity Master Fund, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership controlled by the Partnership; provided, however, that the General Partner may in its sole discretion elect instead to liquidate other non-publicly traded securities owned by the Partnership in order to satisfy the Partnership's obligations under Section 3.9(b) and this Section 4.2(e). In either case, Affiliates of the General Partner shall have the right of first offer to purchase any securities liquidated under this Section 4.2(e).

[1] HMT is the sole Class B Partner

With regard to missed Priority Distributions and Priority Distributions that likely will not occur hereinafter, HMT claims the maximum benefit available to it on account of the Indemnity referenced in Section 6.02 of the Contribution Agreement, with regard to the Debtor's obligation to fund Priority Distributions per the Fourth Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership, an "agreement or obligation to be performed by the Partnership pursuant to this Agreement or any of the other agreements contemplated hereby to which the Partnership is a party."

Pursuant to Section 6.05 (e) of the Contribution Agreement HMT's remedy is subject to the following restriction where Partnership is the Debtor and HMT is an Indemnified Party:

> (e) Subject to the limitations in this Section 6.05, any indemnification obligation of the Partnership under Section 6.02 shall not be payable to the Indemnified Party in cash, but shall instead be satisfied by a reduction in the principal balance of the Contribution Note for the amount of such indemnification obligation.

This provision of the Contribution Agreement, HMT, asserts, functionally sets up a contractual right of set off as to any claim by the Debtor under the Secured Contribution Note in addition to any common law right of set off which HMT may have as against any claims by the Debtor with regard to the any obligations due under the Secured Contribution Note.

Complete copies of documents supporting this proof of claim are available from counsel for HMT upon request.

HMT reserves the right to file an additional or further amended claim regarding this independent obligation, should the Fourth Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Highland Capital Management, L.P., be rejected at some later date, pursuant to and consistent with ¶7 of the Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates For Filing Claims And (Ii) Approving The Form And Manner Of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488].
